Preface

The House Select Committee to Investigate Covert Arms Transactions with Iran and the Senate Select Committee on Secret Military Assistance to Iran and the Nicaraguan Opposition, under authority contained in the resolutions establishing them (H. Res. 12 and S. Res. 23, respectively), deposed approximately 290 individuals over the course of their 10-month joint investigation.

The use of depositions enabled the Select Committees to take sworn responses to specific interrogatories, and thereby to obtain information under oath for the written record and develop lines of inquiry for the public hearings.

Select Committees Members and staff counsel, including House minority counsel, determined who would be deposed, then sought subpoenas from the Chairmen of the Select Committees, when appropriate, to compel the individuals to appear in nonpublic sessions for questioning under oath. Many deponents received separate subpoenas ordering them to produce certain written documents.

Members and staff traveled throughout the United States and abroad to meet with deponents. All depositions were stenographically reported or tape-recorded and later transcribed and duly authenticated. Deponents had the right to review their statements after transcription and to suggest factual and technical corrections to the Select Committees.

At the depositions, deponents could assert their fifth amendment privilege to avoid self-incrimination by refusing to answer specific questions. They were also entitled to legal representation. Most Federal Government deponents were represented by lawyers from their agency; the majority of private individuals retained their own counsel.

The Select Committees, after obtaining the requisite court orders, granted limited or "use" immunity to about 20 deponents. Such immunity means that, while a deposed individual could no longer invoke the fifth amendment to avoid answering a question, his or her compelled responses—or leads or collateral evidence based on those responses—could not be used in any subsequent criminal prosecution of that individual, except a prosecution for perjury, giving a false statement, or otherwise failing to comply with the court order.

An executive branch Declassification Committee, located in the White House, assisted the Committee by reviewing each page of deposition transcript and some exhibits and identifying classified matter relating to national security. Some depositions were not reviewed or could not be declassified for security reasons.

In addition, members of the House Select Committee staff corrected obvious typographical errors by hand and deleted personal and proprietary information not considered germane to the investigation.

In these Depositions volumes, some of the deposition transcripts are followed by exhibits. The exhibits—documentary evidence—were developed by Select Committees' staff in the course of the Select Committees' investigation or were provided by the deponent in response to a subpoena. In some cases, where the number of exhibits was very large, the House Select Committee staff chose for inclusion in the Depositions volumes selected documents. All of the original exhibits are stored with the rest of the Select Committees' documents with the National Archives and Records Administration and are available for public inspection subject to the respective rules of the House and Senate.

The 27 volumes of the Depositions appendix, totalling more than 30,000 pages, consist of photocopies of declassified, hand-corrected typewritten transcripts and declassified exhibits. Deponents appear in alphabetical order.

In there was a picture of a soldier putting his boot on, stuck in a case of ammunition, empty case of ammunities.

A Because of the color of case, type of case it was, it was small arms ammunitions case, 7.62 millimeter ammo case. On the side of the case was printed in big letters, "CIA, Montreal, Canada."

- A Century International Arms, Montreal, Canada.

PROCEEDINGS

(1:30 p.m.)

Whereupon,

LTG VINCENT M. RUSSO

was called as a witness and, after being first duly sworn, was examined and testified, as follows:

EXAMINATION BY COUNSEL:

BY MR. SAXON:

- Q. $11 right, sir; if you would state your name for the record?
 - A. Vincent M. Russo.
 - Q. And what is your occupation, sir?
 - A. I'm a U.S. Army officer.
 - Q. What is your rank?
 - A. Lieutenant General.
 - Q. And what is your current assignment?
 - A. Director of the Defense Logistics Agency.
 - Q. And when did you assume that position?
 - A. 9 July 1986.
- Q. And immediately prior to that assignment what
- were you doing?
 - A. I was the Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics at the headquarters, Department of the Army.
 - Q. And would I be correct in saying that all of the period that we should be concerned with would involve your time in that assignment?

A. Until 9 July, yes.

MR. SAXON: All right, sir, let me say fromthe outset, first of all: That when I refer to the fact, that we may have met before or that you have told us certain things in the interview, I have in mind the fact that three members of the Senate staff met with you on April 8th, 1987 in your office at DLA. So for subsequent readers of this record, if I say you told us on such and such a date, sir, that's what I have reference to.

WITNESS: Okav.

BY MR. SAXON:

q

Q. Before having you walk through the chronology of your involvement with what became project Snowball and project Crocus; I want to ask you some specific questions to try to get on the record your knowledge, your understanding and what may have passed from you to certain people or from them to you.

Let me ask you first of all:

General Russo, at any time when you were involved with TOWs and Hawk missile repair parts, did you know the ultimate destination was going to be Iran?

- A. No, no.
- Q. You did know the destination was to be the

UNCLASSIFIED

CIA; is that correct, sir?

- A. Absolutely
- "Q. If you had known that the destination was to be Iran; would that have affected in anyway what you -did?
 - A. I don't believe so.
 - Q. And why would that be, sir?
- A. Well, I guess it was the faith and confidence that I had for General Thurman.
- Q. That would be General Maxwell Thurman, the Vice Chief of Staff of the Army?
- A. Yes, and if I might just elaborate on that for a moment. In the connection of the overall intelligence/black community or black work, in my position as the Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, I had been aware of and had participated in a number of meetings, stretching back . . . oh, I would say, into the early 1985 period.

And during that period of time, General Thurman, through his actions and directions, had indicated to me a very strong sense of commitment to doing what was right in this area -- which heretofore, perhaps, the Army had not the best record in the world of doing it that way.

And so he laid the things into existence to tighten up that whole process of doing what was correct; what was proper from not only a Department of Defense, but from a nation's standpoint. So it's from that perspective.

Q. And just for the record, would you have in mind the fact that the Yellow Fruit scandal had broken and that General Thurman was overseeing the investigation, more or less into Yellow Fruit?

A. Yes, and without knowing the details of Yellow Fruit.

- Q. And that the was
 - A. Yes.
- Q. And the Army's System tightened up?
 - A. Yes, absoultely.
- Q. I should ask by the way General Russo, in your position as Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Logisitics, to whom did you report?
 - A. General Register.
 - Q. General Benjamin F. Register?
- A. Yes, the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics of the Army.
- Q. Returning to the questions which I indicated from the outset I would ask you. To your knowledge was the legality of Snowball or Crocus ever questioned?

UNCLASSIFIED

A. No, it was not. The notification process was questioned from an Army perspective, but whether that implied with it the legal question or not; I really can't answer.

Q. General, I believe we've got a pretty good explanation on the record from several witnesses thus far, of the Army's System so I'm not going to ask you to walk us through that in great detail.

But let me simply ask you, would I be correct in saying that the TOW missile shipments to Iran and the Hawk repair parts shipments to Iran bypassed the Army's System?

- A. Yes, they did.
- Q. In your capacity as the Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics are you aware of any other transfers which have bypassed the System, other than Snowball and Crocus?
 - A. No.
- Q. As you well know, sir, there's been a lot of controversy about the price of a TOW missile, and we'll get into some of that later and the minutia of it; and I imagine, you're probably tired of being asked about that. But let me go to sort of the bottom line question and ask you, sir:

. Were you ever in a situation where you felt pressure was being put on you to reduce the price that the Army should otherwise have charged? or in anyway come up with a low price, that in anyway would have been inappropriate or unjustifiable?

- A. Not at all. As a matter of fact, the pressure, if any, would have been to increase the price.
 - Q. And how would that be, sir?
- A. Through indications that Simpson would tell me from time to time.
- Q. That would be Major Christopher Simpson, the action officer on this?
- A. Yes. That there was concern, particularly, in the Missile Command about the replacement costs for the TOW, which would run up to $8,000 $11,000; and so the pressure was in that direction as opposed to keeping it low or reduce it.
- Q. But, sir, that would have been the pressure that came up the chain from MICOM?
 - A. Yes.

- Q. It was to get a replacement cost, which was higher than the cost the missiles had been purchased for?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. My question really would have been: Was there any pressure from the top, whether it be from General Powell, from the NSC, from the CIA or any other point of origin, on you not to go with whatever price should have been charged?

- A. Yes. No, there was absolutely no pressure, and I would say also, that the only real guy that I dealt with above me was Colin Powell.
- Q. General Russo, did you ever tell General Powell that there was a way to get these missiles cheaper, if the Army wanted to do that? Do you recall any statement to that effect?
- A. We had some discussion about that, and it got into the discussion with regard to the basic missile, and what the basic missile represented. And I think, I mentioned to him that there was a more expensive missile, but that we were not using that more expensive missile. We were using the basic missile.
- Q. So any statements you might have made would have been in that context?
 - A. Yes.

q

- Q. Sir, do you know who first came up with the price of $3,169 for a basic TOW?
- A. I believe it was Chris Simpson, Major Simpson.
- Q. All right, sir, and do you know when you first learned that a basic TOW with MOIC -- M-O-I-C, the Missile Ordnance Inhibitor Circuit, was carried in the Army Master Data File, the A-M-D-F, at a price of $8,435.00?

UNCLASSIF!ED

A. I believe, that was after the investigations began.

- A. Did you ever see any transfer documents going from Anniston Army Depot with the TOW missiles, the basic TOWs with MOIC, to Redstone which reflected a price of $8,435.00?
- A. I did after the investigations began. Excuse me. I don't remember the price being on those documents though, very frankly. I just don't remember but I did see the documents.

 $$\operatorname{MR}.$$ SAXON: It was not on some of them, and on others it was.

WITNESS: Okay.

MR. SAXON: And I believe, my Army colleagues will substantiate that for me.

BY MR. SAXON:

- Q. General Russo, was there ever any discussion in the early days of these transactions or later -- but I don't have in mind after these matters became public -- about these shipments being pursuant to a presidential finding?
- A. Not to my recollection . . . or excuse me.

 Let me just clarify that: I don't remember the discussion on finding coming up or not coming up. It was just a blank. I just didn't hear it mentioned in either direction.

Q. All right, sir. On the issue of Congressional notification and, the Army was quite sensitive of this issue, it arose a number of times. And we will go through some of the particulars of your involvement on that issue, but let me just ask you from your personal standpoint: With whom did you raise the issue of Congressional notification beyond the people, who were below you at the Department of the Army?

A. Well, let me see... I must tell you that I did not initiate that issue. As I recall it, Tom Taylor, and, I don't know if he's a "mister" or a military guy; but he's in the Office of General Counsel of the Army. I believe -- was probably, the guy that started the question of notification going.

And he discussed it, I believe with Major Simpson but, significantly, he discussed it with Miss Crawford. Miss Crawford then sent a memo -- may have followed up on some verbal discussion she had with Secretary Marsh which raised this issue.

And as a consequence of that, the Secretary had a meeting in his office, and which I attended, and at which time he told me to assure that I advised General Powell that he, the Secretary, was very concerned with regard to the Congressional notification requirement.

UNCLASSIFIED

Sue, Miss Crawford, the General Counsel of the Army, had told me that in her opinion the requirement for that notification, was one from the agency to whom we gave the items to as opposed to the Army, directly.

So I did mention that to General Powell, and he assured me that the people that were concerned and responsible for that notification were aware of their responsibilities.

- Q. And, sir, did he tell you who those people were?
 - A. No, he did not.
- Q. And did he ever tell you, anyone in particular, with whom he raised the notification issue?
 - A. No, he did not.
- Q. And did he ever communicate back to you, other than these people were appropriately aware, that anything affirmative or pro-active was happening on the issue of notification?
 - A. No, he did not.

MR. SAXON: Let me go now to the topic of the replenishment of Israeli TOWs. As we now know, the second shipment of 508 TOW missiles was apparently intended to replenish Israeli stocks from an earlier shipment they had provided to Iran.

When did you first become aware of the issue of Israeli TOW replenishment?

- While I was asked the question by several of the folks that were interviewing me.
- So it would be after these matters became public?
 - A. It was after it was published.
- Am I correct in saying, that at no time in your involvement with Snowball and Crocus, did you ever deal with the Israelis?
 - A. That's correct.
- At any time in your involvement with Snowball and Crocus, were you aware that the Israeli government was involved in anyway?
 - A. No.
- Did you ever have any contact with Noel Koch, K-o-c-h, about pricing of TOW missiles?
- I would say a flat-no, on pricing; and secondly, I don't even think I know Koch.
- Did you ever have any involvement with or dealings with Mr. Glen Rudd, the Deputy Director of DSAA with regard to TOW pricing?

 - A. No
 - you ever have any dealings yourself with f the CIA?
 - Yes.
- We will go through that later in whatever way it comes up, as we walk through this chronologically. But for now did ever tell you that he had been at a meeting at the White House on January 18th, 1986 with Admiral Poindexter, Colonel North, Clare George and Stanley Sporken of the CIA to talk about these matters?
 - Not to my recollection.

 - Did he ever tell you that the price of $6,000 for a basic TOW missile was too high?

A. Not that I recall.

- Q. Did he ever tell you to find the oldest TOWs that existed in the warehouse for shipment?
- A. Not that I recall. And you know, I gotta say that there's been a distinction in my testimony so far, between "no" and "not that I recall."

The reason that I'm sort of hedging that, if that's the way to say it, is -- one, my mind is getting faulty but I don't think it's that faulty. But because of the many interviews I got there, obviously, must be another side of the coin. And I would say to you, that I as sort of the other guy: get us both in the same room and let's talk about the same subject at the same time. But, I just can say "not that I recall."

MR. SAXON: For what it's worth, general:
There are, perhaps, more than one other side to this coin as we're all finding out.

And second, we all have the benefit of asking these questions, after the fact, and it is quite difficult to recall in great detail, things which happened a year -- a year-and-a-half ago, particularly, when you had no reason at the time to know you would ever be called to account for every detail.

WITNESS: Yeah.

MR. SAXON: So we understand that problem.

BY MR. SAXON: 1 ever tell you that Colonel 2 North had checked with the Marines on the TOW prices? 3 No. 4 Did you ever have any dealings with 5 with the CIA? 6 ۸. Yea. 7 DIA ever tell you that 8 instructed him, expressly, to avoid in-System? 10 ٨. No. 11 Did ever tell you that the price 12 of $6,000 for a basic TOW missile was too high? 13 14 Did he ever tell you that you should drop the 15 price from whatever level you were looking at, roughly, $6,000 to $3,400.00? 17 No. 18 Did he ever tell you anything that would have 19 caused you to -- yourself, adjust the price from $6,000 20 down to $3,400? 21 No. 22 Q. Were you ever told that the CIA was operating 23 with a set amount of money or that there was a ceiling 24 on how much money they had?

I believe so. I believe if I recall, the number was $25 million. Now where that number comes from, I just don't remember ... I just don't remember.

- Would it be safe to say that it came from one of the individuals at the the agency, with whom you had contact?
 - It either was they or Colin Powell.
- But you -- to the best of your recollection, recall the figure $25 million?
- That's the number that just sticks up in my mind.
- Q. Was that the total amount of money for TOW missiles? for Snowball?
- Yeah, because that's the only project we were working at the time.
- Did you have involvement yourself on the Hawk missile repair parts?
- And did you ever tell concern, of any Army concern, about the readiness impact of providing all of the repair parts which were requested?
- A. I don't think I mentioned that to may have, but I had . . . I'm trying to remember when I on the spare parts. I met even met with

I don't remember whether I met with But I don't know that I would have mentioned to him, except in passing. I might have said, that we've got some problems with some of these. We're below the fifty percent mark on it -- or something like that, but I just don't remember talking to on that.

- Q. Do you recall whether you talked with anyone at the CIA to indicate that there were certain of the items on the list of 234 repair parts requested, which the Army did not want to provide because of the readiness impact?
 - I. I don't think I did that directly.
- Q. Do you have any recollection of someone from the Army making that statement? perhaps, it was Major Simpson to his counterpart at the agency? And then the agency, more or less, overruling the Army and reinstating some items that you didn't want to provide?
- A. I think that Major Simpson may have told them about our concern and our problem. I don't remember them overruling him, in that context.
- Q. Were you ever informed by anyone that the decision to delete the Hawk radars was made by Colonel North?
 - A. No. The decision to delete them?
 - Q. Yes, sir.
- A. Well, we really didn't have them as a requirement. They were outside the 234, if I remember correctly.

 And I remember, either me telling

Yeah, I think I told was off the list and, since it was a major item, that they had to come through with some paper on that one because that sort of bothered me a little bit.

MR. SAXON: Let me see at this point, before we start on the chronology, if Bob or Roger have any points? -- direct follow-up on these questions, and then, if not, we can go forward. And if you do, we might as well get them now.

MR. GENZMAN: Not for me.

BY MR. KREUZER:

- Q. Sir, at some point in time, did you have a discussion with the MICOM commander?
 - A. Yes.
 - Q. About the cost of these TOWs?
 - A. Yes. General Burbules.
- Q. And what did he say to you during that discussion?
- A. Pete, General Burbules mentioned to me his concern -- and now as I recall it -- but he mentioned his concern with regard to the price; that he felt we might be -- or that he might be getting reimbursed for these weapons. And the context of his comment was, that we're selling, if you will, a weapon, and we're having to pay, significantly, more money for its replacement.

And my recollection was that: "Pete, I understand that. However, we're dealing with something called the Economy Act here, where a replacement cost_simply isn't reachable." So I said, "And it's for that reason, that we're using this price for a basic TOW missile."

And that's sort of the extent of my recollection of that discussion. It was a little back and forth, but that's the frame that we were talking in and he was concerned about it.

He said, "Geez, we're giving away one item and having to buy it back -- it's replacement -- at a rather higher and, more significantly, higher cost."

And I was aware at the time -- again, as a function of my position, that the Army had made a decision to buy TOW II missiles and, very frankly, having said that, and the knowledge about what the Economy Act said or didn't say, it was what I relayed to General Burbules and that was the only conversation we had.

- Q. Is it true then, that there was no provision in the Economy Act made for replacement costs for any kinds of items sold?
 - A. That's my understanding and I confirmed that:
 - (a) with General Powell that replacement

costs were not in the equation; and

(2) with Tom Taylor of the General Counsel's Office.

I asked him if the Economy Act, in fact, didapply? And he said 'yeah' as far as he could tell, it did apply. So based on that, that's why I said that the replacement costs were out.

BY MR. SAXON:

- Q. Do I understand your testimony then, general, to be that you understood, initially, that you were using the Economy Act from your discussions with Mr. Taylor in the General Counsel's Office?
- A. It's very fuzzy, timing-wise. General Powell may have told me first, and, it's all in that first week. So I don't remember. It may have been Powell, because he -- he . . . this is sort of an extension but I might as well say it here. General Powell had told me a couple of things:
- (1) He told me that the Secretary, Secretary Weinberger, wanted to be sure that the Army was whole; that the Army didn't lose anything as a function of this project;
- (2) He said that the Secretary wanted to do things consistent with law;
 - (3) He told me about the Economy Act; and
 - (4) He told me about the replacement costs.

UNCLASSIFIED

Now when that happened in time, that first week with the discussion with Taylor, I just don't remember.

- Q. All right, but it's very clear you understood this to be an Economy Act transfer?
 - A. Yes, indeed.
- Q. All right, let us go then to that first discussion --

MR. KREUZER: I'm through with that, except for one other point, and that is:

Was any other avenue, or any other possibility, or acquisition of these missiles discussed? And by that, I mean did they talk about anything other than an Economy Act transfer? Was that at all brought up? like Foreign Military Sales?

A. No, no one mentioned Foreign Military Sales at all. And, normally, you know -- again, going back to my position. We had a number of actions with the agency and they were all Economy Act types of things, and so it didn't come as a surprise that we weren't using FMS because of the way we normally did it was was through the Economy Act.

BY MR SAXON:

Q. General Russo, if you would, now begin at the beginning, and walk us through in terms of your involvement with project Snowball; what happened first?

when it happened? who said what? et cetera, what you did?

A. Now on the 20th of January 1986, when I got in that morning, General Register told me that over weekend, Saturday the 18th, he had been advised by General Thurman, that we had a project ongoing that we were to execute.

The project involved some 4,000 basic, vanilla, TOW missiles that were to be transferred to the agency, to the CIA; and that, we would do so on a very close-hold basis -- a minimum of paper and minimum of people involved. He told me that he had been working that with Major Simpson over the weekend, and that he would be moving around the next couple of weeks and he said, "You might as well take that under your wing."

He said that we anticipate a pretty quick transfer of those, so we need to get down the very detail of how long it would take us to move things around. So with that, I called Major Simpson in and got a debrief as to what he had done so far. I laid out on the chart, what steps needed to be taken to go from the site at Anniston to wherever it was that they would be going to, to include an airlift out of the Redstone Army Airfield.

Q. Had Major Simpson already identified that the

UNCLASSIFIED

TOWs were at Anniston Army Depot?

A. At Anniston, yeah. And so we -- he then compartmented that into how much time it would take to take things out of bunkers, and how much time it would-take to load trucks and transport it to Redstone, off load it and on load it on to some aircraft.

At the time we were thinking about some kind of an airlift. And so we started moving along in that role, and during that first week is when -- that first day, really, I called General Powell to tell him I was the contact for the Army on the project. I called who Powell gave me as being the guy at the agency that was the content and we established secure numbers and all that sort of stuff.

And at this point in time, Simpson was working the action having to do with who, what, when, where, how and why.

- Q. All right, let us stop here and have you go through, as carefully as you can reconstruct it, your conversation with General Powell. Was this on the phone or in someone's office?
- A. The first contact simply was on the phone. I told him I would like to come down and see him. And since I hadn't talked to Colin before that job. He said, "Well, what's this all about?" And and said, "About some project."

- Q. And I don't believe we've said for the record, at the time, he was Major General Colin Powell, and he was the military assistant to Secretary Weinberger; is that correct, sir?
 - A. Yes.
 - Q. All right, continue.
- A. So I went down to see Colin, and told him I was the contact point on the transfer of the TOW missiles. And that's -- as I recall, the time at which he told me about the four points that I had mentioned before. And I talked to and I told that I understood the task, but that I would expect that before we transferred anything that there would be the normal fund citation associated with the project.
- Q. Did you ask General Powell if this was a project, or a tasking, or a requirement passed down from Secretary Weinberger?
 - A. No. I did not.
 - Q. Did he tell you that?
- A. He mentioned that the Secretary was involved and gave me the instructions that he had received from the Secretary, with regard to the Army being kept whole and doing things in accordance with applicable laws.
- Q. At that point or any other, did General Powell tell you that Secretary Weinberger had reservations about this project?

- Did he ever say that Secretary Weinberger thought it was illegal?
 - No.
- Did he ever say that Secretary Weinberger thought some people could go to jail because of this project?
 - A. No.
 - Nothing along those lines ever came up?
- No. He just gave me the two issues that I mentioned:
 - Q. And what happened next?
- Then the ball started to flow, and the telephone lines working between Major Simpson and MICOM, the Missile Command. And it was during the course of the first few days, that we heard about the need to include this MOIC, that we talked about earlier. And the question came up: "What's the cost?" And the answer was $300, and so that seemed to be reasonable so we went ahead with that.
 - When you say "we went ahead with that." Who?
 - I authorized them doing that.
- Did you contact the CIA to tell them that this was going to --
- I told that that's what was happening, and he didn't raise any reservation about the cost at that time.

- And what was the cost being discussed at that point?
- $3,469 -- $3,169 for the basic TOW missile _ and $300 for this MOIC.
- And had there been a period, which we might have skipped over, before you get to the basic TOW at $3,169 plus the MOIC, in which you had given anyone a ball park figure of $6,000?
- Not that I can recall. I may have done that, I doubt it. But in the discussions with Major Simpson, the question came up about the ancillary costs -- the unloading from the bunkers and all of those kinds of things to get it to the airfield, and the loading of the aircraft. And there was some question mark as to how much those would amount to? And we may have come up with some number. It could have been $6,000, I don't recall now, but that's how we could have gotten to that.
- What do you recall being the first figure that you gave, either to General Powell or to anyone at the CIA?
- I would have said $3,169 because it was a day or two after that, that the MOIC issue came up. And the discussion with was that one of us -probably me -- said something. "I understand there's some urgency associated with this," and you know -"When do you think you might be able to tell us to ship?" or "When do you want it shipped?"

And his reaction, generally was, "Well, I'm -- not sure. It's gonna be very soon."

And somewhere in there crept the issue of having to do with, "I'm waiting for the money to be released." Released by whom didn't come up, just "released."

- Q. Did anyone at the agency ever tell you that they were getting the money from the White House for this project?
 - A. No.

- Q. And when any of the issues arose of the MOIC would cost more, or MICOM only had been more for the I-TOW downgrade, et cetera, any time when you were asked to go back to the agency for possibly more money; were you ever told that they would have to go to the White House or the MSC for that decision to be made?
 - A. No.
 - Q. It never came up?
- A. Never came up. So we continued on that week in that dialogue with MICOM. I said "we" -- primarily, Major Simpson; my contact with the fund certification and the date of shipment; some dialogue that I know Simpson had with the Air Force with regard to whether requests had come through for military airlift. In general, getting prepared to make the shipment whenever it was called for.

As I recall the first time that we had a shipment and, I'll refer to these notes here, was the 13th. I think it was of -- excuse me -- the 29th of January and we made all the preparatory moves to do that, to include moving the TOWs over to Redstone.

Simpson physically went down there because the agency wanted to have a transfer action, and it was in our interest to get a piece of paper signed by them at the point of transfer. And so Simpson went down there and, I believe,

did not go --

- Q. Someone from the agency?
- A. Someone from the agency went, and at the last minute that was canceled. Why was it canceled? "Well, we don't have the aircraft." So from there we went into some further discussions with the agency as to -- you know, "Okay, now what?" We kept the missiles there at Redstone, and so we gotta add security guards to them, and we just didn't know when we were going to move them. We thought it was going to be momentarily. It didn't happen, and we finally had to ship them from Anniston as I recall, by truck to the state of t

 The arrangements for that was made by the folks at who had the transportation contacts that we have used before. As I recall, it was that made the move. So that occurred, a thousand missiles moved.

And now during those couple weeks, the question came up that they didn't have enough MOICs to meet the requirement of the agency.

- Q. Which was that the missiles be conditioned code "A" is that correct, sir?
- A. I frankly did not get into the discussion on is it condition code "A" with it, or without, or what the hell. All I knew was that -- that Simpson reported to me, that they did not have the MOICs that we thought they had.

And so a result of that, they came up with a solution which had -- taking off a warhead off another missile, using the missile part of it together with the warheads off of the basic -- the other basic TOW, marry them together, and using those.

- Q. Did the launcher that was going to come from another missile, as I understand it, was to come from the I-TOW; is that correct, sir?
- A. That's the way it ended up being.

 COL WALLACE: But not "launcher." Rocket motor.

MR. SAXON: I'm sorry, "rocket motor." Thank

BY MR. SAXON:

- Q. That had come from the I-TOW; is that correct, sir?
- A. I-TOW. But I need to explain that because that gets into the pricing area a little bit.

I couldn't distinguish between what was the difference -- and that's very fundamental. Because we were talking about a basic TOW missile which consisted to two parts, the motor and the warhead.

And I couldn't get anyone to really describe for me, what was different in that TOW motor, and the different kinds of things that we now understand to be the basic TOW and the I-TOW, with the exception of the MOIC which was $300, we were told, and the extended distance, which later on I found to be worth.

So I said -- and that was where the fundamental issue came up, and, since I haven't seen too many other authenticated documents about this hummer . . I still don't know today what the right cost was of the missile. So it was during that period of time, however, that the question came up. We can't can't meet the requirement unless we take this part of the missile, take the warhead off, substitute the older warhead, and use that to meet the requirement.

- Q. Let me ask you about the pricing question.

 Did MICOM put forward the argument that since the I-TOW motor was being used, rocket motor, and that that's carried in the Army Master Data File at a higher pricabecause the I-TOW costs more than the basic TOW, that they should, therefore, be reimbursed an additional cost for that amount?
- A. They may have, but that argument didn't come to me.
 - Q. It didn't come to you?
- A. It did not come to me. And I would say that the MDF, would not segment that rocket separately. It was complete with the warhead. Very frankly, I thought there was something peculiar about the warhead, that was what was giving it the extra cost because in the other piece of it, there seemed to be no difference except the range and MOIC; the MOIC was $300 and the wire was $20.
- At what point were you made aware that there was a different national stock number for a basic TOW, if it had a MOIC?
- A. Well-after I left the agency, well-after. I would say, it was September or October, or whenever it was that all of this began to bubble up in the DoD.
- Q. So if I understand your testimony, while you were the point of contact for General Powell and for 24 25 26 the Army on a this project, no one ever made you aware of the fact, that if you took a basic TOW and put a MOIC on it, that according to MICOM, that changed the national stock number?

- Yes, that's correct.
- And the price went from $3,169 to --
- Somebody may have said that. Somebody may have said that and I asked them, "Show me how?" we talking about the same item?"

Answer: "Yes."

"Okay. What do we do with it?" "We put a MOIC on it."

I said, "Well, you just told me it cost

"Yeah, that's right."

And I said, "Well, what else have you incurred, that caused you to go to that kind of a number?"

I couldn't get any good answers.

- Q. Did you have a conversation or did you say you might have?
 - I believe, I did have that conversation.
 - And with whom would you have had it?
- I'm not clear. I'm not clear on that. know I had it with Simpson, and I don't remember who else I may have had that coversation with.

Q.	ָסע	you reca.	II eaeL	raising	that	135ue	with yone in	the	agency,	CIA?

- A. No, no. But that was my ... I raised the question, because I know MICOM was raising it through Simpson, that there was an additional cost associated with what you now call 'I-TOW.'
 - Q. Did you raise that with General Powell?
- A. No, I did not. I just felt it was something that I was looking at, and it was within my cognizance to make a judgment on it.

 $\mbox{MR.}$ KREUZER (TO MR. SAXON): You stole most of the thunder, but I do have one remnant left.

BY MR. KREUZER:

- Q. And the remnant being, sir, did anybody ever suggest that, perhaps, in addition to the fact that a new national stock number was created that, perhaps, the improved TOW motor portion was built at a later date? at a time when, per unit costs of hours, manpower and materials were higher?
- A. No, and that's a good point. First, no one ever mentioned the different stock number which -- you know -- I guess, I fault myself but what the hell, that's mine, clearly. But having said that, we didn't go into that distinction about the later productions.

 As a matter of fact, I'm pretty sure I recalled asking, "Is this thing still in production?" The answer was no.

But again we were talking about a basic TOW, and I was under the impression that, we were talking a "basic TOW" without the varieties that I later found -out -- we got, virtually, ten different types of almost basic TOW. So may be it was semantic at that time but I didn't know the difference.

I had understood those as a basic TOW. I thought we were talking about one and I found out later that we weren't talking about one.

MR. SAXON: All right, for clarity of the record, let me indicate that when I talk about the change in the national stook number, I'm confining that discussion to the basic TOW itself; and the fact that if you take a basic TOW, 71A, 71-Alpha and then put a MOIC on it, in the MDF, it apparently becomes a 71A2 with a higher price.

WITNESS: Yes.

MR. SAXON: And that the I-TOW downgrade is a separate issue and I guess, in fact, there would be a different national stock number for a basic TOW and a I-TOW, but that's not what I mean when I say, the change in the stock numbers there.

BY MR. SAXON:

Q. General Russo, were you ever made aware or did you ever have any discussions with anyone, and I guess, particularly, this would have been either

UNCLASSIFIED

General Burbules or Major Simpson, about the computer system that governs pricing and inventory numbers at MICOM, at Redstone, at Anniston Army Depot?

- A. Not during the course of --
- Q. It never came up?
- A. No, sir.
- Q. All right, sir. Where are we in the chronology?
- A. Well, I guess, we just made that first shipment and that was the 13th of Pebruary, and, I guess the next thing on the TOWs was the the continuation of moving some of those new or different rocket launchers, down to Anniston so that they could switch the warheads around.

And I authorized MICOM to spend the money on that with the understanding from I told that we had to do this, in order to come up with the missile that was workable. And so I authorized MICOM. I think we sent them a message that said -- you know, "Go shead and do this and here's the fund cite to use." And they went ahead and began to build the balance of the shipment that we had been asked to make.

And the next part of that, as they were working that, was a requirement for an additional 500, the second shipment and, I must say that during this probably once a week period, I must have called -- I don't know -- asking him, you know, "Where are "What the hell happened to all the furor that we were working this hummer at?"

says, "Well, you know, I'm waiting for the dollars; I'm waiting for the money." And I said, "Well, when are you gonna get it?" He says you know, "Any day now."

- Had you ever been involved in your capacity at DCSLOG with transfers to the CIA before?
 - Yes.
- Had you ever had an incidence in which they were waiting on the money?

 - So you found that unusual?

 - Did you ever ask anybody? what was going on?

- No. I guess, I felt comfortable, that if I asked them they were gonna give me the -- you know, "Don't worry about it; we don't have it" or something like that.
- Did you ever tell them that you wouldn't ship any TOWs, or go forward unless the certification of funds was there?

A. Absolutely, absolutely. I think that was clear from the outset. That while we were talking about minimum paper, I told him, essentially. I used the words "no ticky, no shirty." If they didn't come through with the certification, they weren't going to get the missiles and I needed another piece of paper that said, that they were taking accountability on the transfer.

- Q. Were you made aware by Major Simpson of the reasons for the calling off of the MAC airlift with regard to the first shipment?
 - A. No.
- Q. You knew that it was initially going to go by air to
- A. That was my understanding. I was a little concerned when -- initially, Chris had mentioned to me that he had called his counterpart on the Air Staff that worked those kinds of actions, and he had no --as I recall -- the guy on the Air Staff had no knowledge about the requirement. So that was a concern to me, because time is short, even to support the agency. But I never knew why the aircraft had been called off.
- Q. Did Major Simpson ever tell you that it took some shuffling by MAC to be able to lay on that airlift capability, the first time?
 - A. I don't recall.

UNCLASSIFIED

7 8

- Q. And did he tell you that they were quite upset, that after they did that, and had an opportunity of costs that then the airlift was called off?
 - A. I don't recall.
- Q. Did he ever tell you that for the second shipment, initially, he -- Simpson was told, that they would use the airlift capability and he went to MAC and they, in essence, told him they weren't going to do it?
 - A. I don't recall that.
 - Q. All right. Where next in the chronology?
- A. Well, I guess, the next was the designation to ship on the 19th of May and this came up with 508 and I don't know how the hell, the "508" came up but I've been asked that before.
 - Q. Did you ever ask anyone why that odd number?
- A. No. Sounded screwy, but I didn't ask somebody -- you know, how the hell did you come up with that number? Excuse me.

There was some initial discussion when we were talking about different kinds of air configurations. There was some discussion about topping off the top of the airplane -- of the pallets -- to fit inside of the envelope of the aircraft.

- Q. And who made those comments to you?
- A. I believe, it was Chris -- Major Simpson, I believe.

UNCLASSIFIED

Q. In the beginning, you were told that the shipment would be for 4,000 TOWs; is that correct?

- A. Yes.
- Q. Did there come a time shortly thereafter, when it increased to 4,500?
 - A. Yes, and 4,508.
- Q. So if we're ready then, walk us through the second shipment?
- A. The second shipment, we were given the notification that on the 13th of May it would move by truck to and we went ahead and made the same kind of arrangements we had made before through Simpson's contacts to move by truck.

And at this point in time, we had a new player in the game, a Lieutenant Colonel Armbright, who was scheduled to replace Simpson within the month. So he came in and he went down to observe the transfer.

- Q. For the record, that was a normal change in assignment for Major Simpson; is that correct, sir?
- A. Yes, yes. Armbright went down to Redstone to observe the transfer and, however, there was no agency contact there. So it was not until he returned to ... Washington, that he received the "John Henry" on it.

Frankly, had I been aware of that, I would have insisted that the agency send somebody down there, because had something happened to anybody, we would have been left holding the bag.

- Q. And by "John Henry" you have reference to a transfer document, transferring control and ownership from the Army --
- A. Absolutely and signature, from the Army to the agency, yes. So that shipment was made and that pretty much wound-up my involvement in the project.
 - Q On Snowball?
 - A. On Snowball.
- Q. Because you left DCSLOG, I believe, on 8 July?
 - A. The 9th of July.
- Q. So you were not around for the third shipment?
 - A. I was not around for the third shipment.

MR. SAXON: Now before we get to Hawk repair parts, we need to go back then and visit the policy level discussions about Congressional notification and some of those issues.

Any of you gentlemen have any other questions about TOWs, other than the meetings with Secretary Marsh, Mrs. Crawford, et cetera?

MR. GENZMAN: No thanks.

MR. KREUZER: No.

BY MR. SAXON:

Q. All right, if you would, General Russo, tell us when any issues first arised, that concerned any requirements of law to notify the Congress? who talked to who? what discussions were held? what was going on? et cetera?

A, I think, I mentioned earlier something -- and as I'm beginning to use "Bric Bradford's time top" (sic) here -- it seems to me, that Simpson in his discussion with Taylor of the General Counsel's Office, Simpson got wind of a new law that was passed, that required different thresholds of notification for the Congress.

Q. Would that be the Intelligence Authorization

A. I believe that's what it was. And as a result of that there was an increased tension beginning to grow on the part of the General Counsel. And as I recall, I asked Simpson to go walk down and check with General Suter -- General Suter being my counterpart on the Army Judge Advocate staff.

And the judge came down to see me -- Suter came down to see me, and said he was quite concerned with regard to the issue.

- Q. Let me backup a second. Now how had Major Simpson been made aware of this new law?
- A. I think, it must have been in discussions with Taylor because he had --

Q.	ton	Taylor	1
٧.

- A. Tom Taylor -- either with Tom Taylor or perhaps, with has a legal guy in that shop --
 - Q. Would that be Major Ed Frothingham?
- A. Yeah, that's the guy that I couldn't remember, but -- yeah, that guy, and so it may have been during those discussions.

And it wasn't until later, frankly, that I knew the was even knowledgeable about this case. It actually occurred when I was with Colonel MacDonald, who was the Chief of at the time. We had a subsequent meeting, but I'll get to that...

The bubbling of that concern on the part of both Suter and Taylor, led to Miss Crawford preparing a memo for the Secretary in which she voiced her concern, and, I wish I had that memo. Because it caused me to call her and I called her.

I said, "Sue, you know, there's a suggestion in this memo that we have the responsibility for notification." I think that's along the lines I said, and she said, "No." She said, "We think it's whoever is the receiving activity."

And as a result of that, I think I inked in at the bottom of that hummer...

MR. SAXON: Before you go further with this document that I've given you, general, was there a meeting that you had with Tom Taylor? A discussion about the Intelligence Authorization Act and any requirement for Congressional notification?

UNCLASSIFIED

A. I believe so, but I just don't recall the specifics.

MR. SAXON: All right, let me see if this document can help refresh your recollecton, and, I would ask that this be marked as Depostion Exhibit No.

(Whereupon, Deposition Exhibit No. 1, was marked for identification.)

MR. SAXON: And it consists of two pages; the first page is dated 13 February, and I would believe that would be 1986, in the context of things, and it's addressed to Major General Russo from Tom Taylor and it says:

"Concerning our conversation last we decided to ensure that Secretary Marsh was aware of the provision you and i discussed. Hence, the attached was delivered today."

- Q. And the attachment to which it refers is, I believe, the memorandum from Susan Crawford the General Counsel of the Army to Secretary Marsh dated 13
 February; is that correct, sir?
 - A. That's correct.
- Q. Now there's a handwritten notation on Tom Taylor's memo; is that in your handwriting?
 - A. Yes.
 - Q. And what can you tell us that that says?
- A. That's a notation, in which I'm noting that I have shown that to General Register, and I have provided a copy of that -- of these two pages -- to Major Simpson.
- Q. Sc "DCSLOG" that would be General Register who was the DCSLOG and he had seen it, and you provided this to Major Simpson?

Q. And what does that say, sir, if you'd it to

- A. "Nota bene" in Italian -- it's Latin but in any case --
 - Q. Which means what?
- A. "Note well," at least, in my lingo; probably; in no one else's. "In discussion" and the note reads at the bottom, the annotation reads, as follows:

"In discussion with Mrs. Crawford today, she advised, that where we support another agency, they -- not we -- are responsible to make the necessary notifications."

It has my signature, dated 13 February '86.

- Q. And do you recall seeing that memorandum and making that notation?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. And as you understood the issue of Congressional notification based on this memorandum, tell us what you thought that meant, in terms of who should notify the Congress?
- A. I was under the impression that based on what the memo said and my discussion with her, that the agency, the CIA, had the responsibility to provide notification to the Congress. But this says, and in the context then of the notification process, this memo, I believe, is what stimulated a subsequent meeting in Secretary Marsh's office. All right, tell us about that meeting if you would?

I was told by Miss Crawford, that I was invited to attend a meeting in the Secretary's office, and that general nature being notification to the Congress.

- ٥. Who do you recall as having been present?
- The Secretary -- Secretary Marsh, Miss Crawford, General Suter -- that's S-u-t-e-r; he is the Deputy Judge Advocate General of the Army, Colonel MacDonald, who was the Chief of the TMO; General Cavezza, G-a-v-e-z-z-a, who was the executive to the Secretary of the Army and I.
 - Do you recall when that meeting took place?

. Well, I don't have my notes on when that occurred, but it's in the chronology someplace as to when we held that meeting. It was maybe a week or two after this -- maybe a couple of weeks after this memo.

And the Secretary sort of kicked it off by asking me to recount what had occurred with regard to the project, and so I did.

A conclusion of my recounting where we were in that project, he mentioned to me that he wanted me to -- and there was some peripheral discussion by

Colonel MacDonald who I found out -- I was surprised to see him there, because I didn't know he knew anything about it -- but anyway, Colonel MacDonald mentioned that he had been in on the discussions about this project fairly early on in the inception.

But in any case, the Secretary told me to do

But in any case, the Secretary told me to do two things:

- (1) Develop a chronology of all the actions that you and the DCSLOG have taken since this began, and;
- (2), "Tell General Powell of my concern with regard to adequate notification being given to the Congress."

So I did that a day or two later, if not the same day. I did that with General Powell and on some document, I believe, which is over here I noted the day that I had specifically passed on to him the Secretary's concerns.

MR. SAXON: All right. General Russo, let me ask you then to take a look at this next exhibit, which I would asked be marked Deposition Exhibit No. 2.

(Whereupon, Deposition Exhibit No. 2 was marked for identification.)

BY MR. SAXON:

- Q. And ask you if that would be the memorandum for record dated 25 February '86, that you did at the request of Secretary Marsh that grew out of this meeting you just referenced?
 - A. Yes.

q

- Q. And there is a handwritten notation at the bottom; is that in your handwriting, sir?
 - A. Yes.
 - Q. And what does that say?
- A. "Coord" (coordinated). It's truncated to read "coord," but that meant "coordinated with General Powell on 5 March '86" with my initials on it, dated 5 March.
- Q. And when you talked to General Powell what did you tell him?
- A. I told him that the Secretary was very concerned with regard to the meeting to notify the Congress in accordance with the new law -- yeah, there it is -- the Intelligence Authorization Act for FY-86. And that he understood, that he -- the Secretary, understood that we were not responsible for that notification but he was concerned that somehow, that requirement be accommodated.

General Powell assured me that he understood the requirement and that the people responsible for that notification understood their responsibility. I accepted that, returned, and reported back to General Cavezza, that response from General Powell and that's about it.

- Q. Was it your understanding in reporting back to General Cavezza, that he was to transmit that to Secretary Marsh?
 - A. Had passed the instruction, absolutely.
- Q. And to your knowledge did you provide General Powell with a copy of your MFR of 25 February?
- A. I believe I did... Well, this may be leading a witch hunt but I'll mention it, anyway -- unless, I dreamt it. But I was of the impression, that following this discussion that went on in the Secretary's office that General Art Brown, the Director of the Army Staff, sent a memo to Powell addressing the very same issue.

However, when I was later asked about this, I said there's a copy down in my office. And my recollection is that Powell is the guy that showed me the memo, and I recall saying to him, "General Brown didn't mention this to me," but nobody seems to be able to find that memo.

MR. SAXON: Well, sir, you are correct. You didn't dream that, and General Brown did write such a memorandum, and it went to General Powell and we have a copy of it. General Brown now has a copy; it was used as an exhibit in his deposition last week.

WITNESS: Okay.

MR. SAION: So you aren't imagining things.

Let me say since you brought that up, I do not intend to use that as an exhibit, so I don't have it in front of me, although, it's here in the office.

BY MR. SAXON:

 - A. No.
- Q. So you had no knowledge that he put a cover memo on it and gave it to Admiral Poindexter?
 - A. No.
- Q. All right, sir. Were you ever apprised at any point, subsequent to this discussion with General Powell, and, possibly providing him with your memorandum of record on 25 February; did General Powell ever get back with you and tell you, that the Congress had been notified?
 - A. No.
- Q. Did he ever tell you that the agency was in the process of making notification?
 - A. No.
- Q. Were there any other discussions to which you were a party on the issue of Congressional notification?
 - A. Yes, General Powell was also in the course of

- Q. To leave his position as the military assistant?
- A. To leave his position, and being replaced by. Vice Admiral Jones. And I recall mentioning to Admiral Jones the Army's concerns with regard to the notification -- not clear in my mind whether it was shortly after he came on board, which at that time, we were starting to work the spare parts issue for the Hawk. And I took that occasion to mention the notification requirement either on the Hawk, specifically, or on both -- the TOW, to give him some background on the Secretary's personal concerns with regard to the whole issue of notification, but I recall mentioning that to Admiral Jones, specifically.

- Q. You never asked them, "Hey, are you guys telling the Congress about this?"
 - A. No.
- Q. Did you ever reference in anyway the discussions that you had, or the memos that had gone forward to General Powell on this issue?
 - A. I don't believe so.
- Q. Did they ever say anything to you that would indicate that they had been aware that the Army had been pushing upward on this issue, and that you were creating any problems for them or "get out of their hair," or whatever?
 - A. I don't believe so.
 - Q. They never said anything like that to you?
 - A. I don't believe so.

MR. SAXON: Anybody have anything further on Congressional notification?

MR. GENZMAN: Not I.

MR. KREUZER: No.

BY MR. SAXON:

- Q. All right, if you would then, general, pick up with project Crocus and tell us about the Hawk repair parts?
- A. Let's see... Yeah, on the 9th of April, I got a call from General Peay -- that's spelled P-e-a-y.
 - Q. Who was he, sir?
- A. He's the executive to the Chief of Staff of the Army, General Wickham. Benny left word for me that the Chief wanted to see me and as soon as I returned to get with the Chief. And so when I returned to the office I had the message "Call General Peay," and he asked me to come down and meet with him to go see the Chief. So I did that. We went to meet the Chief and he was then in the -- I don't know what the room is called -- but it's the tank portion of the Joint Chiefs of Staff area, and attendance at that meeting was General Wickham, General Peay and I.

General Wickham told me that -- he asked me how the TOW project was going and I told him. "You know, it's on again, off again. We're not getting the money," and so on. But the first shipment was made, there was a thousand missiles, and we were waiting for further notification.

He says, "Well, I got another project for you, the same kind of a project with the agency. Secretary Taft has advised me that we are to provide

ąγι		Pat. ra	 	E 130114	000.0	P

- Q. That would be Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft, IV?
- A. Yes. That we were to provide spare parts for the Hawk to the agency, and that I was to make contact with the agency and work the project the same way we worked it before.
- Q. Did he indicate that it was a follow-on or connected to the the first one?
- A. No. He did say to handle it the same way we handled it before -- that was to say, minimum involvement of people and minimum paper, but not necessarily connected to the previous action.
- Q. Did he give you the name of anyone in particular as your point of contact with the agency?
 - A. No, no, but I called
 - Q. And how did you know to call him?
- A. Well, he's the guy I worked with on the TOW, and so since we were doing it the same way we did the other one, I guess, I just stumbled into
 - Q. And did you call him?
- A. Yes, I did. And he told me that a would be over to see me ... and, I think he said "today -- later today," and I believe, actually showed up the next day. Came over and had with him a listing of items. I believe, there were 234 items on

And he asked us if we could run that out for him in terms of our being able to provide that support. I had Simpson come up and introduced them to each other. I don't believe Simpson knew and told Simpson, "Let's get on with the project." So Simpson did --

- Q. Before you go further, did this list have prices on it?
- A. I'm not sure. I think they did, but I'm not sure... I just don't remember.
- Q. Were you told that you were using the Economy Act on this transfer or was that just assumed?
- A. No, I just assumed we would be doing it the same way.
- Q. All right, what does Major Simpson then go forward and do?
- A. He then got together with AMC and used them because there seemed to be multiple centers involved and DLA, I might add, and so he used AMC headquarters to sort of coordinate what the availability was on the items, and I remembered getting one cut at that and it showed that we were in trouble on several of the items. It showed that we had some difficulty in identifying several of the items.

And so I asked Simpson -- I don't believe he had it on the first out -- and I asked him what's the usage of the items? and what was the procurement for the items? and, of course, several of the items were at zero balance.

- Q. Do you recall how many in particular?
- A. No, but I'm sure I got them in my notes someplace and I think it's in the chronology, but I don't remember.

But in any case, he came back and showed me the shred-out of each one of those items, and the condition and posture that we were in. The ones that we were not able to identify we asked through him, the agency -- I believe, he was dealing with time at the time -- if they could better identify the items.

And I believe, he or I asked the question -he probably did because I don't think I talked the specifics to -- asked about the kind of missile we were talking about; because the Hawk was in an upgraded posture -- that is, the improved Hawk. So it was relevant to try and find out what kind of a Hawk missile we were talking about so that we might be able to help in the identification process.

And my recollection says that we were told, "Don't worry about it. Just pay attention to the items that we've asked you to provide." So we did that.

In looking at the list AMC did take some actions and, I remember one, that had to do with some kind of brushes on a generator. The generators were tied up for deadline -- for maintenance. They weren't going to be upgraded through maintenance for some time; there were procurements that would bring the brushes into the inventory in time, when they did the maintenance. So those brushes were taken off the generators. Of course, they were good brushes, and brushes were on 8 that list of repair parts in order to meet the 9 requirement. So ... looked at all of that stuff and disallowed some. I don't remember how many and the rest, we provided to them.

UNCLASSIFIED

- Let me go back to something I asked you early on and that is, you've just used the language you "disallowed some." That would mean, there were certain items you identified as being in critically short supply and, therefore for readiness reasons, the Army would not provide them to the CIA?
- Do you recall any subsequent discussion at all from the agency indicating they wanted them anyway?
 - No, I don't remember, at least, not with me.
- Let me give you a couple of specific figures and see if you recall these figures in terms of readiness impact: That of the 234 repair parts there would have been 43 items that would have been in some state of significant depletion. Does that ring a bell?

- A. The number "43" doesn't. But I would say, that it's in that range, that I would have recalled "between those that were below the fifty percent marker; those that were at zero balance -- yeah, I would say --
 - Q. I'm sorry. 46 would be the figure?
 - A. Yeah, that's a ballpark.
- Q. And that would breakdown this way: That there would have been 15 items for which there would have been one hundred percent depletion; 11 items for which there would have been greater than fifty percent depletion; and, 20 items for which there would have been less than fifty percent, but still not be categorized as significant depletion?
 - A. The numbers seem to be about the right frame.
- Q. And you had in front of you, I guess, data which indicated what? other than this. I understand that a readiness decision has a lot of other factors. What went into your decision?
- A. What the usage factor was -- that is, how many have we used in the past year? If we got five, and we only used one -- you know, no big deal, even though, that's below the level that we'd like to have on the shelf. How many do we have in from procurement? When are they due in?

Q. In the pipeline?

- A. In the pipeline, against the usage and the stockage so those were the factors. Really, the usage; the on-hand quantity and how much was due in from procurement and when it was due in, that sort of pushed the judgments that I made with regard for the odds -- okay, to let it go or, no, we can't let it go.
- Q. All right, general, let me ask you this for the record because I think people will want to know:

In your best professional judgment as a career Army officer and as a logistics man, was there any significant, adverse readiness impact from the Army's stand-point to transfer those parts to the CIA?

- A. No.
- Q. Okay, sir. Were you involved in the decisions with regard to the Hawk radars? the two Hawk radars?
- A. I was involved in discussions with them. One
 -- the subject came up, I believe, through Major Simpson and I remember -- I'm pretty sure, I talked to about this in which, I told him that those were major items.
 - Q. End-user items as opposed to parts?
- A. Yeah. They were not in the same context as spare parts are, and I was concerned that we didn't have some paper on this one.

Now whether I was conditioned by the discussion that I had had with the Secretary vis-a-vis the notification, I don't know why I did that -- but anyway, I said it wasn't on the list. It wasn't the instructions that I had gotten with regard to what we were to transfer and it may be necessary for him to send that over on a piece of paper.

Having said that -- that is, if they wanted them. Having said that, they asked us to determine in any case, the availability, which was not an unusual kind of request -- availability and cost.

We found that there were two available of the type that they had asked for up at Letterkenny, but we weren't sure of the condition of them. We did find out, however, that they were tied up in a hold, a freeze, because they had been -- I forget what it was -- it must have been an FMS case with Iran going back several years.

- Q. These were part of the Iranian frozen assets?
- A. Yes

- Q. And the two you located you said at Letterkenny, that's Letterkenny Army Depot?
- A. Army Depot, yes. And we located those two and they asked us what the condition was and we told we didn't know. But since they were in a frozen posture, if they wanted us to go test them or something, it would cost them a few dollars.

Q. Did they come up with the money for testing?

- A. They come up with the money.
- Q. And were they tested?

A. The number around $24,000 or $30,000, something like that. We tested them and found out that, essentially, they couldn't be either usable or put into a usable condition.

However, in the course of doing that, Simpson who was an aggressive guy, went to find out how in the hell do we release? -- or get a release from the freeze? And I guess he talked to God and everybody else and, that sort of got back to the agency, and I got a call saying, "Hey, what the hell's going on?"

"Well, you guys asked us to find out the condition and availability, and pursuant to that, knowing that we're not going to give them to you until we get something from you in writing, we still wanted to tell you whether they were going to be available or not. So we've been making these contacts -- Simpson told me that.

- Q. For the record, Major Simpson understood this was sort of a close-hold, no-notes kind of operation; is that correct, sir?
 - A. Yes, absolutely.
 - Q. But he went -- if I understand his testimony and this issue -- he went to various people because he was told, that if these were to be released there is a process, an interagency process -- that you have to get approval from various agencies like State and Treasuryand so forth; is that correct?

UNCLASSIFIED

A. Yes.

- Q. So he went to various representatives of those agencies as a means of finding out if, in fact, these radars could be released as part of the assets?
- A. Yeah, I don't know whether he dealt on the specifics of the radars or just how do we get release on frozen assets. That's a specific I'm not clear on. But in any case, the agency -- and I forget who the hell it was that called me -- called me to sort of say, you know, "enough of that; are they in good shape?" and so on. "If anything else, we'll take care of that." So we gave them the results of the test and that's where it stopped as far as my recollection.
 - Q. With the radars?
 - A. Yes.
- Q. General Russo, what happened next in terms of the Hawk repair parts?
- . A. Then we received the... Well, I should mention that long about and shortly after we got through the list, because we were, again, in an on again, off again kind of situation, Simpson thought it a good idea, to consolidate all of the Army items because they were coming from multiple locations, at one place.

- Q. Pre-position?
- A. Pre-position them. So we staged them at Red River Army Depot which is near Texarkana in Texas. As I recall, that consolidated that stuff out of five depots, Army depots, and we left alone one group of items that were coming as I recall from the Tinker Air Base, and one group from DLA because we felt those were one origin so we didn't have to really pre-position those. We could move them quickly enough.

And so we did tell AMC, the Army Materiel Command to stage those items at Red River. We sent out a message to that effect and they made that happen.

And then around the 8th of May is when I spoke to Admiral Jones.

- Q. Was that your first involvement with him after General Powell had left?
- A. I believe so. But I remember Powell telling me Jones was coming in -- but the timing on it, whether I talked to him before the 8th of May or not, I'm not clear on. But I know that I did talk to him on the 8th of May. I told him what we were doing on the Hawk; told him what we were doing, and what we had done, and doing on the TOW missiles, and told him about the notification requirement.

And shortly thereafter, on the 16th of May we got the release from the agency to ship the items to the Kelly Air Force Base. And our understanding was that they would go to Kelly, and then be transhipped from Kelly and, again that's where our visibility or destination sort of dropped.

- Q. Did there come a time when Major Simpson told you he had tried to find out where the TOWs and the Hawks were going?
- A. I believe he may have said something like that and his answer was, continuously, he wasn't finding out anything.
 - Q. Did you ever ask him to try to find out?
 - A. I don't recall that.
- Q. And as best you know, in terms of the chronology and your involvement, does that complete it on TOWs and Hawks?
- A. Yeah, as far as direct involvement, yes.

 MR. SAXON: Okay. I've got some general questions, but I don't think I've got anything specific that flows from the chronology. Anybody else?

(No responses from counsel.)

BY MR. SAXON:

Q. All right, General Russo, I asked you from the outset, if knowing the destination would have caused you to do snything differently. Would there have been any set of circumstances in these transactions that would have oaused you to sort of stop and step back and say, "Hey, what's going on here?"

UNCLASSIFIED

A. Well, you know, I guess ... that's speculation. I would say, first, you asked me about the legality early on, and I told you, as far as I knew there was nothing illegal, other than the notification issue.

Had I known it was illegal, I think, I would have gone back and told Thurman that -- but I don't know that because again, I had a great deal of confidence in his wanting to support how to do things right.

And having said that, I'm reminded of what Powell told me: "That Weinberger said, 'Do it in accordance with the law.'"

So I guess if I knew that it was illegal, I think I would have gone back to Thurman and said, 'Do you know that?' But that's, again... I didn't know if it was legal or illegal; we raised the notification to what appeared to be the right levels. So I guesa, that's as much as I can...

Q. Okay, the next question deals with the distinction between a requirement imposed on the Army, and a request to the Army. We've heard in the course of many interviews and discussions and depositions, that certain folks at the Army, viewed this as a "requirement" being imposed on them or a mission given to them from on high, in the Secretary of Defense's office, as opposed to a "request" that sort of comes - laterally into the Army from the CIA; is that the way you would have viewed this?

A. Clearly, on the TOW I viewed that as a requirement. The spare parts I would view that as a requirement, minus, or a request, plus.

And, I guess, only because they sort of asked us -- you know, "What's the availability?" kind of a thing.

The other one was not a question of, "Is it or isn't it? Can you or can't you." It was you know, "Go do it" -- at least that's how I interpreted it.

- Q. But on the Hawk repair parts the order came not from an Army aide to the Secretary of Defense, but the Deputy Secretary and, it came not to you, not from General Register, but from the Chief of Staff of the Army?
- A. Yeah... But if I were to draw the analogy:
 When Powell told me that the Secretary said, you know, "Do it within the law and keep the Army whole," that said to me, implicit or explicitly, Weinberger had authorized the transaction. I mean so, if anything, Taft is one step down.

- Q. Okay, is this -- or either of these transactions, TOWs or Hawk repair parts, a matter over which you felt the Army had discretion, as to whether you made it or not?
 - A. No.

BY MR. KREUZER:

- Q. Sir, when General Powell said, "Secretary Weinberger said, 'do it within the law.'" What law did you take that to mean?
 - A. Ahh...
 - Q. Anything in particular?
- A. Nothing particular. Just, specifically, don't do something illegal. And that goes back to the comment that I made earlier with regard to the -- if I might use "Yellow Fruit" without knowing, really, the specifics of Yellow Fruit; but the whole notion that I had been working with for about a year-and-a-half that, we, apparently, we were on the throes of doing things -- if we didn't do things illegally -- they sure as hell were pretty close to being illegal.

So it was against that backdrop that the caution that Powell was giving me from the Secretary was the context in which I was placing this.

Q. So would you say that, possibly, that General Powell was implying that you should go to your General Counsel or your general counsels in the Army to make sure that this was a legal transaction that you were following?

- A. I guess you could imply that.
- Q. Did you get that impression?
- A. Not specifically -- non-specific terms, at least I didn't read into it that. As they say, perhaps, I should have, but I did not read that into it at the time. I did not.

But in the course of events with the General Counsel's office having been involved with that, within a couple of weeks after the -- well, almost the same week -- when we were talking about the Economy Act, I guess, I really didn't penetrate that very far.

BY MR. SAXON:

- Q General, did you ever have any dealings yourself with Chris Leachman at Redstone?
 - A. No.
 - Q. No discussions with him on pricing issues?
 - A. No.
- Q. A question about the system. As you understood it, when was created and was tightened up in late '84 under the direction of General Thurman, which you've already addressed; was it your understanding that it was to be the exclusive means for handling sensitive transfers to other agencies from the Army?

UNCLASSIFIED

4	V
	Tes:

- Q. Did you know whether the procedures governing the administration of the System contemplated any exceptions to it?
 - A. I did not know that.
- Q. But I'm not suggesting there are, in fact, as I understand it there are not. So would you --
- A. I would say that there were not going to be exceptions.
- Q. In any of your dealings on Snowball or Crocus did you ever have occasion to deal with, personally, directly, with anyone on the National Security Council staff?
 - A. No.
 - Q. That would include Colonel North?
 - A. No.
 - Q. That would include Admiral Poindexter?
 - A. No
- Q. Let me ask you a question or two about the Department of Army IG after these matters became public and then the subsequent GAO report. The DAIG identified three areas on a discrete pricing decisions that the Army made, in which the decision made by the Army was lower than later determined it should have been, and the GAO agreed with those three, and added one more and, in fact, the GAO report said that the pricing decision on the I-TOW, for the I-TOW downgrade; the basic TOW price; the cost of the MOIC and the shipping and handling costs were all too low. Is there anything you find unusual about that? or coincidental? or is -that just the way it came out?

- A. Well, firstly, I don't know what the IG report said.
 - Q. You've not seen that?

A. No. I have access to my testimony but that's all I have access to.

Now with regard to the GAO report as I recall I saw that, and one thing that impressed me was that, there were varying opinions. And so all I can say is, guys -- as I think, I may have mentioned to you before, I probably screwed up on this one.

Now, but at the time that we were working it, there weren't too many smart guys around, and, several months later, that didn't increase by very much...

So yeah, I probably screwed up. I would hope that -- going back to Powell's comments from the Secretary -- I would hope that the Army would send the right kind of a bill over to the agency. Whether they pay it or not? It's another matter.

Q. Do you have any knowledge yourself of whether the Army -- MICOM, has in fact been made whole in the sense, that it has been paid and reimbursed? and monies

.... ... UNCLASSIFIED

A. I don't know. I know that now that I'm in DLA, we needed to provide the data on cost and so on to the Army as part of the total billing.

And I know that they were pushing the hell out of us to make sure that they got all of our costs here about -- I want to say three months or so ago -- but I don't know whether any bill has been ... either that MICOM has been reimbursed.

I'm pretty sure that we had the money from the agency for the first shipment. I'm now pretty sure that we did that.

But for the second shipment and for the costs incurred in putting the rest of the missiles together and the transportation charges and so on, I just have no knowledge where that is.

- Q. Were you ever made aware as you were working the TOW requirement, that through the appropriations process there impelled out a set number of TOWs which can be procured by the Army during a particular year, and that in 1986 there was a set number of TOWs, beyond which the Army could not have gone in replenishing any TOWs it shipped to the agency?
- A. I don't know the specifics but, usually, on the procurement account you have sort of three years to buy those missiles. So I would just have imagined, that while there would be, certainly, in the budget, a line number of missiles, that I would think that --one; that they could put that money that they had recovered from the agency against that requirement and attempt to reprogram anything above that number.

But given the relative costs of what we were getting for what we in fact were paying, I don't know where that would have led us, very frankly.

- Q. But you don't recall this issue ever being addressed?
 - A. No, absolutely not.
- Q. Were you involved at all in any discussions about whole Hawk missiles for Israel or Iran?
- A. No, for neither place. Because we never talked about a destination. I must say though, that I was in the Pentagon from 1980 to '82 and, from '81 -- late '81 to mid '82, I was the Director of Supply and Maintenance. So I would have had the job of talking about these kinds of actions with the agency and I don't remember it during that period.

In a subsequent tour -- that is, from '84 to '86 the FMS world went through me. So I would have seen FMS cases to Egypt and to Israel. And I simply, don't recall during that period of time, FMS sales to those two countries. But there could have been a time when that happened in my tenure where Register may have signed off on it, because I wasn't around or something like that. So I wouldn't have been in the chain on that one.

- Q. When you said "Egypt" did you mean Iran?
- A. Yeah, I meant Iran.
- Q. To go precisely to the late 1985 time frame, were you aware of any discussions about shipping Hawk missiles to Israel or to Iran?
 - A. No.
- Q And in late 1985, before you were approached by General Register and had a discussion with General Fowell around January 18th of '86, in late '85 were there any discussions you were a party to, with regard to TOW missiles to either Israel or Iran?
- A. For sure, Iran, no. Israel, I don't recall.

 I might say that this is another question that I'd say let's get together in the same room.
- Q. I believe, when we interviewed you before, at least my notes reflect that you told us at one point, very early on, you might have provided the figure of $6,000 to as a price that would have included the basic TOW, plus MOIC upgrade and ancillary costs. Does that sound correct?
- A. Yeah, it may well have been. I just don't remember the "$5,000" but it may have been. And the reason it may have been around that was the uncertainty of what the ancillary costs were going to be, and, certainly it was going to be above the $3,500 for the missile itself. I just don't recall the $6,000.

UNCLASSIFIED

UNULNUUITELU

UNCLASSIFIED

- Q. General Russo, to the best of your recollection did you give anyone -- anyone with the agency, General Powell, or anyone else the figure of $6,000? And if so, do you have any idea where you might have gotten it?
 - A. The only way I can come up with that is:
- (a) I may have given that figure. I don't recall it, but I may have given the figure.
- Certainly, we were asked to come up with a figure, and we were trying to determine what the missile costs were that seemed to be about $3,500 and the question was: What were the additional ancillary costs that needed to be added to that?

And there was a good deal of uncertainty about how much that would amount to. And so we may have come up with a $6,000 figure and I may have given that, but I don't recall.

- Have you had a chance to look at that, sir? -
- Do you recall having seen this before?
- And it purports to be a memorandum for record dated 24 September '86 by Vincent Ma Russo. Is that your signature at the bottom, sir?
 - Yes, it is.
- Q. And what can you tell us about the circumstances of this memorandum?
- A. It's a little hazy but, I guess, it came up... I was on a visit down in Fort Eustis and I happened to be talking to the DCSLOG's office, and somebody mentioned in passing, that they were trying to get in touch with Major Simpson. And I said, "What the hell's that all about?"

"Well, there's some things going on with regard to his involvement here."

And I said, "Well, geez, he's out at" -- what the hell's that place? out in Colorada -- "Fitzsimons Army Hospital." I said, "Surely, you can get in touch?"

"Well, we're having a problem."

I said, "Okay" so I hung up the phone, and it sort of bothered me that they couldn't get in touch with him. So I called out there and I told Simpson he ought to get in touch with the DCSLOG's office. They ran him down for me.

So it must have been after I got back from that trip that I asked, you know, "What the hell's going on?"

Well, it seems to me that, that was the course that said: (a) We need you to tie down who you talked to with regard to this project.

- Q. "This project" being Crocus?
- A. Croous. And so as a result of that, I made up this piece of paper.

And where it came up to the 9th of April, it seems to me that I asked, when was it that the Chief was in the tank and, somehow we reconstructed the 9 April date; and I knew that next day was when I had talked to and they had some documents down in DCSLOG, and I think it was Simpson's handwritten notes that gave me the further detail to put in here.

I couldn't figure out -- the reason I have "on or about 21 April" on General Thurman was he was out of town, and that's the first day that I could tell that I could've gotten to him. I remember talking to him in the hallway on that project.

Yes, except this one, sort of was focused on A. some things that were not in the chronology, and was not olearly articulated, particularly, who I had mentioned the status of the project to.

MR. SAXON: All right, sir, the final exhibit I'll give you and give you a moment to look at that, and have this marked as Deposition Exhibit No. 4.

BY MR. SAXON:

- Yes.
- Q. Have you ever seen this before?
- No.
- All right, it is a memorandum for the record on the subject of Crocus. It is dated 1 December 1986, and it's been prepared by Colonel John W. MacDonald, I believe, that's the gentleman you referred to earlier as the Chief of TMO at the time?

- A. Yeah.
- Q. It appears to be, a bit of chronology from Colonel MacDonald's standpoint about Crocus, and there are two points I want to ask you about:
- (1) In the last paragraph where Colonel MacDonald states:

"The consistent view of DoD, not the Army, has been that DoD has no responsibility for notification of Congress of material transfers, and that that responsibility falls on the requester, recipient of the of the material."

And is that an accurate statement as far as you understand?

- A. I'm really not sure of that, certainly, the Army felt that way. Whether DoD felt that way, I really can't say.
- Q. But as I understand it, Colonel MacDonald, would not himself have had any dealings with DoD; that would have been something you would have done.

I guess, while I'm not asking you to vouch for or agree with Colonel MacDonald, I'm trying to get a sense of whether the Army felt that, beyond the view that the CIA should be the one to notify Congress; if there was any difference between the Army and the

- A. I don't believe there was a difference. I just can't tie that down, but I believe we were in agreement as to who had the responsibility.
- Q. All right, sir. In the second paragraph, Colonel MacDonald indicates that you had informed him of the tasking on Crocus and sought out his views. He makes a statement:

"Major General Russo expressed concern then and throughout the transaction with the legal ramifications of the transfer."

And he goes on to say who you might have discussed that with. What can you tell us about that?

- A. I think that it was more a question on, who has the responsibility to go do the notification. Are we still on the same -- you know -- on the same guidelines.
- Q. Okay, I wanted to make sure that, that's what your sense was you conveyed to Colonel MacDonald; that whether the law required notice to the Congress aa opposed to whether this action was illegal, and you were saying it would be the former?

Absolutely.

MR. SAXON: General, I believe that's all Let me see if my colleagues have anything.

COL WALLACE: We're in a bit of a time bind .-

MR. GENZMAN: I have nothing.

MR. SABA: General, I'm sorry. I did have a brief line of questioning, just to straighten out the record.

BY MR. SABA:

- Could you tell us in your own words, who has interviewed you since these events have become known? Just to get a chronology of various investigations and create a record, because when our members read these transcripts, I want the record to show that you've had prior interviews and testimony, if you can recall.
- A. Certainly, the Department of the Army IG representatives.
 - And that included a deposition; did it not?
- Yes. Well ... wait a minute. I don't know for sure, I don't think so. They swore me but they didn't come back and get my John Henry on anything that I recall. If that's what a deposition is?
 - It was a sworn statement?
 - It was a sworn statement, yes.
- Apart from the DAIG's report have you provided sworn statements -- or have you been -- how many people have you actually -- just apart from the DAIG?

- A. Well, let's see ... I think, there were members of the FBI; I think there were members of the -House Armed Services Committee; we had a discussion; GAO came over. I think that's it, those four.
- Q. In addition to the DAIG report to what other government officials have you provided either testimony or information in connection with these matters?
- A. The Federal Bureau of Investigation; the House Armed Services Committee; and the General Accounting Office.

MR. SABA: All right, thank you very much.

MR. SAXON: General, let me just say for the record on behalf of both Committees, we thank you for your time today. We thank you for having met with the staff of the Senate Committee, previously. You've appeared here voluntarily and your testimony has been very helpful.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE SECRETARY OF THE ARMY

SUBJECT: Support to Intelligence Operations

During a recent review of an issue in our office, we noted a significant provision in the Intelligence Authorization Act for Piscal Year 1986 that we wanted to call to your attention.

During Fiscal Year 1986, the transfer of defense articles or services exceeding one million dollars by an intelligence agency to a recipient outside that agency is considered a significant anticipated intelligence activity for the purpose of reporting to Congressional intelligence oversight committees. In addition, an intelligence agency may not transfer any defense articles or services outside the agency in conjunction with any intelligence or intelligence-related activity for which funds were denied by the Congress.

These provisions appear to reinforce our view of the importance of Congressional notifications in connection with support to intelligence operations.

MEMORANDUM FOR RECORD

SUBJECT: Support for Intelligence Activities (1994) Declassified/Released on 2002-88 under provisions of E.O. 1235 by K. Johnson, National Security Council

- (S) On 18 January 1986, The Army was tasked to provide support in terms of 3504 (later increased to 4509) missiles. The task was to turn these items over to the receiver at Redstone Airfield. Use and destination was unknown. The task would be executed upon receipt of certification of funds by the receiving agency.
- 2. (S) The first phase of the task, delivering 1000 missiles, was not executed until 13-14 Feb 86, due to initial delay in certification of funds by the receiving agency.
- 3. (C) During the course of coordination with OSD (MG Powell) and OSAGC, questions were asked as to the responsibility for end item usage. This was identified as a responsibility of the receiver.
- 4. (C) On 7 Feb 86, the new law (The Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1986) which required Congressional notification, in certain circumstances, became known. Coordination was accomplished with the Office of the Army General Counsel (OSAGC) as to the Secretary of the Army's responsibility. This was determined to be a responsibility of the receiver, not the Secretary of the Army. This position was later confirmed by the Army General Counsel.
- 5. (S) The notification requirement, while clearly to be satisfied by the receiver, places the Army in a difficult position. We believe the notification must occur, and as the provider, believe the receiver must be advised that notification is the responsibility of the receiver, and must be accomplished. I have discussed this with the Office of the Secretary of Defense; they have assured me--and asked that the Secretary of the Army be assured—that the receiver is fully aware of its reporting responsibility.

I must say people were pleasantly pleased, I would 7 say, that it was going very well. MR. SABO. What I'm trying to understand is we have Pelix 10 going down to Central America and General Gorman basically complaining that he's there on a private basis, and suggesting . 2 that he be sent off to work with the anti-Sandinista forces. He 13 then does provide assistance to the El Salvadoran Air Force. I'm 14 trying to understand how that relationship with the United States 15 military forces works, in view of General Gorman's initial 16 opposition to his presence on that program. 17 18 MR. When I talked to General Gorman about Felix 19 Rodriguez coming down there, he said he wanted to make sure that 20 it was a coordinated effort and that it was up to the Salvadorans, 21 if they wanted his advice, to take him on. I'll give 22 you a chance to read it, sir, and let you know what you are looking at. It's a memorandum from Colonel North to Admiral 23 Poindexter on January 15th of 1986, and while you can certainly 25 2 UNCLASSIFIFM 26 look at the entire memorandum, the only thing really of relevance

2 to us is the final paragraph. 3 4 All right, Mr. Sanchez, let me say for the record that...well, first let me cite the paragraph I'm looking at. this memorandum, Exhibit 4, Colonel North tells Admiral Poindexter, and I quote:

I should say for the record, that in his sworn testimony Unquote. to the Committee, General Galvin confirms in essence what Colonel North says. He says that he was knowledgeable about those and that in a general way, he was supportive of the efforts that took place. Let me simply ask you whether he, General Galvin, ever mentioned either of those activities to you in terms of his knowledge of their use in aiding the Contra resupply operation?

MR. SANCHEZ. No. Let me ask you to clarify your question a _ 3 bit. You're talking about US Government involvement in those 25 26 operations?

MR. SAXON. Yes, sir. Yes, sir, as opposed to simply the... MR. SANCHEZ. That's right, that the operations are taking place out of there. 4 5 6 MR. SAXON. Yes, sir. 7 MR. SANCHEZ. Which is the way you can also interpret this. This does not, the statement here in the memorandum does not state _0 that it is being supported by the US Government in any way, but 1 that the activity is taking place. General Galvin and I never 12 discussed, to my recollection, that these operations which intelligence indicted were taking place out of both of these 13 4 places, were supported by the US Government. 15 16 MR. SAXON. Did you ever have occasion to have such a 17 discussion with-Colonel North that would have included him telling 18 you of any US Government activities, particularly his activities, .9 in this regard? 20 MR. None that I recollect where he specifically 21 22 stated that the US Government was supporting these operations. 23 You know, we supported anything that the private sector could do 24 for the Democratic Forces, but not government involvement. 25 26

Now during the time when the Boron Amendment, which went into effect in October of 1984 and lasted roughly for a . 3 year and cut off all US Government funds to the Contras, I guess 14 it is reasonable to assume that intelligence indicated that the 15 Contras were still in the field and were still fighting and that 16 you had knowledge that they had not packed up and gone home. MR. SANCHEZ. At that time the intelligence that I had access to indicated that they were receiving support. I to not recall, and therefore, I had no knowledge at the time as to the source or how it was being paid for.

MR. SAXON. Do you recall ever asking any of our intelligence agencies to provide you with any detailed analysis of their logistics pipeline and where they were getting material and how it was being provided to them?

J

MR. SANCHEZ. I don't recall ever having sent a memorandum over specifically requesting that information, but certainly this was topics of discussions at meetings. The private funding that they were getting at that time was no secret, so it was assumed that that's where they were getting it.

MR. SAXON. We've had testimony from various people, which would suggest they all knew that in some rough way that Colonel North was sort of the point of contact for the private fundraising activities, and simply making that statement is not to suggest that the people who themselves would have said that, knew the full extent of what Colonel North was doing. Is it a fair statement that you would have thought of Colonel North as the point man or the one individual in the Government who would have

1	been the link to any private fund-raising activities on behalf of
2	the Contras?
4	MR. SANCHEZ. My answer, if I understand your question

5	during that period of time, I did not know that that was taking place, so it would be speculation for me to speculate on who was.

12	became involved in it.
13	• •
± 4	MR. SAXON. That answer is helpful. Let me see if I can
15	better rephrase my question. You indicated that you were
16	knowledgeable that he had maintained continuous liaison with the
17	Democratic Resistance Leadership. Would you also have thought of
18	him as being a central figure to serve in a liaison capacity to
19	private fund-raisers; people who were involved in raising money
20	for the Contras?
٠.
25	IINC AGO.

MR. SHAPIRO. You mean his knowledge at the time?

MR. SAXON. That's correct.

MR. SANCHEZ. My knowledge at the time was what was on the public record, and depending on when, what restriction was operative, it was no secret that this administration and the White House supported the Democratic Porces, and there is public record on that of speeches, of briefings that were given at the White House, of briefings that all of us in the administration participated in, in briefing the public sector, shall we say, on what the policy was in Central America.

MR. SAXON. If a private donor had come to you and said, "I'd like to get some money to the Contras to help out," and there was certainly nothing improper or illegal about that and I don't think at any point would there have been, would you have referred them to Colonel North, or to whom would you have referred such an individual?

MR. SANCHEZ. Well, nobody ever did, so I can't tell you what it would have been to do that, because at that time I don't think I would have referred them to Colonel North during the period...Depending on what period you are talking about. If it's one of those periods in which we were providing humanitarian aid,

1 naturally, I would have, if one would have come to me, which they didn't, I would have referred them to the Department of State who was responsible for running that program. 5 MR. SAXON. Let me show you another exhibit, and ask that 6 this be marked as Deposition Exhibit 5. I'll give you a moment to look at it. It's not important that you, for my purposes at 8 least, that you read every word in it. This is a Central Intelligence Agency document dated 8 July 1985, that is an intelligence summary of the Contra logistics pipeline. 1. 12 Mr. Sanchez, if, as it appears that you have read the 3 summary, that really will suffice for the purposes of my questions. If you look on page 1, at the footnote, it says "This _5 memorandum was requested by the Deputy Assistant Secretary for 16 Inter-American Affairs, International Security Affairs, Department 17 of Defense," which on 8 July 1985 would have been you. I could be more specific and ..., did he ever tell you that on December 2nd, he the Israel government, according 10 account, to discuss the subjects that I just 12 referenced? 13 1 MR. SANCHEZ. No, I don't recall that Mr. Armitage ever 15 mentioned that to me. 16 17 MR. SABO. Did he discuss with you the revision by Israel for 18 arms or money for arms in any connection with Central America? 19 20 MR. SANCHEZ. No. 1 MR. SAXON. Did you ever have any discussions with Mr. 23 Armitage, or for that matter with General Collin or Powell, Noel Cook, Glenn Rudd or Doctor Hank Gaffney, during the time period of late November/early December '85 about any arms the United States 25 4 INCI ASSIFIFD 26

1	would have either been involved in directly sending to Iran or
2	sending through Israel?
4	MR. SANCHEZ. No.
5
6	MR. SAXON. The reason I ask is we've had public testimony
7	and everyone is consistent that at that time Mr. Rudd and Doctor.
8	Gaffney prepared some talking points or talking papers about HAWKS
9	and TOWS, which went up the chain to Mr. Armitage.
10
•	MR. SANCHEZ. Well, see, again since at that time we did not know of any connection with Nicaragua or Central America, my region. Today I can see no reason why something like that would 14	have been discussed with me.
15
16	MR. SAXON. And you are saying that it was not?
17	•
18	MR. SANCREZ. It was not.
19
20	MR. SAXON. Let me ask you about the efforts last spring for
21	the President to ask the Congress to invoke emergency provisions
22	under Section 506(a) of the Foreign Assistance Act, for Honduras
23	for up to twenty million dollars in emergency military assistance
2	What do you recall about the events which triggered that request?
25	65 IINCI ASSIFIFD
26	65

1 .	MR. SANCHEZ. That was for Honduras. The Sandinista activity
2	on the border, they had, as you recallLet me go back and get
3	the dates, but it was prior to that that there had been Sandinista
4	insurgence in to Honduras. The Hondurans were very concerned that
5	they had no air defense, for example, to protect themselves. The
6	only thing they had was their air and their aircraft were falling apart, so this was high concern on the part of the Hondurans as to what could behow they could protect themselves if the 9	insurgents continued or if they expanded; if they came more than 10	just a border type of insurgence. That was the general atmosphere
1	down there.
12	De la companya de la
3	MR. SAXON. Mr. Sanchez, there is a fair amount of
4	documentary evidence which would suggest that the, perhaps like
15	Mr. Kennedy's missile gap, the threat to the Hondurans was over-
16	stated at the time and we've had public testimony to that effect.
17	At the time, did you have any knowledge that this was perhaps
18	being overstated as a reason to get the Hondurans some emergency
19	military assistance which they didn't realize at the time that
20	they needed?
∠2	MR. SANCHEZ. No, I can't say that I had any knowledge that
23	it was being overstated. I think that certainly the memorandums
2 .	that we presented from Defense, and I believe the ones that I saw that had interagency clearance on it, clearly stated the facts as we saw them at that time. MR. SAXON. On a different subject, are you aware of any direct linkage between efforts by the Pentagon to provide the in order to replace the deteriorating in exchange for any efforts on their part to help the Contras? MR. SANCHEZ. No, because...and the reason I say no, is that --- and many people have interpreted it that way--- is because all. of this started way before that. The fact that we have been discussing predates the later development. This is something that is slees! historical in Central American 20 I think a fair reading of the report that MR. SAXON. 23 provided Director Casey when he returned from a sisit there, along with Mr. Assertance and others in October of 1986 was 25 that perhaps we should accelerate those efforts that were under way in the interest of getting to agree to our 2 Central American proposal was we were putting it forward on that trip. Mr. Abrams was also on the trip. Is that a fair statement, that while these things had a history to them, they were efforts 5 to accelerate our response? 6 7 MR. SANCHEZ. Well, our efforts to accellerate our response, 8 and I recall briefings from I think after his trip 9 there, that were becoming 10 very, very concerned about what was happening 11 by Sandinista troops, and therefore, The insurgents into 2 their two primary concerns at that time, because of what was happening on the ground, was their _5 16 MR. SAXON. Along the same subject, a more generic question. 17 Are you aware of any efforts in your tenure at the Pentagon to 18 link security assistance generally to efforts by the recipient 16 countries to aid the Contras, particularly during the time when US 20 Government funds were cut off for such purposes? 21 2 MR. SANCHEZ. I don't recall that that was ever discussed 23 specifically or in generic terms. The fact remains that with the build up in Nicaraqua that was taking place, we didn't have to go . 25 through that machination to reach the conclusion that the other 26

1	countries, friendly countries, the democratic countries in Central
2	America needed help. That's what brought about the assistance to Honduras and Salvador. With both countries, especially Salvador,
4	as you are well aware, having their own insurgency problem, they
5	need support from Nicaragua.
7	MR. SAXON. Two final questions from me, sir. One, when did
8	you first learn that any of the monies derived from the arms sales
9	to Iran had been or were intended to be delivered to the Contras?
•	MR. SANCHEZ. When it was publicly announced in November.
	· ·
	MR. SAXON. And the final question for the record. Is there
4	any connection between the timing of your retirement and any of 15	the matters that our committees are looking at?
17	MR. SANCHEZ. A lot of people have speculated on it, and
18	•
19	MR. SAXON. That's the reason I asked, to give you the chance
20	to set the record straight.
22	MR. SANCHEZ. And continue to speculate on it, and I can tell
.3	you that it is sheer speculation on other people's part. I had retired, as you know, already once in 1981, and I was planning to 25	retire a year to two years after I came to the Defense Department,
	IINCI ASSIFIFII
	69 111 1 111 Ma)1111 11.U

1	so the fact that I retired at this time had nothing to do with,
2	and I think as those who have speculated on my role, I think the
3	record clearly indicates that there is no basis for me having
4	decided to retire at this time.
5
6	MR. SAXON. And what are you doing now?
7
8	MR. SANCHEZ. I'm retired. I'm still consulting. I'm still
2	a consultant for the Defense, and doing some consulting for other firms.
	MR. SAXON. That's all I've got. We're about out of time.
. 3	Let me see if my colleagues have anything further.
4
15	MR. SABO. I do. Let's see if I can ask a few things very
16	quickly. Mr. Sanchez, who are you consulting for at Defense since
17	your retirement?
19	MR. SANCHEZ. For ISA.
2Ø
^1	MR. SABO. So, that's under Mr. Armitage?
_3	MR. SANCHEZ. For Mr. Armitage and for Doctor Ikle and for the Secretary. You don't consult for one, I mean.

1	MR. SABO. I understand. So it would be DOD?
	MR. SANCHEZ. Yes.
5	MR. SABO. Are you consulting currently for any other
6	government agency?
7	government agency.
8	MR. SANCHEZ. No. You know, consulting, when you say
9	"consulting," I am not getting paid by any other government agency
0	for consulting work.
•
	MR. SABO. I understand. There has been a matter which has
. 3	intrigued some of the committees and some of the people on the
14	Hill. At the time of your retirement, Central America, Latin
15	America, particularly Central America was becoming a high priority
16	issue with the Administration and the Hill and various agencies.
17	It would certainly become a matter of considerable attention and
18	focus, CIA and Interior Defense; you had a long and prominent
۰9	career in that area and by qualifications, knew more than many;
	some would say knew a lot more than those who succeeded you. Why would you have left CIA at precisely that time?
	LAAIPIEN

1	MR. SHAPIRO. Do you mean CIA or defense?
3	MR. SABO. CIA, 1981.
5	MR. SANCHEZ. No particular reason other thanThere has
6	been again a lot of speculation on the subject, and I don't even
7	care to comment on the speculation because there would be no end
8	to the comments. It is no secret that I have some very definite
9	views on the conduct of covert operations; on how I thought
LØ	operations should be conducted and the pre-requisites for
•	conducting a covert operation. This, I have stated and you can read a New York Times article, an interview that I gave the New
. 3	York Times before on what I considered essential for covert
14	operations; and I'm saying this, not that I saw this thing coming
15	down or going down that line as it has taken place. But this has
16	been, again used, which is on the record; I have stated it
17	publicly that this was a difference that I had with the Director
18	and therefore that this is why, well some people even say he fired
19	me. That is not correct. In fact, I think the DDO at that time,
20	he can be asked, but he was rather strong in his request that I
21	stay; that I continue; that I not leave CIA at that time.
22	Defense, as you recall, when I came over here, this was in August
23	of 1981, had still not found anybody for this position and they felt that I was qualified for it, so they offered me the job and 25	it was a chance to do something more than what I had been doing in
26	72 UNCLASSIFIED

1	CIA, so I took it with the idea at that time that it would be for
2	a year or two.
3
	MR. SABO. So you left in '81 because you had a basic difference with the Director?
6
7	MR. SANCHEZ. No, no, no, please, please.
8
9	MR. SABO. No basic differences?
10
1	MR. SANCHEZ. No basic differences
2	9.
3	MR. SABO. Was there strong opinion?
14
15	MR. SHAPIRO. Please, please. Mr. Sanchez, had you finished
16	your answer?
17	_
18	MR. SANCHEZ. Well, no, what youI was talking about the
19	speculation that has taken place and this is part of the
20	speculation that I had strong differences with Bill Casey and al.
_1	the rest of them. The way it turns out, certainly some of my
22	basic philosophy on how to run covert operations did not agree
23	with what we saw unroll six years later, but that doesn't mean that Bill Casey and I had any serious disagreements about it at that time, although we certainly talked about it. The basic

2 points.... 4 MR. SABO. So, then... 5 MR. SANCHEZ. Let me finish. The basic points that I made 7 then; that I have made publicly, is that a covert operation in my way of looking at it, should never be engaged in as a substitute for stated policy; in support of policy, yes. A very basic point. 10 Secondly, that when one gets involved in a covert operation in 1 this country of ours, especially in this day, that there had : 2 better be some kind of understanding with the Congress; not a vote 3 or anything; but an understanding with the Congress that this is 14 what is intended because you do not turn a spigot like that on and 15 off the way we have been doing it in the past six years, and 16 expect it to have any kind of impact. So, therefore, there has to 17 be an understanding. But this follows with what I have stated 18 publicly many many times; in fact, in just about every public 19 speech that I have made, and I've made many of them during my six -0 years in Defense, that what is required is long term policy and a i bi-partisan support for our foreign policy to make our foreign 22 policy effective. I believe that, and I have been called a 23 Pollyanna because I insist this is what, I feel at least and I continue to feel, that this is what is essential if we are going 44 25 to have an effective foreign policy, that we have to have---in its 74 IINCI ASSIFIFD 26

1	broad terms, I'm not talking about its specifics, but in its broad
2	terms, we have to have a clearly enunciated policy for an area,
3	long term; and we have to have broad bi-partisan support for that
4	policy regardless of who is in the White House.
5
	MR. SABO. Now based on your position, is that the reason you came from CIA to this position here in 1981?
8
9	MR. SANCHEZ. No, because if it would have been an issue, it
10	would have been an issue with the Administration, not only with
1'	CIA. So if I had strong objections to working with this
12	Administration because of that and the CIA, it would have applied equally as well or even more so in a position that I came to in
. 4	Defense, so therefore, that's why I go back to this speculation o
15	why I retired. I frankly am a little baffled myself as to why so
16	many people are so interested in it.
18	MR. SABO. I did want to give you a chance to comment.
19	Because I know your time is short, I'd like to ask you a couple o
20	very specific questions. Do you have any knowledge of a David
1	Walker? He's a citizen of the United Kingdom.

4	MR. SANCHEZ. No, the only Walker that I know of who was
5	engaged in operations in Nicaragua is strictly historical.
6
7	MR. SABO. Right. I move to another subject. I'm interested in, in particular, in the role of DOD in activities in Central merica. I distinguish between activities and support of the Contras, and activities directed against the Sandinista government support that we gave them in this operation, but that doesn't mean

9 MR. SABO. So, am I correct that you were not involved in 10 that operation, either the planning of it, or....

not specifically, directly, as far as I know, involved in the operation.

MR. SABO. How about

17 18

MR. SANCHEZ. Never heard of it.

23

MR. SABO. We have often heard involved a list of munitions provided by the CIA to the DOD just prior to a particular cut-off as a result of the Boland amendment. It was a list of arms by the DOD which DOD was to provide the CIA for the anti-Sandinista

25 26

1 forces and we are continuing to investigate this, but a certain quantity of arms was provided. 3 4 MR. SAXON. It was a tasking to all the services, MR. SANCHEZ. I don't specifically recall that, but again, this kind of an operation does not go through the Office of the 10 Deputy Assistant Secretary. In other words, this is something that is done through through the other 12 areas in the Department. It's not one that requires policy decision. 15 MR. SABO. Let me show you a collection of documents which 16 will be my final exhibit, which I believe now is Exhibit 12. In 17 it is a memorandum dated September 2nd, 1983, for the Secretary 19 from a General Counsel, and there are certain other memoranda 19 attached. I ask you if you have knowledge of the subject matter pertained in that? 21 22 MR. SANCHEZ. No, this goes back to 1983. 23 MR. SABO. Right. UNCLASSIFIFD 25

26

MR. SANCHEZ. Do you have any specific question on it? 1 2 MR. SABO. I wanted to know if you were familiar with it and to what extent the attached list of arms grew out of....or was 5 perhaps opposed to a DOD policy. I'm trying to understand DOD's policy during that period in respect to the Contras. MR. SANCHEZ. Well, I'm certainly....you know, the general subject, this is something that is....this is certainly something that could come out of my office or if not out of my office, then 10 out of the...well, in fact it states here that the Office of the 11 Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Policy requested the legal 1, views on this. So it's something that came to us in Policy, and we requested, our contact at that time, as you recall, was the General Counsel to give us an opinion on it. . 5 16 MR. SABO. And I believe the first document is the opinion? 17 18 MR. SANCHEZ. Yes. 19 20 1 MR. SABO. Okay, the second document attached to that opinion, I believe is a list of armaments which was requested from the CIA. 23 MR. SANCHEZ. By the CIA. 25 26

MR. SABO. By the CIA, and the third document I believe is a 2 letter from a Congressman requesting.... MR. SANCHEZ. Addabbo. 5 MR. SABO. Yes, Congressman Addabbo, requesting information about DOD's involvement in support of the CIA. My question is really what was DOD's involvement in support of operations to assist the anti-Sandinista forces at that time? 10 MR. SANCHEZ. Well, again I'll have to go back and look at the calendar as to when, we were allowed by law to support, or provide arms requested by CIA, during those period of times when this was permitted, we 15 provided them, provided they could reimburse us for the costs. 16 During the times when we were not supposed to be supporting the 17 Contras because of the limitations placed on us on various occasions by the Congress, I do not recall that at any time during 18 those periods of time did we provide anything to the CIA. I don't 1.4 20 know that. ^ 1 MR. SABO. You notice in the request from the CIA, an item about two thirds down the mass if a requests 23 25 UNCLASSIFIED 26

1	MR. SABO. It could have been accomplished in many ways.
2
3	MR. SANCHEZ no. It was
4	nothing like that, that I am aware of. You see, I think that
5	Congressman Addabbo's concern was precisely that - about "US
5	covert involvement in and against the Sandinista government in Nicaragua is the subject of a continuing debate," and the question that was being asked at that time was "has the DOD been involved
9	in this," and I don't know the answerI don't see the answer
10	here, but I think the answer went back that we weren't.
2 .	MR. SABO. Without regardand this will be my last question on the subject. Without regard to the various restrictions of the
. 4	Bowen amendment and from a policy point of view, would it have
15	been DOD's preference to have continued with support of CIA, or
16	what was DOD's policy during that period?
17
18	MR. SANCHEZ. It depends on who you ask in DOD.
19
10	MR. SABO. I'm asking you, sir.
1
_2	MR. SANCHEZ. It depends on how you want to do the operation
23	from a policy point of view. DOD involvement is a very high
2	profile US involvement. There is a certain amount of deniability,
25	if you may, for the countries of Central America, if you do it
26	12 IIMA ACCITIED

i	through other channels, i.e., CIA. So it all comes down to: are
2	we interested in that high visibility, direct involvement by the United States Government, or are we trying to give those countries
નં	who are also interested in helping, some kind of cover, if you
5	may, some kind of deniability that they are not directly involved
6	with the United States in support of, in this case, the Democratic
7	Forces in Nicaragua.
8
9	MR. SABO. For the record, has it been your view that the
Ø	anti-Sandinista forces would require additional training by the
•	United States in order to be a viable fighting force?
	MR. SANCHEZ. Any group which gets more training is going to
*	be more effective, so IWhat specifically do you 15
16	MR. SABO. Should this training be provided by DOD?
17
18	MR. SANCHEZ. Well, again it goes back to how high a profile

lø	concerned, without getting in any way into the inter-agency discussions and disputes that always take place, from my point of view, you do it with the best people that you have regardless of

MEMORANDUM FOR JOHN M. POINDEXTHR

FROM:

OLIVER L. HORTEN

30632

SUBJECT:

Meeting with General Jack Galvin, USSOUTCHOM

You are scheduled to meet with General Jack Galvin on Thursday, January 16 from 10:30-11:00 a.m. General Galvin has some specific recommendations on future plans for more effective support to the Democratic Resistance Forces (DRF) in Micaraqua. In this regard, Elliott Abrahms advised today that Senator Dole is drafting a bill which will provide overt military support for the DRF. He reportedly has Senators Lugar, Bumpers, and Boren as co-sponsors and Senator Sam Nunn is considering whether or not to "sign-on."

General Gorman was and is an active proponent of a greater role for the Special Forces in training/advising both the Salvadoran military the DRF. General Galvin shares this belief. Both remain convinced that the GIA lacks the military expertise an ecessary to adequately train and advise the DRF in an appropriate strategy or even the proper tactics. Their concern is not unfounded. To this date, the CIA has been unable to produce a coherent military strategy, the tactics to support such a strategy, or to adequately train the force to accomplish either. Admittedly, some of the problem is because of our on again-off again Congressional restrictions. But, no small part of the problem is a lack of expertise in the paramilitary side of the contractions. CIA operations direcorate.

rel Galvin has asked that you agree to periodic a month) meetings with you to discuss sensitive You should be aware that General Galvin is cognizant of vities underway in both Costa Rica and at in support of the DRF. General Galvin is enthusi th the avoir. I will be flying with General Galvin to Costa Rica after the meeting with a return Tuesday morning

HPSCI/SSCI Hearings on U.S. Private Citizens Support to the Micaraguan Resistance Forces

This is in response to your note on the package at Tab I (SYSTEM II 90962). On Tuesday, September 13 (CIA), Johnstone (State), and Sanchez (DOD) appeared before the SSCI to respond to their questions on the Santa Clara incident. On Wednesday, September 12, Motley (State), Clarridge (CIA), and Commodore Darby (DOD) appeared before the HSPCI on the same issue.

Today the SSCI conducted its world-wide covert action review. Clarridge appeared for the Latin America region. There were ho significant questions about the two Americans killed on the September 1 air raid at Santa Clara. There were, however, several detailed questions/comments about other activities in the region. The summary below reflects input received from each of the Administration participants.

Summary

Congressman McCurdy questioned Motley in detail regarding "what the NSPG had decided to do about the "" Motley responded that NSPG meetings were not the purview of the Committee, but that the Committee should be aware, since they receive the intelligence, that we were watching the and that we are concerned about them.

Congressman Fowler, in questioning Clarridge, delivered a lengthy exposition on how the Administration was using the delay in deploying as a means of embarrassing the Democrats. He noted that there was no reason for delay and that there "had better not be" an offensive just because the Administration failed to act. Clarridge responded that we needed more time to ensure that

DAVID N. LAUX

SUBJECT:

My Contacts with David Duncan

On July 28, Sara Ford, #10 for Asia at CIA, asked me if I would take a call from led Rogers of Senator Glenn's staff about talking to David Duncan -- an arms merchant from Miami, Florida, who had some information on illicit arms shipments in several areas of the world -- to see if Duncan should be talking to someone on the NSC or at DOD or CIA about the information he had. On July 29 or 30 I took a call from Rogers who asked if I could see Duncan on July 31, when he would be in Washington. Rogers accompanied Duncan to OEOB and introduced him but did not stay for the discussions.

the National Security Council was not an operational agency equipped to deal with this kind of information, and that he should be talking to CIA or to DDD. I also told him I dealt with East Asian matters but I would try and put him in touch with the right people to talk to. Duncan mentioned that he had once talked -- in April or May -- to Nestor Sanchez, DAS/ISA for Latin America at Defense. I suggested he go back to Nestor but he said Nestor was out of town (I checked and this was true).

I asked Phil Ringdahl to come in to hear the South African portion of the story and then took Duncan to meet with Vince Cannistraro to hear the whole thing and put him in touch with CIA if that seemed appropriate. Vince talked to him at some length.

Duncan said he also had some information on an attempt to purchase TOW missiles by Iran. He said Iran had $76 million in a Belgian bank to be used in the purchase of 4,000 TOW missiles. Duncan said they really only cost $7-k each, that the going price was $12-k each, but that they would probably be sold to Iran at $19-k each and that the difference, totaling $28 million would be pocketed by the intermediaries. Duncan said the Belgian bank was amenable to a deal involving a "sting", i.e., the sale of the missiles would go through but empty crates rather than the missiles would actually be delivered. Duncan said he was in a position to arrange this if the U.S. government wanted but it would have to be done pretty soon.

UNCLASSIFIED UNCLASSIFIED

I again told Duncan that the NSC was the wrong organization to be dealing with and I was the wrong man, but I would try and find out who he should be talking to and would get in touch with him at his hotel (Hay-Adams).

Vince Cannistraro was on leave so I was unable to find out what had transpired in their talk and whether Vince had discussed Duncan with CIA and made arrangements for them to contact him. So I telephoned Nestor Sanchez, who gave me the story of his one conversation with him. Sanchez suggested I talk to Chief of CIA's Latin American division/ DDO, and let him handle the matter of dealing with Duncan. Since I didn't know I telephoned Clair George, CIA's DDO. I asked Clair to check the files on Duncan, and if he wasn't a nut, to ask some one to talk to him and assess his wild stories on arms deals, or give me some advice on what to say to Duncan. Clair said he'd get back to me. He did this morning, and said their assessment was that Duncan was a wild man, unreliable, that they didn't want to talk to him — particularly with the story in today's Washington Post — and advised me to stay away from him too.

Last night, before Clair George's conversation with me this morning, I telephoned Duncan at his hotel and told him I had been unable to get to any one who could deal adequately with his information at that point but hoped that someone would be contacting him either before he let Washington, or back in Miami.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE

SUBJECT: CIA Request for DoD Support of Covert Activities in Nicaragua (TS)

(TS) Recently Judge Clark sent a memorandum to you asking that the Department, in coordination with OMB and State, ensure that sufficient resources are members to support democratic resources within Micaragus.

- (S) Following this, the Office of the Deputy Under Secretary of Defense (Policy) requested our views on DoD's legal authority to provide the requested support. A review of the matter conducted by this office indicates that DoD has no separate appropriations or any other legal authority under which the requested support could be provided on a non-reimbursable basis, as the CIA had requested.
- (S) The CIA has been disappointed with our pointing out this difficulty; it has suggested that it has insufficient funds to support such activities on its own.

(C) Let on 401 transfers require a matter of law that OMB give its approval to such transfers. In addition, as a matter of practice, six committees of Congress are also informed of such transfers: the two Armed Services Committees; the two Appropriations Committees; and the two Intelligence Committees. Although as a matter of law it would be possible to avoid involving these committees in the process, such a course of action would appear to be most unwise, inasmuch as this statutory authority to transfer funds is intended to conceal the precise amount of the CIA budget from the public, not to permit augmentation of that budget as it has been approved by Congress. An attempt to avoid Congressional involvement in the transfer process could jeopardize the entirety of the CIA legislative authority to receive funds from other governmental agencies.

(S) Despite our desire to support CIA initiatives within Central America, we are nonetheless constrained in the method of this support by statutory restrictions. Moreover, we have recently received a letter from Chairman Addabbo questioning the Department's involvement in precisely those activities for which the CIA now seeks support (copy attached).

(U) Director Casey may raise this subject with you.

What is your position? 12 Special counsel in the appellate division of the United States Attorney's Office, 13 14 Southern District of Florida. 15 What are your duties here? I work with the United States Attorney 16 17 overseeing all appeals for the office. I do some administrative work. 18 19 That is my primary responsibility. 20 In that connection, I interview all 21 applicants for the office to the extent I am able 22 to do so. 23 My primary responsibility is to get 24 involved in a supervisory capacity, and if I can, 25 get involved in or help in difficult, sensitive and complex investigations and prosecutions that the office is conducting, so I will be assigned to either work with another attorney, or work with you, as those other attorneys are doing, in those kinds of matters, review what they are doing, to see that all proper investigative steps have been taken, that the prosecution is being— if prosecution is being proposed, if there is a prosecutable case that the defense has not overlooked.

I also get involved in handling appellate matters, particularly-- a particular difficult nature.

I have had extensive appellate experience before I came to the office, and I will periodically handle some government appeals, which always are more difficult than being on the winning side in the District Court, and also available as a resource person for the office, that anyone can feel free to come to for advice as the need arises.

- Q. Do you review all indictments that are handed up by grand juries here?
 - A. I do not review all indictments.

I am someone who is authorized to sign documents in the absence of the U.S. Attorney, or his unavailability.

I will review indictments in complex, sensitive cases.

Most of the public corruption and fraud indictments, and many of the major narcotics indictments pass through me before they go on to the United States Attorney for his approval.

- Q. Do you carry any case load, yourself, or is your contact with the cases, as you described, mostly or exclusively supervisory?
- A. At the present time, I am carrying no case load, myself, except for some appellate matters.
- Q. When you say at the present time, are there periods of time when you do carry case loads?
- A. Well there was a period of time where I worked for an extended period of time with another attorney on a fraud matter.
 - Q. How long ago was that?
 - A. That was in '85 to '86.
- Q. Can you tell me what your commercial phone number is and FTS?
 - A. Commercial is 305-536-617

2	Excuse me. At the time you left Legal

4	A. Senior supervisory attorney.
5	Q. Where did you go in 1976?
6	A. In 1976, I took a period off, and then
7	in, I believe it was, February of 1977, I
8	interviewed for the Justice Department's Organized
9	Crime Strike Force in New York, Eastern District
10	of New York, and they wanted to hire me, and at
11	that time there ensued a period of delay before
12	I could start, for things like budget,

16	Q. Is that organization in Williamsburg,

18	A. I'm not sure.
19	Q. It was in New York at the time?
20	A. That wasn't where it was headquartered,
21	but I was in New York.
22	They were doing a study of the various
23	aspects of the court system in New York, so we had

2	A. That was for a period of perhaps four

4	It was with the understanding that I
5	would be free to leave when the Justice Department
6	was in a position to have me on board, and when
7	that came through in November of 1977, I started

10	with the Strike Force?
11	A. I came as special counsel, same title
12	that I have in this office.
13	Q. Special counsel to whom?
14	A. The U.S. Department of Justice,
15	Organized Crime Strike Force, the Eastern District

17	Q. Was that a supervisory capacity?
18	A. Yes, it was.
19	Q. How long were you special counsel to

21	A. Until I came down here, which was in

23	Q. And when you came here, what position

14	Q. Was there any difference in the way you
15	served, between the special counsel in the

It's been called by so many different names. At least up in Washington, I wanted to make sure we had the vocabulary straight.

The first time that I recall, was participating in a meeting after Jeff Peldman came

Q. If I could punctuate that— was that before he went to Costa Rica, but after he interviewed Mr. Terrell?

back from interviewing someone named Jack Terrell.

A. That's correct.

- Q. Who was present at that meeting?
- A. I just recall myself, Jeff Feldman and Leon Kellner, but I'm not certain of that.
 - Q, What was discussed?
- A. Well, he went through the things he had learned, from, you know, Jack Terrell, and there were many details about trying to put down-trying to put together a group of people to train and fight Nicaraguan the Nicaraguan government from Honduras and from Costa Rica, and that was as—during that meeting, or right before when I was being called in.

I learned that there had been these allegations of a plot to assassinate Ambassador Tamms and to blow up embassies, and as I recall, Jeff was asked about what Terrell said about the plot to assasinate Tamms, and he said he had neglected to ask him, because he had to spend so much time talking about these persiditary

5	A. This is the chronology that Mr. Feldman
6	prepared, which reflects many events of which I
7	have no knowledge.
8	Q. Do you have any of your own notes
9	written on that chronology?
10	A. Very few.
11	Q. At some point, we would like to just
12	take a look at the chronology with your notes on
13	it.
14	I don't think that's important at this
15	point.
16	With reference to that chronology, can
17	you tell me when that meeting with Mr. Kellner and
18	Mr. Feldman took place?
19	A. Well, I suppose it would have to be
20	either March 27th or March 28th.
21	Q. That would be 1986?
22	A. 1986.
23	I do not recall which date it is, from
24	my own recollection.
25	I certainly don't recall a six hour

2	Q. That was going to be my next question.
3	How long was the meeting, or how long
4	were you in the meeting, if you remember?
5	A. I don't remember exactly how long the
6	meeting was.
7	My best recollection would be I would
8	be surprised it would be a little more than two
9	hours.
10	Q. Do you recall what the decision or
11	resolution of the meeting was?
1 2	A. Yes.
1 3	There was a decision not to just
1 4	believe what Terrell said, but because of all of
15	the information that was available at that point
16	that Jeff Feldman and the FBI agents should go to
1 7	Costa Rica and interview these mercenaries, or
18	so-called mercenaries who are in jail in Costa
19	Rica, and anyone else down there who might be able
20	to shed light on the allegations that Jesus Garcia
2 1	had been making.
2 2	Q. Do you recall in that meeting whether
23	there was any discussion of the CIA or the NSC,
2 4	National Security Council?
25	A. The only thing I recall is that Terrell
	WHAT LOOFIED

3	Civilian Military Assistance, but anyone to help
4	the CMA to model a fighting force, and as I
5	recall, that Terrell was asked who in the CIA
6	recruited him, and he refused to say.
7	I don't really recall anything else
8	about the CIA being mentioned in that meeting,
9	although it may very well have been.
10	Q. How about the NSC?
11	Do you recall any reference to the NSC?
1 2	λ. I don't recall any reference to the NSC
13	at that time.
14	Q. Any reference at that point to Oliver
15	North or Robert Owen?
16	A. Not then, that I recall.
17	Q. Do you recall any discussion of whether
18	a grand jury should be employed at that point, or
19	at some point in the investigation?
20	A. Not then, no.
21	Q. Do you recall any discussion about the
22	Boland Amendment?
23	A. Not at that time.
24	Q. Do you recall any discussion at that
25	meeting of any about any potential political

CIA, which I have heard at times called CMA, as

2	A. No.
3	Q. Did you take any notes at that meeting?
4	A. No.
5	Q. Now, after that meeting concluded,
6	and what was your next contact with the this
7	case, if you recall?
8	A. The next contact I recall was the
9	meeting that we had when Jeff Feldman returned
10	from Costa Rica.
11	Q. And that would have been on April 4th?
1 2	A. That's correct.
13	Q. Do you recall were there any
1 4	communications from Mr. Feldman to you, during the 15	time he was in Costa Rica?
16	A. Not to me.
17	Q. Are you aware of any communications
18	with anyone else?
19	A. I seem to recall, and this is very
20	hazy, that he may have called Leon Kellner once
21	while he was down there, and I'm not certain about
22	that, and I don't recall if he did, what he may
23	have conveyed.
24	Q. What do you remember first of all,

- A.: Richard Gregorie, Ana Barnett, myself, Jeff Feldman, Leon Kellner.
- Q. Was Mr. Leiwant there for any period of time, that you know?
 - A. Let me explain what I remember on that.

I recall-- and obviously, I'm not entering this with a blank slate--

. I recall the discussions we were having about the Neutrality Act and the Boland Amendment, and then we wanted to try to find the Boland Amendment and the various incarnations.

We were having trouble finding it in the books, and I remember Ana Barnett going out to see if she could get it off the machine, and coming back and saying someone is going to get it for her.

I remember very vividly someone coming in with the computer printout, and us sitting there with the computer printout and discussing the Boland Amendment.

I do not remember who it was that brought the Boland Amendment into the room.

I know now it was David Leiwant, but

3	Q. Were you present for the entire
4	meeting?
5	A. To the best of my recollection, I was.
6	Q. But beginning to end, with I
7	understand that there were there any
8	interruptions, or did you have to leave the room
.9	for any reason?
10	A. I don't recall any interruptions.
11	I was definitely there during the
12	period where the computer printout was brought in
13	and where we discussed where we all read it, and
14	we discussed it and discussed the Boland
15	Amendment.
16	Q. All right.
17	A. So I just don't see any in my on mind
18	at least, it's clear that we had to be in the room
19	at the same time, and it's just that David Leiwant
20	had such a brief appearance in this case, that I
2 1	simply don't remember it.
2 2	Q. Do you recall any phone calls being
23	made or being received during the course of that

25	A. I don't recall any that would be it

He was always getting calls, and often we would take them, or we would sit there and have to wait for him, so the mere fact he would get a call, would just not be a memorable event.

What would be a memorable event, would be if he got a call from the Attorney General or anyone else in Washington telling him to slow down or stop an investigation, and that I could have never forgotten.

That just did not happen.

Q. Do you recall any telephone calls at all coming in or going out relating to the Costa case?

I understand there may have been other calls, but do you recall Mr. Kellner speaking on the phone to anyone regarding the Costa case?

- A. No.
- Q. Let me expand it beyond that meeting. I know the first question was limited to that meeting, but let me expand it now.

Do you recall ever being present when Mr. Kellner ever spoke to anyone on the telephone, about the Costa case?

2	I recall him speaking to Mark Richard I

4	Q. And can you fix those in time at all?
5	A. Just in the April, May, 1986 period.
6	Q. Were they in the context of larger
7	meetings, that is where other people other than
8	yourself and Mr. Kellner were present, or were
9	situations just with you and Mr. Kellner?
10	A: I really can't recall, and I don't want

14	Do you remember what the discussion was
15	between Mr. Kellner and Mr. Richard, or what you
16	could hear of it, or what he might have told you
1 7	about it?
18	A. All right. The first one that I
19	recall, was where he called up to find out if the
20	name Oliver North was a real person.
21	Q. This was Mr. Kellner calling?
22	A. Yes, either that, or Mark Richard had
23	called him, and during the and he used that
24	opportunity to ask him, but that's what I recall.
25	Q. Now, can you put that in context, with

4 .	Q.	Do you remember, for example, when Mr.

7	λ.	Well, his name first arose close to my

18		I just thought of something.
19	1	There was a newspaper article which

7	My question is, is that the article

I guess one thing I should clarify, is 10 I was aware at the time that there had been an earlier call from Mark Richard, in which I can 11 place this chronology as having taken place on 12 13 March 14th, and which Mark Richard asked, "Do you 14 have some investigation going on about a plot to 15 assassinate Ambassador Tamms," and asking Leon Kellner to look into it. 16 But you learned of it at that time? Oliver North's name came up, yes. Do you recall in what context? It came up in the context of Jeff Feldman describing some things that he had heard said. I remember asking him, "Well, have any of the people that have been interviewed said anything about Oliver North," and his reply was no. I think I asked him, "Where did you get 22 this from," and I don't think he-- as best I recall, he wasn't certain. Did he discuss his meeting with 24 Ambassador Tamms hat time?

đ	I as best I can recall, the first

1 2	Q. Did he indicate to you anything any of 14	North?

15	A. No.
16	Q. Did he indicate that there was anything
1 7	Unusual or remarkable about his meeting with
10	Ambassador Tamms?
19	A. The only thing I recall him saying

I don't recall that discussion on April 14 15 4th. 16 Was there any discussion on April 4th of the political implications of the case? 17 No. I don't ever recall a discussion 18 19 like that. 20 What I do recall, whether it was April 21 4th or some other time in April or May, was occasionally jokes being made. 22 I was probably the primary jokester. 23 24 Can you give me an example? 11	Mr. Kellner making any jokes like the one you

15	Q. Do you recall at any meeting or any

2	Q. What was the resolution of the meeting,
3	if any, on April 4th?
4	What was to be done?
5	A. Jeff Feldman was asked to prepare a
6	memorandum, setting forth the results of the
7	investigation to date, and his view of whether we
8	should go forward, and at that time, the reason we
9	did that was because we had a very hard time, all

1	He had come back from Costa Rica, and
. 2	he was very excited, and he was throwing out a lot

7	He felt that the story about the plot

11	I found no reason to disagree with him

15	A. The gun running at that time?
16	A. He thought he had a case there, and to
17	some extent, we were handicapped. We were we
18	were handicapped in trying to pool everything and
19	keep it in our heads, but it certainly occurred t
20	me that it could be an unprovable case, and had t

Do you recall a decision ever being Q. 7 reached that the Boland Statute would not be a plausible basis for a prosecution here? 5	Boland analysis for a potential Boland violation
6	was dropped out of the case, where there was a
7	decision made at that time to look elsewhere, as
8	opposed to concentrating on Boland?
9	A. In my own mind, no.
10	Q: You're hesitating as you say that.
11	A. Because I guess I don't want to get too
12	far afield in terms of spreading out my own
1 3	thinking, in terms of statutes in a pending
14	investigation, but let me just indicate that I
15	have always and still have reservations about the
16	applicability of the Neutrality Act to the conduct
17	that we were looking at at the time.
18	I think there are serious problems, and
19	I think we necessarily have to get into the Boland

11	λ. Yes.
12	As I remember the first draft, it
13	didn't say anything about a grand jury.
14	Q. We may be talking about the not about
15	the same draft.
16	Was that a problem for you, that the
17	first draft didn't have a specific recommendation

It didn't say who these people were, what the organizations were, so on, which made it difficult, very difficult to follow.

It also didn't give any indication of how the FBI got to the case, how we got into the case, and what had been done since that time.

It did not really give an indication of all of the people that had been interviewed.

It did not have things that I had heard on April 4th or before.

If it's just one agent, he talks about hearsay— "Yes, I have learned from this other agent that he met with the defendant and he bought drugs from him, and then an arrest was made, and we tested the drugs and it's pure cocaine," so on and so forth.

So any case in which there's more than that, is not a routine case, and the fact that such an investigation is being held and conducted, is something that is subject to supervisory approval.

An attorney here does not have the power and— in a non-reactive case, we don't start with an arrest, he doesn't have the right to start on his own— investigation on his own, decide he's going to investigate something and use the grand jury.

6	we went to a grand jury, or revisit the issue, or
7	look like we had a case that we could present to a

9	Jeff obviously came into the meeting,
10	as his memo indicated, with a belief that we
11	should start the grand jury, but at the end of the
1 2	meeting, he agreed with us.
13	Leon Kellner, for a good part of the 15	Dick and Jeff did most of the talking, and it was

16	only toward the end that's when he started

- Q. At that meeting, was there any discussion about the political sensitivity of the case, either as a local matter, that is in the Miami community, or as a national matter, vis-a-vis, the Contra issue?
 - A. Nothing I recall.

Only-- the only thing I recall, is some discussion about that one sentence in the memorandum that had to deal with the FBI's reasons for opening a grand jury, and it was set forth--were one of the reasons they gave was as put in the memo, first it would dispell claims that the Department of Justice has not aggressively pursued this matter.

- Q. What was the discussion on that point?
- A. I believe the discussion consisted of one sentence from Leon Kellner, to the effect that, "I'm not going to open a grand jury, because it might look better to someone. That is not what we open grand juries for."
 - Is there anything else significant 52 1 about that meeting that you can recall? Well, at the end of the meeting, we 2 were all in agreement, and Jeff was going to make 3 changes in the memo accordingly, and whatever 5 other minor changes they may have discussed during it. Do you recall receiving a re-draft from 7 Mr. Feldman in which he did, in fact, changes the 9 conclusion? 10 À'. Yes. 11 Do you recall approximately when you 12 used that? 13 Well, using the Jeff Feldman chronology 14 to refresh my recollection, it had to be sometime at or after May 22nd. 15 Did you receive it, if you recall, 16 directly from Mr. Feldman, or from Mr. Kellner? 17 I received it from Mr. Kellner. 18 Did you have any discussion with him or 19 20 did he indicate to you anything at the time he gave you that memorandum? 21 I don't know if it was either right 22 then or after I had had a chance to look at it. 23 24 We had a discussion that we don't have

We just said, "Well, we're not going to do it now," and they said we ought to, and they were giving their reasons, and we thought whether he ought to give them our reasons for saying not now.

- Q. Did you discuss with Mr. Kellner that or around that time, how the conclusion was going to be modified, or who would go about modifying the conclusion?
 - A. He asked me to set forth the reasons.
- Q. Was there any reason expressed or any reason, for giving Mr. Feldman the memo again and letting him do that?
 - A. I don't recall a discussion of it.

 In my own mind, the reason was obvious.
 - Q. Why was that?
- A. That most of the reasons that had been advanced, which ultimately led to agreement in the meeting, were the ones advanced by myself and Dick Gregorie, and so one of us would be in the best position to easily set it forth, whereas if it was given back to Jeff Feldman, he probably would have to come back to us again to discuss it.
 - Q. Now, as I understand it, this document

	HNPI ACCIEIED

1	was done in a word processing pool of some kind.
2	A. Yes.
3	Q. And does each of the assistants or each
4	of the attorneys in the office, have their own
5	word processing file, and by file, I don't mean
6	paper in the hard sense, but in the computer
7	sense?
8	A. Can you repeat that question?
9	Q. Yes.
10	' My question is really what I'm
11	getting at, is how one goes about changing a
12	document that another person has drafted or
13	submitting to the word processing pool.
14	A. Give it back to that person's
15	secretary.
1.6	She would have the disk or excuse me,
17	or the secretary to bring the disk down to your
18	secretary.
19	Q. Now, the question is, do you recall
20	which of those you did in this case?
21	A. I don't.
22	I know from from having heard Jeff
23	Feldman say it in the past few months, that it
24	apparently went back to his secretary, but I have
25	no independent recollection of thet.

	22
1	Q. Did you do the modifications did you
2	run your changes by Jeff Feldman at any time?
3	A. From my independent recollection, I
4	don't know.
5	Apparently, from having heard from Jeff
6	Feldman, again, for the past few months, I did
7	not.
8	Q. Was that a conscious decision on your
9	part?
10	A. No.
11	I assumed I would give the changes back
1 2	to him or gave them to Leon Kellner, first, that
13	before it went out, Jeff Feldman would look at
1 4	it.
15	Q. But you knew you, yourself, didn't
16	take any steps to present it to Jeff before
17	presenting it back to Mr. Kellner?
18	A. No.
19	Q. Let's look at the changes that actually
20	were made in the memorandum.
2 1	The first one of consequence that I
2 2	noticed is a reference to the Crista suit and its
23	filing.

A. Yes.

That had come up, and the memo hadn't come up, and it was relevant, so I figured just to put it in.

- Q. By this time, you didn't-- you didn't change the date of the memo, so you're referring to a memo that was dated May 14th, related to an event that took place on May 30th?
 - A. Obviously. I see that (indicating).
- Anyone worried about -- I read about that in some publications, trying to make significance over the fact the date wasn't changed, but when you try to put in it may 30th, you're not trying to conceal the fact the memorandum was finalized May 14th.
- Q. My question is, the allegations have been made in some of the press, that the memo was intentionally backdated.
 - A. No.
- Q. So it was originally back dated the . 14th, and it changed?
- A. When it went through some of-- when it went through some of the drafts?
- A. As we discussed earlier, there was the first memorandum, I believe of April 18th, and the second draft was dated May 14th, and it's subsequent revisions -- the date just wasn't

But there was the May 14th draft that

5 came out on May 14th; is that correct? Yes. 7 And that recommended a grand jury be convened or --٩ Α. Right. And the meeting on May 20th, there was 10 11 another memo that was also dated the 14th, which Mr. Feldman wrote, "We didn't have a 12 13 straighforward enough conclusion or complete 14 enough conclusion from Mr. Kellner's standpoint." 15 Is that correct? 16 Correct. And then there is a third version dated 17 18 May 14th, which had your conclusion, and it had your reference to the Crista--19 20 Correct. 21 To your knowledge, was the date on the 22 cover sheet ever brought up to date and then 23 changed back, or was it just an oversight in not updating the cover sheet? 24 25

Let's go to the conclusion, if we could, where you set forth a number of reasons for not opening a grand jury, as you have called it.

On the first-- do you have your version? 6 λ. Yes. The first says, "Opening a grand 7 jury at this point would be a fishing expedition". 8 Is that correct? 9 Yes. 10 What did you mean by a fishing 11 expeditious? 1.2 What I meant by that, in a very 13 shorthand fashion -- it was all that we had talked about in terms of why we didn't really know where 14 15 we were going yet. 16 It wasn't focused yet, we didn't know 17 who we were looking at, in terms of agents and who 18 were witnesses, and so on and so forth. At that time I didn't feel and Dick 19 20 Gregorie didn't feel that we should open up an 21 investigation, a grand jury investigation yet. 22 Now, that was one of the reasons that 23 were discussed at the May 20th meeting? 24 That was discussed, and I know that 25 Jeff Feldman is unh language, but the concept I was trying to convey was one which we all agreed upon. Now, the second reason, I believe, or the second notable reason I saw, was that grand jury subpoenas aren't needed for records of gun sales, because ATF can obtain those; is that correct? Right. Was there any discussion of postponing the ATF requests, or was that something to be done immediately in lieu of a grand jury subpoena? No. The discussion was in terms of, "Well,

- There was no intention or discussion of Q. postponing that as well?
 - Not at all.
- The next reason I noted was that bank records subpeonas might sweep within their ambit, innocent contributors.

Is that a correct paraphrasing of one of the reasons you had for -- . A . One of the reasons, yes.

we can go out and get that right now."

- What do you mean by that? Q.

60

1 Cuban organizations made public appeals, held fund raisers, and that all these patriotic 2 anti-Communist Cubans in the community, were 3 very-- who are very sympathetic to such appeals, 5 would come and give their $10, $25, and that 6 seemed to be what we were going to get by looking 7 for the contributors, a list of a large number of people who made small contributions. A 9 I didn't see what we needed with that, why we wanted it. 10 11 I must say sitting here a year later, we also never had, then-- we never had then, and 12 13 as far as I know, don't have now, any information that they received funds from the U.S. Government or any of those private organizations that were acting for the U.S. Government, channeling funds, so that possibility never entered into our discussions, and certainly never crossed my mind at the time.

- Was this factor that we've been talking about, that is the innocent contributors factor, one of the things discussed at the May 20th meeting?
- Yes, it was, in terms of both innocent contributors and in terms of what was it going to show us. What for?

 We didn't want to know Corbo's associates in some academic sense, but we wanted to know who are the people who made up the conspirators, if what Corbo is doing is a crime, and just knowing who responded to those funds rates raising appeals, wasn't going to advance that inquiry at all.

I thought it was looking down the wrong pathway.

My suggestion was that we want to try to identification people that may be conspiring with Corbo, go out and interview the people that, you know, are associated with Corbo, and ask them who is associated in this circle, and take it that way.

Q. You also indicated that once subpoenas are issued, that the government can expect delays, quote, unquote, in getting the records back.

That is, in fact, an argument for .
issuing the subpoenas early, as opposed to--

A. Yes, it is.

My thinking was when I wrote that-"This is our chance to pursue Corbo's associates.

Are we going to be sitting on our hands for two

5	It didn't make sense to be sitting bac

It didn't make sense to be sitting back and pursuing it this way, but pursuing who Corbo's associate are, by bank records -- I didn't think that was the way.

That's what I meant by the sentence.

- Q. You are also aware that if and when the point came that—— when records were needed, that there would be additional delays in obtaining those records?
 - A. What you say is true.

I can't say that I really thought in those terms at the time.

I was really focusing on the fact that I didn't see what those particular bank records would do for us.

- Q. You took those memorandum, had the changes made, and then you submitted them to Mr. Kellner?
 - A. Yes.

Q. You did not, at the same time, submit a copy to Mr. Feldman, as best you can recall; is

19	"How is this," and I took it and then I later

7	At various times I have heard rumors
8	that it was in different peoples' hands.
9	I don't know whether that's true, or
١0	what is true or what isn't true.
l 1	Q. In whose hands are you referring to?
1 2	A. I heard at one time that some of the l 3	Senator Kerry had the memo.
1 4	I heard that another time, that Senator
1.5	Luger had the memo.
16	I heard one time the Washington Times
1 7	had the memorandum.

- A. Or may have them?
- Q. Or may have them.
- A. Generally, if not always, it was Ana Barnett relating something she had heard.
- Q. Do you know what her source for that was?
- A. No. No, but now, just to repeat it, many months after I had heard this, I heard that there had been a mass mailing to newspapers all over the country, and that was when we saw the whole memo coming out in the press, and everything like that, but that was many months after the three that we told you about.
- Q. After you redrafted the memo, what was your next contact with the case?
- A. Well, pulled aside, perhaps, occasional word here or there about what's going on, things of no particular significance.

The next thing that stands out in my mind was that some time in August-- and I don't remember when in August-- hearing from Leon Kellner that he had received a package from John Hull, and that it was making all kind of allegations against Senator Kerry, and it looked

JACK 1-172 West Flagler St. 172 West Flagler St. 17

1 like John Hull was on his counterattack, and why is he sending it to me, what does he think I'm 3 going to do with it. What did Mr. Kellner decide to do with 5 that material? Well, I know he was planning to make 7 sure the Justice Department in Washington had a full set, and was fully aware of this. In terms of investigating Senator Kerry 10 or anything like that, that was just dismissed out 11 of hand. 12 We weren't going to get involved in 13 that. 14 Did you have any discussion with Mr. 15 Kellner at that point about the political 16 implications of the affidavits, or investigating those affidavits? 17 I don't recall anything more than what 18 19 I just indicated. At or about that time, I believe, the 20 chronology will reflect that Mr. Feldman gave Mr. 21 22 Kellner a copy of the prosecution memorandum that came over from the FBI. 23 Did you ever see that prosecution 24

2	. I saw it sitting on Kellner's desk.
3	Q. Was it ever given to you to read?
4	A. No.
5	Q. Those are often two different
6	questions, whether it has been given to you or
7	A. No. It was never given to me to read,
8	and I never read it.
9	Q. After the late August incident with the
10	affidawits, what was your next contact with the
11	case?
12	A. There may have been just occasional
13	discussions with Ana Barnett, and Leon Kellner,
14	and as articles would start to appear in the 15	press, presenting us in an unfavorable light or
16	suggesting things, but putting that aside, I don't
17	recall any further involvement in the case until
18	this meeting that is indicated on the Feldman
19	chronology of December 2nd of 1986.
20	Q. Let's back up a little bit.
21	Do you recall a spate of publicity
22	around the time of Mr. Garcia's sentencing, about
23	alleged procrastination or delay in the handling
24	of the case?
25	A. I guess the best wav I can answer that.

68

1	is I recall a spate of unflattering articles about
2	us over a period of time, and continuing on up to
3	the present.
4	I don't particularly associate a flurry
5	of activity around the Garcia sentencing.
6	Q. Do you remember when the C-123 carrying
7	Mr. Hasenfuss was shot down?
8	A. Yes.
9	Q. That was in early October of 1986.
10	Did you discuss with anyone in this
11	office, the Hasenfuss crash, in the context of the
1 2	Costa investigation?
13	A. No.
14	In those discussions if those
15	discussions took place, I was not a part of it.
16	In early October, I was extremely busy
17	on other matters, and I had nothing to do with the
18	Costa case at that point.

the marshall— had heard from the arshall that we had received a subpeona for that date and time, and then he asked me in the later conversation, was this going to be public testimony or deposition.

I'm not sure, was my answer, and who pays, and how does it get paid, and I said we just put in our travel authorizations like we ordinarily do, and that's been the extent of the discussion.

- Q. You know I'm sure that Mr. Leiwant's recollection of the April 4th meeting, differs at least in one significant degree from yours, and that is the allegation that there was a telephone communication or suggestion or instruction from someone at Main Justice to go slow in the investigation.
- A. My understanding is that what Dave Leiwant actually told you, is quite different, from what I was reading about in the press, what he allegedly said.
- Q. I understand, and I'm not asking you to vouch for other people or really even characterize his testimony.

 $\label{eq:wanted--wanted--wanted} \mbox{ what I really wanted-- wanted to make}$ that statement a predicate for my next question.

1 any motivation that Mr Leiwant might have to misrepresent anything that 2 occurred at that meeting, be it political 3 motivation, a personal motivation, anything in 5 that category at all? I don't know of anything. That's all I can say, that I'm convinced that he's mistaken, and-- and it has to 8 be an honest mistake, that he-- having walked into 9 10 the middle of something and not being familiar 11 with the case, misunderstood something that was going on, something that was being said, or else 12 13 there is some motivation that I have no knowledge of. 14 MR. Regarding that meeting on April 4, 18 19 1986, do you recall how long the meeting lasted? 20 It was a fairly long meeting, and a -- I would say it had to be several hours. 21 22 How many, I couldn't say. 18	Q. If you had had if there had been
19	received a telephone call regarding the Costa case
2 0	during this meeting regarding the case, would you
2 1	have remembered that, do you think?
2 2	A. I certainly would.
2 3	Q. I believe you said you spoke to Mr.

Leiwant once after he was deposed.

A. As best I recall, he said, "I don't know why everyone is making a big deal about this. That's all that I said, was that Kellner received a call, and it looked like an important call, and after he got off the phone, he said they want him to go slow, but that he said it with such an expression on his face, that it was clear to me that he had no intention of paying any attention to that," and then he said something that struck me as really curious.

He said, "I thought the call came from Jensen, but apparently I was mistaken."

Despite my temptation, I resisted it, and didn't ask him what he meant by that, and then I says to him, "Dave, you know, I was in the room that day, and it just didn't happen," and I said, "I don't remember you being there. Do you remember me being there," and I said, "I don't remember you being there, but I remember being there when the events that we're talking about were happening, when the Boland Amendment was brought in, and we sat there discussing the Boland Amendment and discussing the Neutrality Act."

That was all I can recall of the

Is that acceptable to you, sir?
GENERAL SCHWEITZER: Thank you.

MR. BELNICK: For the record, let me mark as

Was called as a witness and, having first been duly sworn, was examined and testified as follows:

EXAMINATION

BY MR. BELNICK:

- General, if I can just refer for information purposes to the document request which the Committee has made of you, as it was attached to the subpoena which has now been withdrawn, Exhibit 1, I understand that you were -- that you looked for the documents of the type requested in the Committee's subpoena. Did you find any such documents?
 - Well, I knew I had none.
 - So you have not found --
- I have no documents that pertain either to your charter or what you are asking for, nor have I disposed of any, nor did I ever have any such documents in my possession.
- Yes, sir. You had mentioned to me when we spoke on the phone that you were planning to be in touch with Geomilitech, if possible, to see if they had certain documents that you believed could be helpful to the Do you recall that? Committee's investigation.

- Q Were you in touch with Geomilitech?
- A I did, and they have obviously declined to provide them to me or to you, voluntarily. Because I made the call Saturday, immediately speaking to you and getting your request form, because I do think they are relevant and I think there are other things they have that would be relevant or in the personal possession of Barbara Studley, and/or her son, Michael Marks. But they obviously declined because they did not call me back at any time, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, or today. We have had somebody in the house almost every single hour, and I didn't renew the request.
 - Q To whom did you speak?
- A Michael Marks, who is a graduate of a Florida law school and, I thought, was the best person to approach on it since he would appreciate both the legal propriety, requirements, and reasonableness of your request.
- Q Yes, sir. Marks, for the record is spelled
 - A k-s.
- Q What are the documents, General, that you had in mind that you were seeking from Geomilitech?

30219.0

я

A Well, you had asked me --

Q Yes.

A -- what -- I think you have to put a frame, if we may, for this.

Q Sure.

A You had asked me about Geomilitech's dealings with Latin America, arising out of the newspaper interview that Barbara Studley gave to the president of Geomilitech -- gave to the Washington Post, Ben Vicer and Joe Picarillo; an interview that appeared, I think, about a week ago. It was in that context that I told you that during the time I was there at Geomilitech, from 1 September to 20 February, 1 September '86, 20 February '87, that nothing was sold, bartered, exchanged or provided to anybody down in Latin America. Not only nobody in Central America, but nobody in Latin America or the Caribbean Basin. In other words, there was no business conducted.

I mentioned, I said, to the contrary, there were at least two letters that I authored, and I think there are more than two, but at least two: One to people an one to General Bystillo, the chief of the Salvadoran Air Force, which politely deflected their interests in pursuing, and in the case of General Rystillo, to get some advanced jet aircraft.

My letters politely deflected them from dealing with aircraft -- the earthquake, I'm sorry, correction -- I authored a letter which I signed, saying that it was, that they would probably wish to use whatever scarce resources they had to take care of their earthquake victims and the earthquake needs -- the earthquake had undoubtedly given them other priorities. The aircraft that GMT was offering to them, at an earlier request of General B#stillo, wasn't something that we had -- that Geomilitech had initiated prior to joining them -- was a Fougamagister-type aircraft. That is also not a combat aircraft, although it could be armed. It is a trainer, jet trainer. It is the least expensive jet trainer that they could possibly buy that I know of.

However, when I was asked to follow this, I had two concerns. One was was it in the national interest of the United States to do that. In the case of El Salvador, their economy is a shambles because of the insurgency that they have been fighting successfully, and their banker, really, certainly to all military matters, is the Defense Security Assistance Agency and the Assistant Secretary -- Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Latin America. At that time, Nester Sanchez.

I went over to see Nester Sanchez and told him about the initiative and asked what was the security interests of the United States in/it? And he told me, quite properly, that he could not direct a businessman or a think we would all wish that the world of Central America were such that all of the resources could be applied to meet political reforms, the economic renovation of the whole region, and social justice concerns. That certainly would be my personal agenda if I could ever carry it out. But there is a real Communist threat down there that was a short time ago cating them alive, and there is still a continuing need for certain military items with which to defend themselves. In my opinion, these did not include further advanced jet aircraft.

They had some Fougamagister, that's a French aircraft, which were being retrofitted, upgraded, repaired, renovated, refuselened, whatever you wish to call it, under a government contract.

They had every right to ask for them and it was quite professional for General Bistillo to ask for the most advanced jet aircraft he could get; he's a professional air man. You want to fly the fastest and the highest. That's a professional or parochial desideratum, but the objective reality is not necessarily the same.

So we wrote that letter, and I offered those to you to show you --

Q Yes, sir.

A -- because on another point you asked me something about Geomilitech --

Q Right.

A To show that this was not a corporation that was out there to make a dollar at the expense of U.S. national priorities, or the priorities of the country, or the sensitive concerns of law and ethics,

- G weneral, I appreciate that.
- That's why that is relevant.

EXAMINATION

HY MR. ALBRIGHT:

- Q General, let's go back a little bit. I'm generally familiar with your background, would you give us a bit of your -- give us your military assignment history, if you would.
 - A How far back do you want me to go?
 - A Oh, back to 1978?
- A I think that's probably a pretty good place to begin, because it shows the lack of contact with Latin America. At that time I was the chief of the policy branch at SHAPE Headquarters, in Helgium, a NATO assignment which I held for approximately five years, serving General Haig, who was then the Supreme Allied Commander for Europe as well as the commander in chief for all U.S. Forces, Army, Navy, and Air Force, Marines, in the European Theatre.

I left that assignment and, in 1979, became the director of strategy, plans, and policy in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations, the DCSOPS, it's called, D-C-S-O-P-S, on the Army staff, and that meant that : had an interface on all joint actions. About 90 percent of the joint actions on the Army staff originate in the office of the director, strategy plans and policy, and they run, to use the Pentagon term, the other 10 percent through the join svstem. I left that assignment as a major general in the December January -- December '80, January of '81, to go to the White House as a volunteer, to serve on the National Security Council staff. I very much did not want to go. In fact, I came back from the initial interview to tell the Chief of Staff of the Army that I would probably not be selected because I expressed the desire not to serve there, and he told me very pointedly that he would decide where I served -- where I would best serve the Army.

It turned out that that was exactly the wrong thing to say over there. If I had expressed a salivating desire to serve on the NSC, I might have escaped the assignment. The fact I made clear I didn't want to be there turned out to be exactly what they were looking for.

Q Why was it you did not want to serve there?

A I wanted to be with troops. I wanted to serve with soldiers and I thought I had paid my dues, in order to do that, by my stint on the Army staff from '79 to '80, late '80, and that, hopefully, I would be given a division command rather than another staff assignment in the White House. I had worked in the White House before as an ad hoc assignment as a lieutenant colonel and I had no desire to go back there.

But I was the, in 1981, senior military officer on active duty serving the President of the United States in the White House system. I was Director of the Defense Group, was the title.

In that context, I had responsibility for all of the Department of Detense program, all of arms control, all of the veterans programs, the entire defense budget, and, of course, the area -- the interface with all the area problems: The Middle East, the Far East, Latin America were included in those.

At that time there was nobody, when I first joined, we were waiting the arrival of Dr. Roger Fontaine, a very brilliant, good NSC Staff member who had not come aboard at that point so I, because of familiarity, I would decline to call it expertise -- familiarity with Latin America, had primary responsibility for about a month, month and a half for the Latin American concerns or issues.

In, I guess, about December '81, January '82, (returned to the White House -- from the White House to the Department of Defense and became, at this time, again, the director of strategy plans and policy. And, as an additional duty, the deputy assistant to the Chief of Staff of Operations for Joint Affairs. Responsibilities were, in effect, doubled, and so was the span of control of people with whom I worked.

THE WITNESS: I went there to become the chairman of the General Defense Board, just to finish the chronology, in 1983, a position I held until the summer of '86. I retired on 1 September of '86. That's the relevant points.

MR. SAXON: General, if I can ask you--

Unless there's a typographical error, there appears to be a gap on your resume of career service from November of '81, when you left the SNC, to January of '82. Was there a month-or two there where you --

I was a special assistant to the Chief of Staff for Operations. Actually a good part of that time I was supposed to have left the White House, but the president did not want me to leave. I remained assigned there, continuing to perform duties and tasks. Nothing, incidentally, that would in any way resemble what you are looking into now. Just normal staff duties and assignments.

The reason for my departure was I was asked to give a speech which had previously been cleared and used, which -- before an audience at which there were to be no journalists. I gave the speech, the journalists reported it, and in the rather Byzantine way in which decisions were made in the White House, I was told it would be better if I left. Which I was very happy to do.

The secretary of state, now Mr. Alexander Haig, went to see the president to protest this. The president, he said, he had tears in his eyes but said it's too late. They have already announced it.

I was nonetheless very happy to have that opportunity to leave a job I didn't want in the first place.

- Q You should have given that speech earlier. (Laughter.)
- A All the speech was, incidentally, was a projection of the various threats, all of which I projected -- I'd rather say that than predicted, because there was nothing mystical about it, you just took trends, evidence, laid it out and projected what was going to happen -- all of those threats actuated. My thesis was, it was not, therefore we need a bigger defense budget or we need this or we need that, but rather if you do something about these threats, even incompletely, they will not occur.

I used the analogy of Heisenberg's Law, subatomic physics, might be useful for this Committee. The law of variables. When you study the field, you alter it, and then predicted events do not occur. The law of variables.

I think you might take some comfort in that as you struggle through this, as you described earlier to me as a And that's what I was doing. I was showing you have all these events, but if you attack them with economic, political, social reforms, apply resources modestly, you don't have to apply them totally to do it, then these -- all these different threats, if they don't go away, will at least not come and eat you alive. You can defer them, stop them, prevent them. You can turn them around.

It was a good talk from the standpoint of intellectual content, and there was nothing unreasonable or hysterical or wrongful about it but they chose, because it got media attention which was deemed that morning in the White House mess to be unfavorable by the troika that then decided everything, it was decided I should go.

As I said, I was happy to receive that judgment, but they didn't want me to leave, so that explains most of the gap, although I think a portion of that, late December and early January, I served as a special assistant to the chief of staff, and worked and wrote the paper which is now the reform of the joint chiefs of staff, that whole new system that you on the Hill and the Pentagon are bringing forward.

- Q During your tenure in the NSC Staff, who was the National Security Adviser?
 - A Richard Allen.
- Q And who was the military assistant to the NSC Adviser?
- A Initially we didn't have one. It was John Poindexter and they were going to bring him -- he was nominee, designee. They were going to bring him forward immediately, and I pled with Richard Allen. I said I will do

UNCLASSIFIED_{NC}

but don't make him come forward now. He had children in school, he was in Florida, I think in Pensacola if I have right. I said there's nothing more brutal, cruel or unreasonable than to bring a guy forward unless you really have to have him. Since he's never done this work before, am going to suggest to you we can wait until the kids are of school. That was done.

whatever it is you want him to do additional that I'm doing,

So I did a number of those things or they went undone. But Captain, I think he was Frochtis, a rear admiral, sort of a brevet promotion, John Poindexter came by my recollection May or June of '81.

Q Was there a period of overlap when Admiral Poindexter was there as military assistant and you were likewise on the NSC Staff?

A Yes. He didn't replace me at all. He began doing very nominal duties. I think, in some ways, you could describe what he did as more appropriate for what an operations sergeant in one of our command and control centers would do: You know, posting maps, taking messages. He started as many people do.

In fact, if you go back in history, when, I believe, he was a lieutenant colonel, Al Haig filled a similar position under Henry Kissinger. He was brought in to post maps and explain what a LP was or an OP, and what an ambush meant. He had just come back from commanding in Vietnam. And they wanted more of a technical help, but because he was so good —— the job that he filled grew, the responsibilities grew to where he finally became the Assistant to the President for National Security. Somewhat as has happened to John Poindexter.

ιι

UNCLASSIFIED

Q Could you render for the Committee an opinion as to the professional competence and patriotism of Admiral Poindexter?

A Right, I would like to.

I found him, and it's almost humorous in the context of what I'm reading and seeing -- hearing about today -- to be the most prudent of men, the most honorable of men, and the man most unlikely to undertake any of the initiatives which he is said, in the media, to have undertaken in concert with Lieutenant Colonel Oliver North.

You know, his patriotism, his dedication, his rectitude, his moral sense of propriety, of right and wrong, what you can and can't do under the law, were extraordinarily high. I would say all of the same things about Lieutenant Colonel North, and I will say more when you ask me about him. But Admiral Poindexter, there was, with respect to Admiral Poindexter, there was in my judgment, and it's a humble one and I'll show you how that judgment would change over time, I would not have ever taken as the APNS, or had I been the one to ask — to recommend who this person should be, ever have given the number one graduate of Annapolis — I didn't even know he was the number one graduate, a very humble man, he didn't put that word out to anybody — who had a Phd in hard science — that is not the kind of person that you need on the NSC Staff.

You need somebody with expertise in broad policy, and we'll come to that when we talk about Colonel North.

Q Is it your sense that Admiral Poindexter was a man who followed the chain of command and sought approval or had approval before he acted?

A Yes. And I think that that is one of the reasons that he was selected.

This is opinion, but it's informed opinion because with the context that I have, I've heard a lot of things, that they wanted somebody who would not be threatening.

If you look at the succession of APNSs from Richard Allen forward, with the one who had the most access to the president, was the most powerful and the most effective, in my judgment, was the second one, the judge, coming from State as he did and with access to the president, he had the ability to go in to sigh the president and did.

- You mean Judge Clark?
- Judge Clark. Judge Clark not only could go in, but he would say to the president, Michael Deaver has misinformed you concerning the facts on that situation. Here are the correct facts.

And he could do that without acrimony or venom or vitriol. They just had a relationship where he could say you have not been correctly informed. Here are the correct facts.

Further, Judge Clark did not consider himself to be a foreign policy expert. I think he was a very great But he always brought in the area expert and he would have the area expert make the presentation to the president so when he left -- which was over contentious matters on who was responsible for what and who was going to work in the national security area and who was not, as I understand it -- remember I'm not there so this is not direct knowledge, but again informed -- Bud McFarlane, whom he brought from state to be his deputy, became the APNS.

UNCLASSIFIED

Bud McFarlane is another man whom I have known for many years, outstanding integrity. I could never believe, would never believe he would ever say anything that was untrue. Incidentally I would say the same about John Poindexter.

But he was viewed, because he was not a politica) appointee, as nonthreatening to the people in the White House. Therefore --

- Q "He," to whom are you referring now?
- λ McFarlane. Therefore somebody you could trust.

So there was always from that time forward a tendency to get somebody in there who would, as you described it, would follow the chain of command, would make recommendations, would take orders, and not be an initiator of adversarial actions in the White House system.

- Q Let me follow, then, if I could --
- A I'm giving you all of this, incidentally, under my oath to the best of my knowledge and belief. I can be wrong on this, but you have asked me what I know and what I think.

702-147-1700

UNCLASSIFIED

With the caveat that I can be wrong, I'm presenting it to you as I know or understand or believe the situation to be.

Q We understand that and appreciate it.

Let me follow, if I could, for a moment about Admiral Poindexter. I read what you are saying to suggest that he would have difficulty telling the President of the United States bad news.

A No. I don't think so. Not at all. I think -you know, he's a very straightforward man, and I believe -and I thank you for the question because it gives me the opportunity to show the change.

People have asked me to, and invited me and given me opportunities to, criticize Admiral Poindexter because of his lack of policy expertise and background, prior to coming to the White House. But I would tell you that's nonsense, that anybody who served there as long as he did, seven days a week, he had the benefit of a Harvard-Yale-Princeton-Berkeley-University of Chicago PhD in international relations at the behavioral level because of what he was doing, and the way he moved from step to step, starting with humble tasks and to answering -- returning phone calls, and then working the substance of the papers.

ι

believe that he would present bad news, just as I would. And I think that he would not have hesitated to do that.

Q You juxtaposed a description of Judge Clark to your description of Admiral Poindexter and said that Judge Clark could go into the president and say: Mike Deaver is giving you bad advice. Would Admiral Poindexter go in and say: As you know, we are doing X to carry out your wishes, but you should know that the secretary of defense does not agree, or the secretary of state does not agree, or whatever?

A I believe he would. I know that when I was there, I took — and this will become, I think, very relevant as we go forward because I would imagine one of your questions is going to be: How could all of this happen if it did happen? And I would tell you I don't know, because it could not have happened in 1981, both the way Mr. Allen operated and I operated. Nobody on the NSC Staff could have called over to the Pentagon or anywhere else in the government and put into operation by NSC staffers.

The way I operated was, I made sure that if there was an issue that I was writing on or recommending on, that the departments knew that I was working that action so there were no secret initiatives. They had a copy of my paper. I invited them to give me their comments, either telephonically, if there wasn't time -- often there wasn't, you get tasked to do something in literally five minutes. But, if there was time I would get their paper and attach it to mine.

ι

Similarly, if they initiated the action and I took issue with it, I would give them a copy of my cover memo that went in so they would see that there was somebody on the NSC Staff who was disagreeing with it.

I believe, as I think has been brought out beautifully in the Tower Report, exactly, and articulated it the same way, what the function of the NSC Staff is, to generate options, make sure -- I would express it a little differently than they did -- to make sure that all hobby horses that the different agencies and departments are determined to ride through the halls of the White House are identified as hobby horses; the advantages and disadvantages of all the options are there. Any suppressed options, because some department doesn't want a certain option to get surfaced -- be surfaced together with the risks as well as the opportunities. So you bring the downside and opportunities as well as the downside on every action.

And, as a major general in 1981, there is no way I could have called over to any department and put in train the things that the media says Lieutenant Colonel North did. So, if you ask me how could he have done it, as Mr. Belnick did in an informal conversation before, my answer under oath is: I don't know. I can't even imagine hoe he could have done it.

- Q Let me return to Admiral Poindexter. I assume you sat in meetings with John Poindexter while you were at the NSC?
 - λ Yes
 - Q Was he a frequent note taker?
 - A Yes.
 - Q Did he often take notes?
 - λ Yes, yes, he did. And that was --
 - Q Did he take lots of notes?
 - A That was, I would call, his learning phase.

Remember he came in with this rather special, very distinguished but specialized background, and had not brought him into the policy arena, to my knowledge, and he was always very quiet in the meetings but he took careful notes, he

- Q Do you have any information as to what his practice was, his personal practice, for the care and use and treatment of his notes?
 - A No. And I'm sure that it evolved over time.

I had recommended, along with a Dr. Norman Bailey, that they install the computers. If you wish, I can talk to you about how I think the computers were the nail in this --

- Q My understanding is that came after your tenure --
- A That's right. They didn't arrive until after Bud MacFarland's Lenure. But I tried to get them in early because we were doing, you know, rather, to me, in an unusual way, we were working with stubby pencils on taskings. And we needed some way to communicate back and forth more quickly and to be able to get that up. But there's some disadvantages to that system.
- Q Can you tell us anything about the staffing of the NSC under Richard Allen as the Reagan Administration came into office? What the philosophy was, as you observed it, for staffing the NSC and the kinds of people that Dick Allen selected?

Well, I think he tried to bring in the best possible people he could get. I think there were a certain amount of people from the campaign who they tried to find a place for. Not all of them stayed. But who had legitimate credentials to be there, for the most part. I think there were some junior staffers who should not have been assigned there but put elsewhere in the government. And they are all, now, gone.

The staff structure was to have different groups. I had the Defense Group. There was a foreign policy group. There was an economic group, an intelligence group and, I believe, I recall the long range planning group was formed.

The groups, then, reported to Richard Allen through two deputies. One very capable woman, Jamet Coleson, who had been associated with Richard Allen before and with the campaign; and the other, a tremendous man with great basic instincts and tremendous integrity and a very good man to work with, Admiral Nance, Rear Admiral Nance, retired.

The way that people worked the different groups varied with the individuals. The man who headed, now ambassador in Korea, Jim Lilly, a very outstanding guy, called all the people in the Foreign Policy Group together.

I think it was February, said this is the first meeting of the Foreign Policy Group. It is going to be the last. I'm not interested in things I don't know anything about. You do your own thing. I'm supposed to be in charge of you. If there's anything administrative, I'll pass it down, but you deal directly with Dick, that's Richard Allen.

The Defense Group, I worked in a way where I said I need to know what you are doing. It should come through me. And, in no way will I stop any paper that you wish to send forward, you have total freedom of expression because you are all professionals, civilians, but I want to see what you are doing; and I did run the Defense Group in what I would consider a rational way for the types of activity we were in.

We can't all be on different sheets of music and know that I will, if I think you are wrong, attempt to dissuade you. If I can't dissuade you I'll put a cover memorandum on top of your paper. And I did all of those things.

Q You said Mr. Allen chose to select people who were the best. There are allegations that his criteria for

ıι

 determining "best" tended to be less in the substantive areas as previously NSC advisers and numerous administrations would have selected, and rather, tended to be more ideological.

Did you, from your observations, form that opinion?

A No. No. You know, I think there's a lot of silliness been written about that.

Obviously everybody has some ideology. You do or you wouldn't be in this room. Then, you know, the caricature is to say ideologue. Ideologue is bad; having a ideology or philosophical framework with which you conduct your actions, that presumably is good because everybody has to have that.

I think that they did have people with some very strong views who came in, with the hobby horse approach. But when they were identified, Richard Allen was the first to downweight their papers and assess the thinness of the action. You know, if you got too emotionally involved because you had some private agenda of your own or extreme position on a paper, he would be the first to disabuse the person of that ideal and downgrade the paper from having any significant input.

I think what you have to understand about Richard

UNCLASSIFIED

Allen is that when he came in, you have to have, in a National Security Council, a purpose, a clearly defined purpose.

I would feel that, in the 40-year history, there was always a clearly defined purpose for the National Security Council, until we came to that first year of the Reagan Administration and the clearly defined purpose did not exist. Not because Richard Allen didn't know what it was or want to define it in the traditional sense, as Scowcroft and Senator Tower and former Senator Muskie do in their very good report — but the way the government was being run was by a troika, the way the White House was being run was a troika and the way the government was being run was through a cabinet system. Everybody wanted to do that and nobody really knew whether it was going to work or not. It didn't.

Particularly it didn't in the handling of National Security Council affairs. But Richard Allen was loyal to the concept. He believed, and you should bring him in and let him testify for himself on this, he believed, in my discussions with him, that eventually all this would work its way out and we would come back to the traditional way of doing things in the National Security Council staff. And I think that now has happened.

- Q Let us ask you about Colonel North.
- A But you can't blame it on Richard Allen. I think it would be an injustice to him, and I'm not here as his defense counsel or even a personal friend. It's just an objective fact that he was given a situation that he really didn't agree with or like or know, and knew was not in the best interests of the NSC, the president, or the national security of the -- system of the United States. And he sought to change it.
- Q Let us ask you about Colonel North. I assume he worked for you?
 - A Yes, he did. From August until I left.
 - Q Can you give us an informed opinion about him?
- A Again, here is a man who would -- knew the difference between right and wrong on matters large and small. He had a very finely developed moral sense and conscience, was very respectful of law, national law, legislative law. We had discussions on different issues on that where this came out, who would not knowingly do, I would say, Colonel North that I knew would be incapable of doing anything that he believed was wrong, let alone anything that he knew was wrong or in violation of law.

Now, if he did, then that's a different Colonel North from the one that I knew intimately during the time I worked with him, and continued to know in periodic contacts from the time I left until the time all this occurred. I have not met with him since all this began to happen.

Q In your opinion, was he, as a career military officer, was he the type of individual who would have sought and acted with approval?

A Absolutely. I think, you know, he was — all the good things that have appeared about him, I saw. The hard-working, dedicated, patriotic, willing to exert any effort, very loyal to the president, and he understood what the president wanted to do. And he, as I, was appalled by the way the president had people working for him in the other departments who were determined to subvert his policies, to sabotage them, to leak them, to break down or work against them.

For Colonel North and myself, and I think every military man that I have ever known, this is anathema. We cannot comprehend it.

I worked in very close contact with the White House staff on many items, but especially Latin America at the end of the Carter Administration. I did not agree with many of their positions. But it never occurred to me that I would oppose, other than in argument in meetings in the wells — the situation room — what they were doing. And once the decision was made, I loyally went out and executed it even though I thought it wasn't what we ought to be doing.

I think the interesting thing was at the end of the Carter Administration, those people, David Aaron, Bob Pastor, moved to the right of me as to what we should be doing in Latin America. They became so exasperated with Fidel Castro and the betrayal of their very good, noble aspirations and their idealism and their efforts to achieve peace and stability and economic development in the area that they wanted to do a lot more than I thought was doable or reasonable.

But the point is that, if you are a serving civil servant or military officer assigned to the White House or anywhere in the government, you argue your case, the decision is made and then you loyally carry out those orders, unless you know that it is in contravention of law, the law of Congress, or there is something morally wrong. At which time you either resign or you appeal through the system to an inspector general, to a ombudsman, and now we have all kinds of ways to do that. You know, you can appeal -- you write your Congressman.

- Q General, you have got a long and distinguished military career. You have seen a lot of senior officers and a lot of junior officers, do you consider yourself a pretty good judge of people in the military?
 - λ I think so.
- Q In light of that, and in light of what you've said about Colonel North, as we read the Tower Commission report, as we read and hear and observe things that have unfolded in the last few months, we see descriptions of Colonel North as a loose cannon, a free agent, a national security entrepreneur; how does that fit with your impression of him?
- A That's not the Colonel North I knew. He could have metamorphosized into that, but if he did, he did it without my knowledge and, as I would tell you at some point in these proceedings -- maybe now is as good a time as any. Although I had infrequent but sustained contact with him from the time I left to the 5th of October, I never once heard him discuss with me on an old boy network, or for advice, any of these things that are being revealed.

ì

There could have been a number of reasons. One, that he would know I would oppose all of this. I certainly would have if, indeed, it happened. Two, it -- if it was close hold, then he shouldn't discuss it with me and he didn't. And, three, it may never have happened, or at least happened the way it is being laid out.

Rut I would not believe that he was any of those things. In fact, I have one evaluation that I would respectfully offer on the Tower Report, which I think is an outstanding document by three very great men.

I disagree with only two things in it. One, I think they were too hard on Secretary Shultz and Secretary Weinberger. I know a great deal about the Defense side of it. Less about the State. But I know in the Defense Department, that once the Boland Amendment was passed -- footnote to that, everybody talks about the Boland Amendment there's bicameral legislation that went beyond the Boland Amendment and really replaced it, about what you could and couldn't do in Central America. And, in the Defense Department, the two driving motives were to make sure we obeyed the law scrupulously, and, two, that we didn't do anything that would involve us in any way in contravention of that law.

So when they talk of Secretary Weinberger distancing himself -- and I can't believe that he didn't represent himself very strongly, as being opposed to some of those things -- that's what he had to do to comply with the law. Because if he kept being involved in it, then he wouldn't be in compliance with the law.

I know the Pentagon would not allow discussions on the Contras or what they were doing, except in the intelligence community, the reporting of it. So I think they were unfairly hard on Secretary Weinberger and Secretary Shultz, with all due respect to a great report by three great men.

But on the other point, which is more relevant to your line of questioning, I believe they are wrong fundamentally when they say the system didn't fail, the people did.

No. The system failed. It didn't fail, and I think this was the point of Brent Scowcroft, because I can see his pen throughout that paper, I admire him very much. The point he was trying to make was we don't need new ı

UNCLASSIFIED

legislation. And I believe that very deeply. We don't need a new law. We don't need Congressional direction of how to run White House staff or the NSC. We did need laws initially and they are adequate, effective and they work.

Where the system broke down, if it did break down, was within the White House system itself. And it can be refined or corrected, as I believe the newest APNS,

Mr. Carlucci, is doing. I know him very well.

I think that's a very important point in my humble but still professional judgment. The system did fail.

BY MR. ALBRIGHT:

- Q You stated earlier that Colonel North had identified, and that you had identified, agencies that were trying to contravene the president's -- specifically President Reagan's foreign policy initiatives. What agencies or what particular people were those?
- A Well, I really would like not to have to identify. I will if you insist.
 - Q Well, let's identify agencies first.
- A Well, I think that, if I can just speak to it generally, there were people in the government who, out of conscience, but I think wrongfully formed, took a great deal of pride, a great deal of pleasure in substituting their judgment for the president's judgment in order to subvert his policies. Where I never ran into a military man who would do this, and perhaps there are some, I found some of the civilians would do this because they felt that they were morally justified in doing it.

What that is for me is that's substituting my judgment for the judgment of a system and the president whom I'm supposed to be loyally serving. And I'm saying that because I'm right and he's wrong, I can now reveal very sensitive classified information, which happened time after time. I can ambush programs before they are developed by going to the New York Times or the Washington Post with the outline of a very sensitive classified proposal that is in embryonic fashion, in order to get it out in the press so everyhody will throw stones at it and kill it before it can ever get off the ground, get legs, move around or be fleshed out to be a meaningful program.

I think this is unconscionable. It's wrong. It's in violation of law because it always involved, in my area, national security policy, not talking about other departments or agencies, would involve very sensitive classified information. So, not only is it disloyal but it's against the law.

I don't know if your Committee is going to go intit, but I think somehow some committee of Congress has got the find a solution to the fact that we are, as a government -- I've now watched it over four administration -- incapable of making effective foreign policy because of this growing tendency to take sensitive information, because you oppose the policy that's being proposed, even before it is decided on, and reveal it to somebody in the press in order to kill the idea in the pass.

I think we've really got a serious problem. You can't make effective foreign policy in public. It's a contradiction in terms.

The U.S. District Attorney researched the law, a that time it was the Boland Amendment, we didn't have, as I understand it, the bicameral legislation -- and said I see nothing illegal in this. I have been told that this particular man, whose name I never heard, stepped down, transferred or left -- I believe he left the government, we into private practice.

He'd say I remember we talked, but I wouldn't remember telling you it was okay. He said I do remember telling you it was all right.

Then this man, former district attorney, went into his office and researched the files and found a MFR he wrote that recounted his conversation, said there was nothing illegal in the shipment.

If that's true, all of these things I have just told you are true, and I have no direct knowledge that they are, then I would think that's a very powerful defense for General Singlaub and Barbara Studley, whatever they do, offshore to offshore, without anything coming to the United States.

BY MR. SAXON:

Q Would her involvement in that shipment have been at the request of, direction of, instruction of General Singlaub?

A Certainly not direction or instruction. Possibly the request, but Barbara Studley ran a radio talk show in Miami, and her background in this was, in the way she met General Singlaub, as I understand it, she made a trip to Central America, to El Salvador. She was appalled at the plight of the refugees, not Contras, refugees.

She came back and collected -- put out a radio appeal and medical goods poured into her house. She and her son and others sorted them out, checked dates to be sure the were still valid and good things, and then said now what do do with this?

And called Lucy Taft, who was in the Department of Defense then. She's now running AID. Lucy said, "Contact: General Singlaub." So Rarbara Studley contacted General Singlaub, whom she didn't know, I think talked to him for months over the telephone before she ever saw him, and arranged this humanitarian shipment, totally legal, to Salvadoran refugees, and that was the beginning of her

BY MR. SAKON:

- Q What kind of things were we talking about?
- A Essentially military technology, but not all arms by any means. We would certainly consider arms, the company would certainly have considered arms shipments. But, again, you know, with very strict parameters. Is it Jegal? And I added, is it in the policy interests of the receiving country, to the other parameter, which was is it in the policy interests of the United States to do it?

So, if they were asked to undertake something they would have done so, but only if it seemed to meet legal and ethical standards, so they didn't do any business. Accause nothing that they were asked to do did or nothing that was proposed could be fitted in the parameters.

BY MR. ALBRIGHT:

- Q How would you go about determining --
- A This was not a sleazy arms merchant.
- Q How would you go about determining whether or not an action was legal?
- A That's a good question. Because you can correctly say to any former official of the United States government that you don't know what the national security policy is of the United States, what I did was I worked on my background of what I knew was the policy. The academic background I have had in international relations, which included teaching the subject at the university level, and in the declared public policy of the United States.

So, had we been approached by somebody in the White House or elsewhere in the government to undertake arms to Iran, even though they said, whoever they were, speaking speculatively now, would have said, this is in the national interests of the United States, I would have turned it down. And if the company had taken it, I would have left the company at that point. I don't think they would have.

Q But you didn't seek counsel of attorneys, did you?

A Oh, yes. See, I said earlier in my testimony, if you will recall, on the very first questions from Mr. Helnick, that my first approach to any proposition at all, whether it was an initiative that I thought of or one that was suggested to us or an old case that they had that I was asked to pick up and see if I could revivify it or carry it on — was to make the rounds of the government, United States government at the policy level, to determine if this was in the national interests of the United States or if they

So in two cases I cited, the Department of Defense officials said we can't ask you not to do it. We can't tell you not to do it. And we don't. But we sure hope you don't, because it's going to give us a lot of problems.

You can see what a great businessman I was.

- John Carbaugh was associated with GMT?
- Not to my knowledge, ever. If he was, that's unknown to me. I have heard of his name. I may even have spoken to him once or twice years ago, but he never appeared in the offices. His name was never mentioned. T never saw it in any of the company papers, so that's a new one on me.

John Carbaugh, I think even he wouldn't object to my saying he is a strong conservative, an ideological conservative. He would take pleasure in the title. But he didn't have any input to the company while I was with it or,

General Singlaub was not an officer or an official of the company. I think he gave Barbara advice early on, free. He didn't take money for it.

 - Q Do you know the Swiss bank account name or number?

 - Q Do you know the bank?

A I may have heard it and I might have even have seen it on a piece of paper there, but I don't -- do not honestly remember seeing it or hearing it, and in any case I don't know.

- Q Including the name of the bank?
- ${\bf \lambda}$. No. But there was a bank, there was a Panamanian company. That I know.

- A Barbara Studley.
- Q Turned over this memo to North, you think?
- ${\bf A} = {\bf I}$ think there was a memo that she turned over to Oliver North.
 - Q Why did she turn that over?
- A Recause it spoke of corruption, at least circumstantially, of wrongdoing, of overpricing, of selling to the freedom fighters or the Contras, as some call them, goods that had been donated; of selling poor equipment at over prices and so on. She had a sense of moral righteousness that I think honestly would be supported by the facts.
- Q How did she happen to contact North? Or did North contact her?
- A No, no, she would have made the contact. Well, I don't know. I have to correct that. I don't know. I would think that the contacts would have come from her or through, you know, from her to General Singlaub and then General Singlaub to North. I do know that General Singlaub, back to an earlier question also relevant here, complained to me that he had been barred from the White House because of this legislation.

I know he told me on one occasion that he was talking to the director of the Central Intelligence Agency, of whom much ill will has been written on this subject, that several times he said: Jack, if you mention Nicaragua one more time I'm going to put you out -- throw you out of this office.

So there was evidence, you know, spontaneously given to me before any of these events, that the director of the Central Intelligence Agency was trying very scrupulously to avoid any involvement in supplying arms to the Contras, and I can't juxtapose those statements to you -- to his old friend, General Singlaub, he was at one time

Q You were told this by General Singlaub?

A By General Singlaub, but it was a spontaneous exclamation, and General Singlaub, as you are going to find, is the most honest man you will ever talk to. He wouldn't have told me that if it wasn't true. He wouldn't have told me that he couldn't go into the White House to talk to Ollie North. And why, because of the law?

See, General Singlaub was very overt and very open. He was making speeches, that he was sending humanitarian things. According to Barbara Studley, I never saw it, he even made speeches about the arm shipments to groups. He didn't do anything secretly. He was very open about raising money to help the freedom fighters, and yet he was told by Casey and whenever he would mention Nicaragua, General Singlaub told me in exasperation, he told me: Jack, if you bring that up one more time, I'll throw you out of this office.

Q Implicit in that was that there was something

Q Implicit in that was that there was something being discussed that was, if not illegal, improper?

A No. No. He just wanted to talk about Nicaragua. Say, Hill, we've got to do something about Nicaragua, I don't want to hear about that. We are not going to talk about that. If you do I'll throw you out of here. And the reason was the law. And I know that it was because of the law that Colonel North wouldn't see him for, I think, a very protracted period, maybe a year. Nobody in the White House would talk to him. Recause he was the proponent for direct aid to the Contras.

- Q If Harbara Studley knew to go directly to Colonel North regarding matters --

A I don't think she's ever been in the White House. So, you know, I want to be very careful. I would believe that her memo was transmitted through General Singlaub. And I took, I think the first day I was there, took an envelope or a letter to the White House which may have contained that memo.

- Q My question is do you know how everything seemed to instantly go to Colonel North when it dealt with arms to Central America?
- A Well, he was the officer who was most attentive to working the problem in Central America. I think that was known throughout the interagency arena. But I don't think there was anything from my point of view, there was nothing sinister or wrong or we are going to North because he's managing the effort. I didn't think that when I went over there in September. I went to see him.

normal NSC Staffer doing normal NSC Staff work. You monitor the areas of your responsibility, he had all the covert actions, you write the memos, propose the actions, keep everybody informed and coordinated. I had no idea that he had money, funds, Swiss bank accounts, was managing operations or acting as an operator. And I would say for the record, if he was, that was a mistake in the White House, because nobody in the NSC Staff on my watch, when I was there working part—time as a lieutenant colonel, or today, has the capability to run operations. Nor is the NSC Staff or any place in the White House the correct locus for national security or other types of operations — even intelligence operations.

There is always a place. It's always an appropriate situation — there always can be an appropriate situation when somebody from the White House should be missioned to go out and talk to somebody because they won't listen to the State Department people.

State Department, which he wouldn't listen to or talk to.

In areas of the world where you have people on the NSC Staff who have special connections or relationships with the people from prior service, such as Jeff Kemp did in the Middle East, the best person to put on a plane to send a message from the president would be the NSC Staffer. when I was there we always did that in coordination with the affected agencies, always with State, and I can't think of a time when a trip was undertaken without a State Department representative going.

But some countries everybody, in every bureaucracy, wants to hear it from the top. In some countries they will only take it from the top or they won't believe the message that is being communicated, or you won't have the effect you want.

So, I distinguish between missions like this, which should be secret as opposed to covert. Covert suggests you are operating. But secret because you can't conduct successful diplomacy publicly, in most cases.

I guess my question more is, everyone, whenever anything came up inside the White House, outside the White House, everyone knew that the matter should go directly to somebody who sold out his country to help the United States. Not at all.

He was, rather, a man of vision who understood that the only way you are going to have peace and stability in Central America was in a cooperative process with the United States. And a lot of people down there don't understand that today.

- Q What about Claridge? Did you speak with Claridge?

 - Q In what context did he tell you this?

incarderation. And this individual, I've heard the name, was very vindictive for whatever his reasons, and was picking the worst possible prison to send who didn't even speak English.

And the judge had spoken from the bench about sending him to one of the more favorable places. There are no country clubs in the federal prison system. But this was at least a more humane and reasonable place, especially with an effort being made to get him a parole. And it was on this issue that Colonel North told me he had to go to see Trot to keep him from being sent to this very difficult place.

But I know that Colone! North and Mr. Raymond Burghardt
Burkwhart were honorably and properly working to see that the mitigation and extenuation matters be brought forward for consideration. I never asked them what they were doing or how they were doing it.

I only asked him, I said: Here are the facts as know them. If you agree, would you please assist. That was the extent of my interventions with him at all times.

O What about Nester Sanchez?

A Well, I had a close relationship with him on several counts. Anything that I did as the director of strategy plans and policy, the deputy assistant chief of staff for operations and joint affairs that touched on Latin America would coordinate with him.

Then, when I was the chairman of the Inter-American Defense Roard, of course I had many occasions to coordinate with fim. He was one of the many masters that I had, because it's an international appointment, you don't answer to your U.S. authorities alone, you have to answer to everybody. But I gave very careful attention to anything he said. And I talked to him in the same way I talked to all the others.

- Q And what was the nature of this position at that time?
- A Deputy assistant secretary for Latin American -for Latin American in DOD.

When I first met him, he was in the Carter Administration, working with the Central Intelligence Agency. That was my first contact with him. That is when I was saying in the White House, in the situation room coming from the Pentagon, the places is in flames, we don't even care about it, we are going to lose the whole region, whole area, whole hemisphere to communism and we are going to have the war that's starting — this was '79, '80, starting in Central America, we are going to have it on our doorstep on a 1900-mile border on the Rio Grande, because we don't even care. We are not even paying any attention to it.

He attended that meeting and I outlined, I said the first step is to build up an intelligence collection effort because that will at least tell us what's going on. We don't even know that.

It had been deliberately destroyed earlier in the Carter Administration. I said it will take five years to get a return, you know, get it completely restored. But for a year not much will happen, but at the end of a year you'll start to get some return. We need to do that.

(Discussion off the record.)

HY MR. SAXON:

Q What could you tell us about any knowledge you have of Nester Sanchez's involvement in the Iran-Contra affair?

UNCLASSIFIED INC.

UNCLASSIFIED

A My direct knowledge is he had no involvement and only the knowledge that you would get through intelligence channels or reporting. But my firsthand would be limited. I think more significant is the fact that the people who worked with him, when I would ask them, is -- after all this broke -- are there going to be any problems with Nest#r? I was always told none. He's clean.

These are the men who work with him, and I would judge that, telling me that privately, I would give that more weight than if we were in a hearing room, and maybe you heard that.

So I would believe that maybe he wasn't involved. I would also believe that he knew a great deal, because he should know a great deal through the reporting channels. What he knew, as to what was being done or not done, I don't know.

- Q In the normal course of business in doing his job would he have any reason to go to Switzerland?
- A To ski. I don't know why he would go to Switzerland, no. That's not the normal chartered area for the deputy assistant. In fact, it isn't for anybody unless you are in arms control working with one of the commissions

ι

that are in Geneva. I don't know of any DOD people who ever went to Switzerland, except for arms control, on business.

But I know a lot of people who went there, including myself, on vacation, who then didn't do any business there or any banking.

- Q What can you tell us, if anything --
- A You are usually broke when you go through that little coin exchange. You get all those little tiny coins that are so valuable, take so many of your dollars.
- Q What if anything can you tell us about Michael Timpani?

A He is an employee at -- with GMT, and he, prior to coming to GMT flew missions. He's a very skilled, accomplished and sophisticated helicopter pilot who at one time had been with the special forces support. He flew missions in Latin America as a civilian, not in the military. And not for or with the United States Government. But for -- in support of Eden Pastora, and a very valuable resource because he knows all those airfields, knows everything that happened down there during the time he was flying those missions. And I don't know when he started and whether he stopped. He never did anything of that nature

ι1

UNCLASSIFIED

after he came to GMT, which would have been about August.

Q He was an employee of GMT at the time you were there?

A Yes. He was there before I came there and he's still there now. A very fine man. I think if you call him here, you'll be very impressed with him, with his honesty and knowledge. Just a straight arrow.

Q Do you have any knowledge of any role he has had in private supply operations to the Contras?

A What I just said. He knows -- would know, I would think, a great deal about it and would -- and did participate in some of those missions, but I'm very sure that he was not flying or operating for the CIA, nor did he think he was. So it would have been private efforts. He was certainly not doing it for Barbara Studley or for GMT before he came to work for them.

Q Do you have any knowledge of his having flown arms to the Contras?

A No. But he may have. But I don't have any knowledge. I would assume that if you were flying support, you would have flown everything.

Q Is there anything we have not asked you today

30219.0

UNCLASSIFIED

which you -- which was in the request for information which you think we should know.

A Thank you for the question.

No, sir. I really don't, now that you brought out the Michael Timpani thing. That would have been the only thing that would have worried me if we hadn't gotten that covered. Other than Michael Timpani, Barbara Studley and General Singlaub -- and I only know bits and pieces of conversations on that -- I don't know of anybody who has done any of the things that are in point 7, is providing assistance or support of any kind and I have not done any of that, either before -- when I was on active duty, during the time I was at TMT, or subsequently.

And I might say that I feel a little guilty that I haven't provided some support for the freedom fighters, because I think in an it's not an exaggeration to say the survival of the United States is at stake in the events that are unfolding in Central America. I would like to put this on record for the Committee. I think it would be a terrible mistake if what comes out of all of this, all these six investigative bodies that are at work, that we end up punishing the freedom fighters instead of whoever it is that а

did whatever it was that somebody might finally adjudge was wrong. I think we will have addressed the wrong problem.

And I honestly believe, this is one thing I did want to say, was that the problem originated with the Congress. If Colonel North and Admiral Poindexter and others went into unprecedented and unusual activities to support it it was because of the legislation, with the ambiguities that were believed to have been deliberately left in it. And you have to trace, you know, step by step, as I have done, the various Boland amendments and the bicameral legislation. In fact, they said we are not satisfied with it. We are going to turn it over to our intelligence committees, let them worthe language, and they said not to preclude providing advice or intelligence information.

If you are going to provide advice and intelligence information, how can you do that without radios? So you can argue, not with casuistry but with simple logic, and you know the rule of the normal -- the reasonable prudent man, the standard of law, that that would allow the provision of communications equipment.

There were a lot of ambiguities in the legislation and there's a lot of conflicting legislation. I think I would invite you to look at and to make a matter of record for this Committee, the preamble. I sought — I was almost late getting here trying to look for it. If I find it, I'll send it to you. The preamble in the Foreign Security Assistance Act of 1961. We amend that every year, sometimes every two years, but almost every year, and we have never taken out of it the core language that says what everybody in the United States government is supposed to do is with a great deal of vigor, pursue the fight against communism in the hemisphere on every front, military, economic, political, social, and use the OAS to organize under the Rio Treaty to stop communism in the theatre. There's a Cuban resolution, 8333, I think it is, still on the books.

For me, when you pass a specific amendment like the Boland amendment, that takes precedence. I observe the spirit even more than I had to, as well as the letter of the law. But if people wanted to argue that there were other things that could and should be done, I think they might be justified, with lawyers helping them and arguing the contrary.

My own position was that all this was wrong, and I said I didn't know what they were doing or were about to do.

UNCLASSIFIED

But when the amendment was passed, I said what we should do is go back to the Congress and go all out to get this changed and make the case, you know, head-on in the main. I said whatever you do, don't try to go around it or underneath it. That would be a big mistake. And I personally believe this is why I was cut out, because my position was take it head-on, make a fight for it on the merits and get the legislation changed because of what is at stake, and get the president and the media behind you by making the case.

Q Let me ask you if you brought with you any documents or supporting evidence you wish to leave with us.

A I have not, sir. No, sir. I have none. I did go through all of my files and I have destroyed nothing. I did tell you that when I left active duty, I destroyed 17 boxes of classified documents from the Pentagon and from the White House which I had been holding in case there were any investigations or questions on anything. But I no longer had a repository for them when I came off of active duty. So I destroyed them, not by myself but by turning them back into the Pentagon to be shred after bringing in all kinds of people to look at them and say, is there anything here that's useful to you? Some of those would be, perhaps, helpful in

BY MR. ALBRIGHT:

O I will just ask you some questions about Yellow Fruit, General.

You are familiar generally with the Yellow Fruit operations, is that correct?

A Yes. Only after it came under investigation under that name. I did not know, to the best of my knowledge and belief, that they were designated Yellow Fruit until after all the investigation started.

I have testified before several investigations on the events that came out of that operation and alleged wrongdoing that occurred over the use of funds, and I would defer to my better recollection at earlier dates, but I am telling you now under oath that my best recollection is I never heard Yellow Fruit until they were being investigation, although I knew of the operation without that name.

O Did you know of any Swiss bank accounts or any other foreign bank accounts in which Ollie North was involved?

A No, absolutely not. Nor did I know of any connection of any Army bank accounts that were put at his disposal, nor did I know that the Army had any Swiss bank account or any agency of the Army.

O Fow did you identify Yellow Fruit? When you knew of its existence, how was it identified to you?

A Only as an intelligence gathering operation, and in that respect the Army would be only deserving accommodation for it. They were collecting what I understood at the time from the intelligence community was about 80 or 90 percent of all of the intelligence that was being collected in Central America with respect to the activities of communist guerrillas both inside Nicaragua —the Sandinista government and the revolution they were exporting to their neighbors, notably El Salvador and also Honduras and Costa Rica.

The Army was collecting -- and we shouldn't, I don't think, go into any details on this as to how they were doing it -- sophisticated means, intelligence that pertained to the activity of these communist guerrillas.

I know of no other activity in which anybody connected with the Army was involved at the time other than simply the collection and analysis of intelligence.

O How would you distinguish Yellow Fruit operations from other operations? How did you know when someone talked to you that they were talking about Yellow Fruit?

A I am sure I didn't at all times and places because I never knew that the operation was designated Yellow Fruit, to the best of my knowledge and belief today.

O What I am asking is how would it be designated to you that you were discussing the operation that you later came to know was Yellow Fruit?

A Generally through the information that I was given in briefings from the people in the Special Operations Division of the Operations Directorate under the Assistant Chief of Staff or the ADSCOPS of the United States Army or Lieutenant General Mahaffey, now dead, predecessor Pichardson, now General Officer, Retired, I think with a stroke or some other disability. Those two men had responsibility for a number of directorates, one of which was mine, Strategy Plans and Policy, so I was Assistant Chief of Staff. The Army described me as the senior war planner for the Army.

And the other directorate was the Operations

Directorate. They would do the day-to-day operations. It was headed by a Major General. There were three -- at the time I was there -- different men. There would be an obvious interface between the operators and the planners, the strategists, which my directorate encompassed.

When these people from the Operations Directorate would come up to get, using the Army parlance, a "chop," a coordination on one of their proposals or to seek assistance or to brief, that is when I would know what they were doing. Everything that I knew -- this was 1981-1982 and into the spring of '83 -- was very proper. I knew of no operational activities in which the Army staff or any Army agency was engaged.

O So the aspects of Yellow Fruit that were later prosecuted or aspects that were investigated, you had no knowledge of until the investigation began, is that correct?

All the time that I was on active duty, the Pentagon as an institution and the Services, especially to include my own, were absolutely scrupulous about -- I would say to a fault -- about noninvolvement in the contras.

In other words, I think you could fairly have looked to the Services to do contingency planning in case the law was rescinded. To the best of my knowledge, no such planning was done in order to make sure that there was a complete wall and a very careful obedience of what was first called -- was the beland amendment and continued to be called that when it really bicameral legislation by both houses of the Congress.

intelligence community, especially to include the Director of Central Intelligence and certainly the Army Chief of Staff and the Secretary of the Army.

I would disbelieve, because of the hierarchical nature of the Army, that you would have anything like a rogue or an independent operation of this kind taking place.

I was briefed on the results of it. I do know that at least on one occasion -- and I don't think that it was this company -- but the Army had such a cover company and they were very much embarrassed because it was making money and they had to turn in and account for the monies that were being made, and this created a great bookkeeping problem.

Funds had been appropriated for a cover company.

The company sets up business, and it is all disbursing. But the company starts making money, what do you do with the money? And I know again they were turning in the profits, and what on earth do you do with all these profits, because the system wasn't geared to receive profits.

But I know scrupulous regard extended to that turning in the money, and it may have been the same company, but I don't know.

had a debate as to the feasibility of doing that.

I was the operator, the strategy, plans and policy guy, and General Bill Odom was a close friend of mine. In fact, when he was out of favor because of his service as a Colonel with a forced issue promotion to Brigadier from Mr. Brzezinski, that didn't go over very well in some circles of the Army.

They were going to put him into exile, into oblivion out at Fort Huachuca, when the Carter Administration wound down, and I said this is the smartest man in town. He is the best Brigadier General you have got. You need to bring him over into the building and use him because he could do anything. He could be, as I said then, as a Brigadier, a three-star DCSOPS man, the operator, not intelligence but an operator, in Operations. He could be the DESOPS, but certainly a future ACSI, A-C-S-I, Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence.

They canceled his orders to Huachuca and brought him back. I was in the White House when I made those recommendations. They assigned him to the building, and he did become the Assistant Chief of Staff for Intelligence.

I now return from the White House, and he and I had a debate over the proper locus for an organization that I thought might get into Operations. I said to him, "Bill, as long as you are the ACSI, I would have no problem because you are as competent as the DCSOPS, the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations, to run such an activity, but I wouldn't be that confident with some of your predecessors or some of your likely successors."

So as I testify now to you with this recall, obviously there was going to be an operational context of this, or I wouldn't have raised that objection. But I knew of none, Mr. Albright. I knew of no -- that part of my testimony I come down firmly on that I knew of no proposed plan or carried out operational activities, although it would not be wrong for the Services to do this provided it was properly and legally directed by the Director of Central Intelligence and all fit into some kind of master plan with the Congressional oversight committees having knowledge and then providing the holy water for it.

A Before you ask many questions, because we are at a transitional bridge here, let me pick up on Mr. Albright and come right to your point, and I will respond to your questions.

When I was asked to come here before, I had a subpoena to bring in every single piece of paper from January 1981 to date, and I told Mr. Albright very truthfully I had none but I would continue to search my files.

After I spoke with you on the telephone, I found a piece of paper that I believe is relevant under the original subpoena of Mr. Albright, and specifically relevant to what you want to ask me about GeoMiliTech.

- A August.
- Q August of 1986?

A Right, and the reason I can help you date that — and it may have been June or July. It wouldn't be later than August — the reason I can tell you that is there is a time line in the document that says something to the effect that they need — due to the fact funds from Congress will not be available until after September — I don't think they are available yet — and then he implies that the opposition will fail.

And I don't remember his giving me the document, and I certainly didn't read it, but I do remember him telling me -- this is General John K. Singlaub, whom you are going to be taking testimony from shortly -- I do remember him proposing an idea to me when I was still on active duty, that we try to get the government to establish some sort of letter of credit as a way of -- not getting around, but solving a problem of nonavailability of funds.

I told him that I didn't think it would be legal, and I said, "You would need to communicate that not to me but to the Director of Central Intelligence, and his General Counsel should look at it and see if you could legally do this."

You know, the idea of taking a letter of credit and using that letter of credit to obtain the arms for the freedom fighters, or the contras as they are called. Their needs were desperate. In my judgment, they weren't for weapons. They were for other things. But they had many desperate needs, and indeed they were going to run out if this process of releasing the funds that had been approved in the summer continued to go on, the delay continued to go on.

So General Singlaub's idea of a letter of credit was innovative and worthy of consideration, but I suggested

I didn't think it would be legal and it would need a lawyer to opine on it.

The normal way of acquiring covert arms either by the CIA or anyone is by way of a letter of credit, a payment of a letter of credit for the covert arms. The only unusual wrinkle about this letter appears to be combining a letter of credit with what amounts to a loan of several weeks to a month.

- A That's right.
- O Am I correct that what General Singlaub is trying to persuade you to do was to intervene to persuade the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency to approve a loan arrangement?

Is that what he's looking for?

A That's certainly the way I interpreted it, and that's why I said I didn't think it was legal, and because I didn't think it was legal, I made no effort to talk to anybody in the United States Government about it. I told General Singlaub -- he said, "I don't agree with you." I said, "Well, then, you're free to go, you know, if Casey won't see you, why don't you write a letter to him?" So I think the letter probably followed the oral proposal.

I do remember that he told me later that they said it couldn't be done legally, and then General Singlaub -- and I'd like to get this on the record -- then dropped it. You know, once you tell him that you can't do it because it's not legal, he is not going to continue to pursue it. He's a very honorable man. One of the most honorable men I have ever met.

128

- Q The bank that's referred to in this letter as "our bank," do you know which bank that was?
 - A Yes.
 - O Was it the Banque National du Paris?

A No. The reason I'm smiling as I answer your question is, very obviously, from the context of the letter, the bank is the bank of GNT, and as the executive vice president, I was absolutely walled off from knowing or having any contact with the bank or the banking activities. I do not even know the last name of their banker. I heard the name "Lou" mentioned, but I don't know his last name, and I don't know the names of the people in Switzerland.

I never went on any of Barbara's several trips.

At one time she attempted to bring me out of Asia, where I was on a business trip having nothing to do with this, to join her in Switzerland. I was very uncomfortable with the notion of meeting a woman in a hotel in Switzerland, and when I could see no possible business connection for the trip. So to her great annoyance, I didn't join her. Had I done so, I probably would have learned a great deal about the banking activities, but I did not go.

UNCLASSIFIED

- Q But you did not know at the time you received this letter, and you do not know now the bank in Switzerland that's being referred to in this letter?
 - A No, I don't.
- Q And you have had no occasion to discuss that bank with General Singlaub?
- A No.
 - Q Nor did you discuss it with Ms. Studley; is that correct?

A Never. Now I suspect that at some time in my association of several months at GMT, I may have seen a piece of paper with the name of the bank on it. In fact, I may, as later questions will reveal, have given the name of the bank on a piece of paper to at the Central Intelligence Agency, but I cannot recall the name of the bank nor do I recall seeing such a paper.

Q One of the things that's a curiosity to me is that this suggest that GMT had a Swiss bank account. As you're aware from your testimony, it has been the position of GMT that it was not involved with the 1985 transaction that went by way of Swiss bank accounts.

Do you know whether or not GMT maintained a Swiss account?

- A I absolutely know that they did.
- Q Do you know in whose name the Swiss bank account was?

A Well, this is the problem. Whenever I asked Barbara Studley for a picture of the company's business, she took great offense and said, on one occasion, "I don't ask you for your personal bank statement, and you shouldn't ask me."

One of the reasons I left GMT is, you could not divide GMT as a corporate entity from Barbara Studley, personally. So Barbara Studley did maintain at least one, maybe more, Swiss bank accounts, and I know that as a fact. I do not know that those Swiss bank accounts were in any way used to transact any arms shipments to the contras. I

O The reason I got that impression is because, with regard to the discussion of the July 1985 arms shipment you had indicated in your testimony that that took place before GMT was formed; is that correct?

A I testified to that, because that's what Barbara had told me, that this thing had been conceived or while she was starting GMT.

O You were not aware that GMT Corporation was formed in 1983; is that right?

A I absolutely was not. I have never been given any of the charter documents on it. In fact, I can tell you under oath that I was told it was started in 1985, I think, within a year or a year and a half ago. That's what I was told when I was there. If I had been told that before I joined it, I don't think I would have joined it. I think I told Mr. Albright that I send a lot of desperate messages to The Almighty. I have never received a direct response with lights on the wall, being woken up in the night with a vision. Barbara said, and I think she believes, that she had received a commission from God to form this company.

Q In terms of how you became an officer of this company, could you describe in some detail, with dates, how you were approached to join the management of GMT?

A By General Singlaub. He explained to me that Barbara was a very good woman, a born-again Christian, who wanted to do good, that she was very supportive of U.S. foreign policy and would never do anything to violate foreign policy, but she was desperately in need of someone to act as a chief of staff and executive vice president, who would then become the CEO of the company, that she wanted to relinquish control and turn the key over to would fit my skills, which are management, and since it was other countries, to bring technologies and assistance to other parts of the world, that fitted in with my background and also my personal desires, which was kind of make the world a little better place to live.

I was told that Parbara was totally disinterested in money, had no desire for any profit at all. Barbara reinforced that in the initial meetings with her, and, indeed, she would tell you that. She told me that the last week I was there.

- Q When were you approached by General Singlaub.
- A I think as early as maybe July.
- Q July 1986?

A I think when I was in the hospital at Walter Reed. I would have retired earlier, if it had not been for the hospitalization, so his asking me was certainly proper and my listening to him was certainly proper, but I made no decision until I was out of the hospital. I know you can legally do that, but I chose not to. I didn't go around to any other companies, although several had asked me if I would be interested in coming to work for them. - Q He did not indicate to you then or at any other time that he had acted as the authorized representative for GMT with regard to, for example, the sale of Israeli military hardware?

O After the first conversation with General Sinlaub, you indicated an interest, is that correct, in joining GMT? You told him you would be interested in pursuing it?

A Well, he, at that time, had offered me a position out in the Philippines with the work that I am now doing, and I weighed both, and he said, "The most urgent need is that Barbara desperately needs help," that she was totally disorganized and she needed assistance in the Washington office. Since I was still recovering from the surgery, that seemed, for personal reasons, the correct thing, you know -- what should I say? Not correct, but the most logical thing to do.

the same day, General Bob Kingston and General Gordon Summer and General Singlaub were all present, to the best of my recollection, and at that time, she discussed different activities that the company was doing in a very positive, enthusiastic and optimistic way.

Q What was your understanding of why Generals Kingston, Summer and Singlaub were present?

A It was vague. I think General Kingston was a consultant who would be paid when he was activated, given consultancy, and I don't know whether General Summer also fell under that rubric, because I never saw the books, or was there as a personal friend, which he certainly was.

- Q And General Singlaub was present for what purpse?
- A In the same capacity. Personal friend and supporter. The review was a very incomplete and disorganized review of the files or cases, as they called them.
- O Let me stop you. What they were doing was outlining for you in an incomplete way, the nature of the business of GMT?
 - A Right.

at that point?

What it's purported to be was that it was certainly not solely an arms brokering agency, although it would do that, if the cause were right, meaning legally correct to engage in within the constructs of declared U.S. foreign policy -- public foreign policy. But that it was also engaged in interfacing other technologies with different countries for the betterment of the peoples of those countries.

Was anything said about the relationship between GMT and either the State of Israel or Israeli arms manufacturers?

The wall of her office was filled with Israeli plagues and she held herself out to be a very strong supporter of the State of Israel, with a lot of connections at the highest level, heads of state, ministers of defense, and she had an office which I only bit by bit came to learn about and still don't know all of it, which was maintained in Tel Aviv, which she then closed, when she suspected the man who was running it of corruption and possible illegal dealings.

Q What is his name?

I'm sorry. With the jet lag, I can't recall, but he was an Israeli Air Force officer. I never met him -- who had retired and who was -- if he did anything wrong -- I'm very sure about this from all the conversations that took place, private and otherwise, in the office, and the obvious pain with which Barbara spoke of him, that he was moonlighting. He was doing free lancing, using her expense account, telephone, salary and office fees, in order to do that. There was a great deal of -- I think I testified this to you, and I probably even remembered then his name. I believe his first name was Ron. There was a great deal of activity, but there was never any production. Hundreds and hundred of phone calls, lots and lots of air travel, and I would just tell you , if the three of us wanted to go to the Nagev Desert and export oranges to Florida, if we put that much energy into it, we could successfully do that. You wouldn't fail to sell some oranges in Florida with the amount of activity and energy and the ability that this man obviously had.

When Barbara saw all the activities that he was

There was a story in the German press, I believe "Der Spiegel," but I'm not sure if that was the one, that linked him to the illegal sale of arms to Iran, at the same time or roughly the same period that he would have been with GMT. I can absolutely tell you that Barbara knew nothing at all about that and was shocked, dismayed, and that when this surfaced, that was subsequent to her firing him by possibly a year.

The "Washington Post" relentlessly pursued this story with a view to exposing Barbara and GMT as being part of the arms to Iran thing. I'm pretty sure they weren't.

- Q When was the Tel Aviv office closed?
- A I don't know. You'd have to get that from Barbara.
 - Q But it is closed?
- A It predated my service there, I would say, a good year and maybe more. It may have been closed in the summer of '85. I would defer to Barbara's testimony and her records.

Q In terms of what you know about why that operation was closed, it's based upon what Studley told you long after the fact; is that correct?

A That's correct. But I will tell you, Mr. Kerr, because she deserves her due on this one, I certainly wasn't suspicious of what she was doing in the past or what she was even doing at the time I was with her. I took issue with her on her concept of a just profit, but I didn't have any difficulty in believing, from the context, the particulars and the general thrust of the conversations and her philosophy, that she would never engage in any transactions of arms to Iran. I don't personally believe she would ever have done it, if she had been asked to do so by the White House.

O In terms of the meeting with the three generals and Mrs. Studley, were you given an outline of their expectations of you, if you were to take a position with GMT?

A No. Very strange. I wasn't. In fact, it didn't seem to be that kind of a meeting at all.

Q Did there ever come a time prior to you actually becoming an officer of GMT, that you were told what was expected of you, given an outline of what it was you were susposed to accomplish?

A No. Except it was to run the company. So let me amend that. I was told to take over and run everything. Then I found out I couldn't run anything. I couldn't run administration; I wasn't privy to the finances, and I began to get the impression that my real purpose there was sort of a cardboard cutout, a person who, at least in Barbara's eyes, was influential, who would then be presented in an officer form, and on the basis of that, on her part, perceived influence, would then be able to put a transaction through. And I think it was painful for her to learn that a lot of the things that she would have liked me to do, I could not do, because of the conflict of interest and the ethics laws or that I wouldn't care to involve myself in.

Q Let me pursue that a bit further. Did there ever come a time before you actually became an employee of GMT that there was anything in writing setting forth your duties — a contractual letter of understanding?

- A No.
 - Q And offer? Anything of that kind?
 - A No, never anything like that. She said she had a

She couldn't bring me in and say, I got a bad check and we can't make good on it. I put it to you that any banking system is going to let you down if you play it that close to the line.

 very little evidence of that. She put in, I think, about

O Do you, today, have knowledge of where she actually got the financing for this operation?

A No, I have no knowledge of where she ever got any of her financing. I know she had many different efforts that she would conceive in her mind. She went to many different people to seek money, and it was on a month-to-month basis. It all had to do with a trust fund she had, which she had created sometime ago and was an irrevocable trust. I believe it's in favor of her son, but I really don't know. Irrevocable on his part, breakable on her part, but only at enormous cost. It would cost her millions of

From time to time, she would introduce me to people that she said she was trying to borrow money from and give me their names, but, you know, they didn't stay with me. They were businessmen, always friends of hers, who would be introduced to me in the office and then would leave, and I would never see them again.

he was with an organization called Falcon Wings, which I know a little bit about. A very honorable and good aviation company out in the southwest.

- O In terms of the business that Tympani had done with either Ms. Studley or General Singlaub, do you know what business it was?
- A It was to try to, you know, broker airplanes -- noncombat aircraft from a seller to a buyer.
- Q Was he doing that on behalf of General Singlaub and Ms. Studley?
- A I think one of the aircraft that he had an interest in -- this is long before I came there -- was to get an airplane for the contras or for El Salvador, a gift. I think he may have been the man who flew the Lady Ellen down there.
 - Q A helicopter?
- A Yes. It's been in all the media reports. I'm just not sure of what his connection was because it never came to light when we were there, except he had flown either at General Singlaub's beheat or recommendation, or perhaps even directly for General Singlaub, and I suspect he wasn't reimbursed anything, or very little.

He may have been reimbursed as a pilot when he was flying for Eden Pastora. And I think that connecting him with Barbara Studley at a salary perhaps of about 40,000 a year was a way to get him some compensation for the patriotic -- and I put that in quotes -- work he had been doing before. A very honorable young man.

Q Do you have any knowledge of the role he had played in the trip that General Singlaub and Ms. Studley made to Costa Rica to meet with Eden Pastora on March 23, 1986?

A None. And I knew nothing of that trip at the time they made it or immediately thereafter. I only came to learn of it in bits and pieces.

There's a picture of Barbara Studley and Eden

Pastora and General Singlaub obviously down in that area on the wall of her office.

Q What was Timpani's function at GMT at the time you joined GMT?

A He's a very capable aviation expert. He handled aviation matters. That was another one of the problems. He was supposed to be, along with Michael Marks, one of my employees.

But, Barbara Studley repeatedly broke that chain of authority of command and went directly to them.

I would see little notes that would be on the General Secretary's desk asking him, quote, "Here's an aviation conference. Do you think we should go to it?"

Right up to the week that I left.

But, Barbara Studley tended to regard him as a son and told me that, and I tried to get her to work, you know, through a system, so if she wanted to task them, she'd task me and I would task them or at least be knowledgeable.

I didn't intend to be a bottleneck. And I explained to her if I was going to be an effective vice president, I had to be in charge of these two people. I was never in charge of her son.

- Q Timpani was still in the employ of GMT at the time you left; is that correct?
- A That's correct. And I don't know if he's still there now. I would think he is.
- Q So we have gone through Ms. Studley, yourself,
 Mr. Timpani. What other employees were there?

You'll get the same information from Barbara, but if you want an independent source who is no longer associated with GMT, Cynthia would tell you the truth, and I believe she would tell you what I'm telling you.

Barbara shut it down, not because she thought he was doing any business with Iran, but because she thought he was up to something and couldn't figure out what it was and got rid of him.

O Let me put the question to you this way. In terms of what Mrs. Studley was unhappy about Ms. Breining for, did it have anything to do with a refusal to alter books or anything to do with the books?

A Oh, I don't know. I think it was more personal habits, that she found shortcomings, as you will in any secretary.

But there were also great strengths that were present.

Q You know of nothing relating to her accounting duties that caused Mrs. Studley to --

A No, other than that she felt she didn't do the accounting properly. Let's see. I can give you one thing. That she transferred money to the wrong account.

I was never told which were the two accounts, the wrong and the right one. I was told she had left sensitive files out. Files, incidentally, which Barbara said I wouldn't even want you to see.

- O Do you have any idea what those files relate to?
- A No, I don't. And now you can see all the things that led up to my wanting to resign.
 - Q Apart from Ms. Breining, what other employees were there?

A There came, a very good woman whom you should call in, a young girl, I would guess about 28, in her midtwenties, Fran. I think her last name was Hovey or Povey -- H-o-v-e-y or P-o-v-e-y.

You can get her name from GMT. She became the accountant and one of my concerns that I expressed to Barbara was Fran knew all the details of the banking arrangements and I knew none of them.

I said, "Here we've got a person supposedly as an assistant secretary," which is what I was told, to assist Cynthia because of Cynthia's alleged shortcomings in the secretarial area -- to do the accounting, do the secretarial work and the accounting.

But it turned out that Fram, who was quite cooperative when I asked her to do anything, regarded herself as Barbara's personal and private accountant.

Now you see the running together of the person of Barbara Studley and her financial transactions with the company. If you need a source who is totally knowledgeable in a way that I never was, even a fraction of all the financial transactions, this would be Fran.

A They refused to give me one as of this morning. They said they couldn't and I shouldn't have one. So I asked for a statement on company stationary, signed by at least Fran as the accountant but attested to by an Arthur Sullivan -- there's another name for you -- their auditor.

And Fram, with almost hostility, told me that I had no right to ask for it -- she implied I had no right to ask for it.

Q Just out of curiosity, how did you report your 1986 taxes?

A I did get a W2 for '86.

Q So you don't have one for 1987?

A I didn't have one and I requested one or at least some kind of voucher. Before I came in the Army, I worked at a series of jobs and positions in journalism and labor unions and humble occupations. It could be July, they gave you a W2. And your problem is to save those so you didn't have to rerequest them when the time came.

And I was very surprised. But it was more than just not getting them. They didn't want to give me one and didn't want to give me any real accounting, so by pressing Fran to the point of annoyance in March, I finally got an unsigned, typewritten list of what was paid.

But there was no signature on it and I didn't have a comfortable feeling that these payments had been made, and I think with some testiness, Fran said they had when I asked her very politely if the payments had been made and said, "Could I please have some showing of this?"

And she explained it was part of financial difficulties. I said, "Well, I shouldn't be bearing the brunt of those, but I'm willing to do it."

So she asked me or Fran to hold the check and I did for a couple of days, all of which is very strange, very unprofessional, very unbusiness-like.

And when I got the check, I couldn't comprehend it because it didn't make any sense. I asked for statements and I think I got one in pencil. And I finally got it telephonically, so the statement I'm holding right now in my 1987 estimated tax is a handwritten statement which is the most comprehensible one. Fran is very insistent that they have and I'll accept that. But I'd still like to have a voucher or a piece of paper or a check stub or something that shows this, you know, with a name on it, and that's what I asked for this morning.

And as you may know, the traditional practice in the State of Israel, as in many countries, is once you leave government service, either in the Foreign Office or the Ministry of Defense, you enter into one of these state-owned industries.

For example, FIAT of Italy, Whitehead, the torpedo entity, which is one of their companies under the Fiat multi-national, is staffed almost totally by former Italian admirals and captains.

I'm trying to show here that there's nothing wrong. In the United States, there would be difficulties because of the conflict of interest laws in military officers doing this, and in almost every other country, certainly to include England, where members of Parliament run businesses which do business with the government.

At least one of them was in the business of brokering arms to us. And then sell to whomever the Central Intelligence Agency or whomever we were going to get them for

The other countries don't consider that as a conflict of interest and I don't want either my testimony or

Albright were back in the room -- subsequent to that by an admission of General Singlaub, since I testified here on the 17th of March, that he had gone to the on that cause.

I have written on that subject while I was in GMT in a letter that Barbara saw and approved that said I thought any notion of this would be very much against the lift of the state of any of the countries involved: Israel, the United States or the contras.

And, therefore, because it would be in nobody's interest, nobody should think that GMT in any way espoused that.

When I wrote those words, I believed that they were true. And I did not know how, incidentally -- to clarify this part -- that General Singlaub was acting on behalf of GMT. I thought he was doing something on his own.

So let me clarify that. I did not know that he was proposing that the money that would come -- now let me get this right --

A If I could just put the transition I tried to get on the record. I'm working very hard to answer these questions very honestly. What's making it difficult is that you're asking me questions about things that took place before I came, that I only came to have incomplete and incremental knowledge in little bits of pieces over a long period of time.

Let me try to go back to this first question and give you my best recollection on it.

Sequentially, I first believed and was led to believe by Barbara Studley, who was very indignant with General Singlaub at this point, that there was any connection between the early effort to sell World War II torpedoes in the hands gone to tith a proposal of his which was presented to me as his idea to sell weaponry or things and to use the profit from that, which would be generated, to give to the contras as a gift, a donation by the buying country.

I finally learned -- and would say this would have to be in the latter part of March -- that General Singlaub had some kind of a charter from Colonel North to do this, to go to or General Singlaub thought that he did. And you should ask General Singlaub about that.

I have spoken to him at great length about this point.

I may be bringing water to the mill because I'm giving you my recollection of what General Singlaub said to me, often over a long distance telephone call and, therefore, elliptically, because he's trying to preserve some type of operational security.

I personally thought this was a bad idea. As I said, I stated so in writing. In fact, there's a document in GMT that will show that I said this, and addressed it to the authorities, saying that it was a bad idea to do this.

And that if there was to be any business that GM was to be a part of, the goal should be to procure whatever their legitimate needs were at the lowest possible cost to Let me interrupt you. When would you have written this document?

In November. In some iteration in December, and in February, just before I left.

BY MR. KERR:

Let me take you to October-November 1986. At that time, in conjunction with a possible business deal between GMT and you had concerns, I take it, about General Singlaub being involved in a trip

Could you explain that to us, please?

Yes. He made a trip I believe in October. Ιt certainly wouldn't have been earlier than the end of in which he insisted on going over September, there to use his influence and good offices to assist in this business deal.

I believe, and Barbara Studley believed that because of his very legitimate philosophical and ideological orientations on other causes, that his activities or representations would be counter-productive since, based or discussions between Barbara and myself, these other causes that General Singlaub supported had nothing whatsoever to with GMT or its business, especially in relation to could direct him, he went anyway. He did not tell us what he did on his other causes, but I knew he would be unable to separate himself from his larger interests, especially in a group of very staunch anti-communists -- ideological anti-communists

So it was because of that that I entered on my trip to with a great deal of trepidation, knowing that despite General Singlaub's sincere best efforts, that assent had now been made more difficult.

 $\label{eq:comparison} \mbox{ And I would like to tell you who accompanied me} \\ \mbox{on that trip.}$

That's correct. He told me that a year earlier

Barbara Studley was very anti-communist and so were the contras and that this would be a way to send mone to the contras through a business transaction which would not identify publicly agree to pay GMT more than the fair market value of certain goods, with the understanding that GMT would take that excess value and pass it to the contras.

Is that correct?

A Yes. And I'm glad you asked the question that way because when I learned this, which I would tell you was early in February, and if somebody with better knowledge says it was late in January, I'll accept it. But that's my recollection of when I learned this.

I went to Barbara Studley and I said, "Barbara, this is a crazy idea. Did you agree to this? Did you know about it?"

And she denied emphatically, you know, with emotional, almost a tantrum that she knew anything about it or ever would consider it or condone it.

And I would tell you under oath that in all of the conversations I had with Barbara Studley, there was never the slightest glimmer that she was going to take any profit from any business deal and donate it to the contras or anybody else.

She was going to put it to a kind of operational fund to run the company. She always used the figure of about $3 million so she wouldn't have to worry about the company financial structure, which she had been doing on a daily basis to the point where she would become violently ill.

She wouldn't have to worry for I think she said two years and then she would use the money to give to me or to other employees, she said, on your recommendation. And always pushed that aside.

Q Now, you learned this information from General Singlaub?

A Prom General Singlaub. I have no reason to believe that he wasn't telling me the truth.

Q Was there anyone else present when he told you this?

A No. He made a lot of trips in and out of Washington at that time and it may have been in a personal conversation with him in Washington, but I believe it was a telephone call. I believe that it was even a long distance call. But it may have taken place in Washington.

Q Did you make any note, memoranda, record or recording of this conversation?

A No, I didn't because it was such a bad idea and

.0U/bc

l 79

Barbara Studley denied any knowledge of it.

Q You did, however, write a letter in February to is that right?

A That's correct. And the reason I wrote the letter was threefold: One was when the Hasenfuss plane went down on the 5th of October and the Ollie North revelations came out, whether there's any merit to them or not, it was clear that the authorities would be very leery about entering into any business deal that would in any way connect them with any of these activities.

I was always at pains initially on a speculative basis that they would just have these fears, and there was no basis for them to have the fears and to allay them.

Then, in February, when I learned that General Singlaub had indeed proposed to them a linkage with GMT and with donations to the cause of the contras, I was horrified that he had made such a proposal, which to me, entirely apart from being bad business, was in the manifest disinterest of the United States government, any U.S. company, the authorities any other government that you would be buying or selling from in order to assist them, and the contras.

I could see that everybody was going to lose from such a proposal. So, armed with Barbara's very emotional outrage that this was never considered by her or by GMT at one time and my own strong belief that it was a bad idea and the other convictions, since I was the negotiator and people would not deal with her at all ever again, that I could control this thing, I wrote the letter that said we do not believe that this is in your interest or the interest of any of the other parties. We have never considered this.

I took Barbara's word, mainly because of the enormous emotion that came up, the vitriol against General Singlaub, how could he have ever done this, you know, that kind of thing, as the absolute truth.

So I wrote what to me was a very truthful and accurate letter saying we do not propose to ever use any profits; instead, what we propose to do is sell you whatever it is we're ever going to sell you at the lowest possible price.

And I, incidentally, was determined that when the transaction was finally concluded that that's exactly what would happen.

Do you recall the name of the person to whom that more very favorable developments, including -- let me just say very favorable developments that would cause any buyer to want to go ahead with the transaction.

Now, I had a conscience problem. I learned this as I was leaving GMT, while I was still salaried by them. But, my letter, which was previously delivered, because of the decision to leave on the 20th, was taken quite swiftly and I offered to stay later and Barbara said no, let's just do it all today, and I said, "That's fine with me. I just would like to, you know, I'm resigning on integrity reasons, but I'm willing to stay until the end of the month if you need me."

She said, No, no, it's better we do it today. So now I go home and I think about the fact that letter -- had I stayed one more day, even more than cleared out my desk, I would have rewritten the letter and changed a copy putting in more favorable information but leaving the preamble the same, which was this business of we never considered, we're not considering now and we never, ever would; wild horses couldn't make us take one penny.

I think maybe that word is even there, not one dollar would ever go to any other country. I said that

This one was down in Miami. Her son thought that was an excellent idea, so I redrafted the letter to put in these more tavorable considerations in Ray Cline's office.

So it was proper for me to talk to him about this. He was now following on behind me and he thought it was a good idea to rewrite the letter and I rewrote the letter.

I was told by her son that Barbara was very pleased at the way I had rewritten it because it was a better salling letter, and I said, "I don't want to come

And they sent it over with the date of the 28th of February and I said, "No, I won't sign anything after I left." I would sign any letter or revision, since I did my own revisions. I wrote every word of the letter, incidentally. Nobody helped me on it, every word of the revision, but nothing that would be post-dated after the 20th, because that would not be honest.

And nothing ever came of that. I had marked up the original letter of the 16th, the original signed, to redo it to make it factually correct with these better, more recent developments, and it actually transpired on the weekend of the 13th, 14th, 15th -- I think you're going to find the 13th is a Friday -- so there you are.

That's how it happened.

I think it isn't to be vain to say I am an exper: in international relations. This is a crazy idea. This is an idea that a secretary of state and all his assistant secretaries would have a terrible time over several years putting together because look at the complexity of it, all the agreements you need, and you certainly have difficulties the United with States and the private companies involved, each wanting to maximize the profit motive.

As gently as I could, I pointed that out to her. She gave this to me as my first project to bring to fruition, and the kindest thing I ever did to her with the idea was never mentioned it again.

But here it is.

I think that thing is just fraught with the potential for kickbacks, for conflicts of interest, for gouging, for price ripping and of course you would need -- if you wanted me to bring this whole thing to fruition, you would need at least a good bureau in the Department of State and full interagency cooperation, which is what she wanted.

She wanted the United States government to put this deal together and then she would be the trading company that would profit from the whole thing.

1986. I want to ask you about some of this that took place in 1986. In August of 1986, a vessel known as the PIA VESTA -- V-E-S-T-A -- was being held by the Government of Panama and there was considerable controversey in Latin America over that vessel and its relationship or what people thought was its relationship to the Nicaraguan contras.

Do you have any knowledge of the PIA VESTA?

No, none whatsoever. However, I offer it to you because it sounds from your question like you think there may be a connection with GMT.

The first three weeks that I was at GMT, that's all Barbara Studley talked about.

The PIA VESTA?

Yes. And I could never understand why we were wasting so much time talking about this. A man by the name of Duncan --

Q Was it your understanding he came to the office before you had joined GMT?

A Yes. And whatever it was, she felt herself charged to write a memo and deliver it to Ollie North. She then was going to give that memo to a newspaper man. I cautioned her against that because I said, "You can make yourself civilly liable in this regard."

And I could never -- in fact, after a while, after I had been there longer, because it kept coming up-- the subject never really went away -- I asked her why are we always going through the Washington Post news story?

I said my greatest curse when I worked in the White House was we would spend a whole morning answering the Washington Post, instead of getting down with the business of government, when the stories had no relevance to reality or what we were doing or what we knew about it.

I said, "It seems to me you're falling into the same trap that people in government do. The higher you are, the deeper you're in the trap."

I never got an answer from that. So, if you're going to suggest to me, you know, that somehow that was her

Because they are in constant telephone communication. They are from the same part of the country. Barbara Studley would have learned that she's a Born Again Christian. Can we go off the record just for a second?

pebbie DeMoss is one of the sharpest, most intelligent and certainly has got the greatest depth and greatest knowledge of any civilian that I have run into in Washington. And if you want information on Ron Martin, the Tamiami gunshot David Duncan, she's the best one to go to and I feel from, again, the bits and pieces that she's formed a lot of Barbara Studley's attitudes and thinking, because I found Barbara Studley kind of misquoting what would turn out to be very accurate quotes from Debbie DeMoss.

I think, with Debbie, you have to discount some of her very legitimate conservative bias that you may not share in order to appreciate her factual data bank and the basis of her information.

- Q Did you ever learn of a relationship to General Singlaub by Mr. Martin?
- A No. And I'd be amazed if he had one because everything that I have heard of Mr. Martin would make him the absolute antithesis of General Singlaub, who is kind of an archetype of honor and duty and country and honesty and almost all the last century codes of ethics.

You very rarely meet a man who has a sense of

No. But I think it would be a good idea if they had one.

- Q Do you know who owned that warehouse?
 - No.
 - Mr. Martin. With regard to PIA VESTA -
- Wait, let me correct that. I think I had learned again since I came to GMT that Martin was in the warehouse, and I believe I may have testified to you -- I certainly have to some other committee -- that at a time when the Soldier of Fortune magazine people were down there, there was an attack on the camp, and in order to get ammunition.

This is a Debbie DeMoss story. They had to call Ron Martin, and before he would open the doors to allow ammunition to resupply the defenders, he had to get a voucher that they would pay for it.

In other words, he sold them the ammunition they needed to save their lives during the height of the attack.

I believe it would have happened August 1986 and a bit before. Then the trip to Switzerland would have been the August-September period.

Well, again, then this would be justifiable for not telling me because it was not on my watch. See, when I came in, if I could add this now to reinforce what I said earlier, without holding school for her, I made very clear what my standards were and what my understanding of public policy law and the way the company was going to conduct itself.

And I may have had an unintended suppressing effect of all of these earlier stories because it would be clear from the most inattentive hearing of what I had to say about all this, that I would be opposed to the point of quitting the company if anybody proposed or said they were doing it in the past.

At no point did Mrs. Studley ever tell you she had received an assignment from Colonel North by way of Mr. Owen to go to Switzerland to gather intelligence on the PIA. VESTA? Is that correct?

I would frankly doubt that Colonel North would have ever given her such an assignment.

Now, if Barbara says that it was shown to me, it certainly didn't register on me at all. And if it was on the PIA VESTA, it would have registered. So that would have explained why it was in a sealed envelop.

- Q So that would be the first week of June?
- A That would be in November. In fact, I think I got a long distance call from her importuning me to join her.
- Q Do you know who else was with her on that trip to Switzerland?

A Yes. It would have removed one of my constraints about going. Graham Lowe. Let me correct an earlier record when I finish this. Graham Lowe, a South African trader who deals in things I really don't understand or know a great deal about — commodities — joined us in December — January. Let's see. It would have been — no, it would have been November. In November — October-November — as executive vice president, as an aside in the office, she said that Graham Lowe had been coming in and out of the office, always u ing her office and desk and is now a member of GMT.

And I thought it was passing strange that the executive vice president hadn't been consulted and was just

I reproached her for that and never got a satisfactory explanation. She said, "I only decided it when we were in Switzerland together."

So that would have been, to fix the date -- and I'm doing this now piecemeal for you -- would have been the middle of November. And it was after she and Graham came back from Switzerland.

Had I known he was with her, as I started to say earlier, that would have removed one constraint about going to Switzerland; but it wouldn't have removed the other, that there was no business purpose for me going to Switzerland.

But she spent, she said, the whole time, night and day, working with the bankers there, and Werner Glatt, who was there.

Q Do you know what business she was conducting in Switzerland at that time?

A No. I was told it was to arrange financing and that there was some very nebulous transaction that Graham -- I never could get clear why Graham went with her.

There was no professional reason that I could see

We spent most of the time talking about Colonel North's diminished position of authority and influence within the National Security Council.

And that may be relevant to all of this because here, on the 1st of September, you have Colonel North telling me and General Singlaub in great detail how he is no longer handling these accounts and has no authority and has no ability really to change anything.

The conference bill was in October, the thing was signed, I recall, by the President on the 30th of October and nothing was moving later in the fall, and nothing appeared to be going to move and it all seemed to be hung up.

I'd like to put on the record -- you don't particularly wint it -- that I have credible knowledge that the liberal aids -- the Democratic side of the House -the people who for very good reasons opposed the aid to Nicaragua, --- being fed information by the Sandinistas to slow this thing down until after the rainy season so the contras couldn t use the rainy season to get ready, and would have to use the dry season to get their logistics and their training and all that in place.

- General Singlaub and nobody else.
- Just General Singlaub and Colonel North?
- As I said, I felt we were wasting Colonel North's time. I just sat there politely because the first thing the new boss asks you to do, there was no reason.

I didn't know what General Singlaub was going to bring up. He may have rehearsed it with me by just giving me the headlines of the points, but what I can tell you --I don't have any memory, but I'm being honest with you on it -- is that there is not one thing that General Singlaub said that Colonel North responded substantively to with a yes or a no or fed the conversation.

He just said I'm not handling any of those things any more on each point that General Singlaub brought up.

A That was never mentioned, I would say. Or, if it was mentioned, it was mentioned in such a way that it didn't register on me at all.

There was no connection in that conversation that showed General Singlaub had any connection with that warehouse, as I remember it. And I think there are certain things that would put me out of the chair, and that would be one of them.

Q During the course of that conversation was there any discussion of another of the assets of Project Democracy, the ship, the M.V. ERRIA?

Q You do not have a recollection of a discussion of a cargo of lethal goods -- Soviet bloc weapons on a ship that Colonel North was interested in selling?

A Oh, no. You know, anything like that, every bell would have rung. As I say, the conversation that took place that I was present for was all of a nature to deplore the Boland -- what started with the Boland legislation -- and the position that put the whole effort to stop and stem the tide of communism in Central America.

There was nothing that would indicate that Colonel North was involved in anything. Quite the contrary. He said he wasn't even handling the accounts. When he meant the accounts, I understood that to be intelligence and -- what would you say? The semi-operational thing of putting agents in, again, to gather intelligence.

I had no idea until the newspaper stories occurred that came out that Colonel North was doing anything of an operational nature. As I told Mr. Albright, I would be opposed to that.

- A That's the only thing I recall. He said, "Assets like", you know. It was a general term, assets like the Lady Ellen and the assets then were enumerated in the conversation.
- Q Did you understand that as being a mechanism that would take monies appropriated by the Congress for the assistance of the contras and turning it into money to be used by a private benefactor network for activities not approved by the Congress?
- A No. What I understood would happen was that the United States government would in a totally legal way buy that equipment and then reimburse the private donors for their earlier donations.

I didn't know what the conversation was going to be about and I just was sort of listening to it. And I didn't reason it or analyze it, as you have just done.

I would applaud that if that were the purpose of it. But, how General Singlaub presented it didn't have any sinister or evil or illegal connotation at all. It was just reimburse the private donors so they would generate more funds.

Remember, at this time, I'm believing that everything they're doing is legal, and I don't know that it isn't legal. You're taking a very fine point of U.S. law, you know. If the Central Intelligence Agency or any other agency buys something from a private donor that saves it money, that's a good thing.

If those people then use that money to do something else, that's a fine point of law that would escape my analysis.

An American company that could bring in bottom dollar prices and avoid the ripping off of the U.S. Government by foreign traders and brokers, and that attracted me, because it had very little money available for these causes. We then had a long discussion on how terrible the people in the business were. He said to me, "You think you really want to be in this business?" And I said, "I don't know. If they are all despicable people, I can deal with despicable people. I have had to do that before. If you have to be partners with them, then I don't want to be partners in the business."

A A notional list of prices, with the late, whenever they were effective, which I imagine would be 60, 90 days, something like that.

O And told you what? Did he toll you your prices were competitive or what?

A He looked at them.

Well, he didn't get back in touch with me, so I called him, you know, after a decent interval of a couple of weeks, and he invited me to come out again. And that went on for a couple of times, either by phone or in person. And finally on the 30th of December, if that date correctly reflects when he gave it to me, he gave me that list to price. We priced it, I think, in 48 hours and sent it back to him.

Q During the periods October 12 and December 30 you had a couple of meetings or telephone conversations?

 ${\bf A}_{\rm c}=1$ don't have a record of them. GMT should, and they may not.

Q And in terms of giving you work to price or bid on, you didn't get any of that until December 30, 1986; is that right?

A I'm giving you that as my best recollection, triggered by my dating with my pen at the top. It was a day earlier, and then I dated the day later, maybe.

As of December 30, 1986, what had you told about the source of GMT's arms that it proposed to sell to the CIA?

A I said, "Barbara Studley's principal source, the one she would like to deal with, is Werner Glatt."

then delivered himself of a lot of invidious comments about Werner Glatt.

- Q Specifically, what did he say about him?
- A That he had been on television, that he was sloppy, unprofessional, a lot of things that I then came to learn about. That he's indiscreet. I don't think he said he charged too much, but that, you know, he said, "I'm not sure we would want to deal with him, even if he were the low bidder."

And I said, "Well, let's see how it goes; he will not be our only source." I was determined -- I sense

Barbara had this kind of sweetheart arrangement with Werner

Glatt, and I was determined, if I was going to be her negotiator, I was going to do competitive bidding.

Q When did you first raise Glatt to Was it in the first meeting? The second meeting?

A I would think the first meeting. Maybe it was the second.

Q Just so I understand where you are coming from, why is it that you thought the agency would be willing to deal through an intermediary to do business with Glatt rather than deal with Glatt himself?

A You see, that's the very thing I questioned myself, and I wanted to put all the cards up. I told him we didn't have no warehouses; we don't make this stuff; none of it will be procured in the United States; it will all be off-shore procurement. I knew, from my military background, that for many reasons, including good policy reasons, we prefer to supply the resistance fighters with -- the causes we are supporting with Soviet bloc stuff, and they, the Soviet Union and Cuba, prefer to supply it with M-16s. We'd probably save each other a lot of money, if we used our own natural source and lines of communication, something General Lee taught General Grant and the Union Army in the Civil War.

- I'm still having difficulty. Tou were not planning to do this deal without some markup; is that right?
 - That's correct.
- So why would the Agency, which could deal with Glatt, be prepared to pay you a premium?
- That's why I suspected Glatt from the very beginning, because I questioned whether -- I had a question in my own mind whether this would be economically functional for the Agency or for us, you know, whether we could ever compete. And it is a question I had throughout the whole series of transactions.
- What was true of Glatt would have been true of any supplier you relied on; is that right?
 - That's correct.
- So at all points, you would be operating with an itermediary --
 - Remember, this guy does -- I'm interrupting you, so I will take your question first.

LOUDW

O My point simply is that you-all would have been in an intermediary role with an add on to the supplier, no matter who the supplier is?

A That's correct. And I pointed this out to Barbara, and I said, "I don't see how this is ever going to get anywhere." But she assured me there were lots of people like us out there, including this fellow in Alexandria - Sam Cummings.

Have you called him in? I think he's involved in this.

Q I know Mr. Cummings.

A Who are in precisely the same role we are.

They're U.S. citizens with offices here, and they have to go off-shore to get stuff to deal with other suppliers.

ACE FEDERAL REPORTERS. INC.

And I agree with them.

Q Did you discuss the fact it's cheaper to deal with someone without going through intermediaries?

A I brought that up, and again remember what we are dealing with. The image — the picture that Barbara presented to me was that these foreigners who can get the stuff cheaper rip off the United States and charge millions and millions of dollars more than the items cost. But Barbara Studley was going to come in with a 5 percent markup, with emotional, one or two times, tantrums type, banging her fingernails on the table — long artificial fingernails. "Nobody sells at 5 percent. We're going to sell at 5 percent. Nobody can possibly sell as low we are are going to sell."

I believe that.

- Q Bear with me, General.
 - A I'm telling the truth.
- Q You don't know what Glatt's markup was, did you?
 You don't know if it was 10 percent, 20 percent or 50 percent. You were adding 5 percent on top of that.

A I raised that point with her, but you know, what you're doing is, you're getting into why I left GMT. I was not dealing with a reasonable woman.

Q What I'm really trying to get at is why was it

A I do not know. In fact, my frustration, because I went out there under terrible traffic conditions. It always rained or snowed, and they used to kid me at the Agency on that, that I created dreadful rains and dreadful snowstorms. But every single time we made an appointment, one or the other would happen. And if you're at all familiar with that Tysons Corner out in Vienna, traffic coming out is worse than the traffic going in. You always arrange these appointments at the end of the day. So I caught two rush hours, and it would take me three hours to get home.

One time, three hours to get home from Tysons

Corner to my home in Springfield. Sometimes because of the burden of what I brought, I would go back to the office, so I would geet four trips. And my frustration was, it seemed to me that

We never concluded anything, and I kept going back out there, forming a great deal of affection for I liked him -- and forming a great deal of admiration for his tough negotiating to get the lowest possible dollar, which was my goal too.

And the point you're making is the point I kept bringing up at GMT: how can we be competitive? Well, the answer was, "We're going to force Warner Glatt down to a lower price." And I think we did. Some of the iterations with Warner Glatt, he came down quite a bit.

Q Did anybody ever suggest to you that Mr. Glatt

No. He told us we could do it by an open phone, but Barbara had a device -- an encrypting device, with Glatt having another piece of it and General Singlaub having another piece of it where like you're doing right now with your transcript, you punch in the text and the numbers; you attach it to a telephone and you hear on the phone -- you cannot speak while this is happening the room -- it just goes bzzzz.

This man was brought in unannonced. She told me he would be coming later during the day. Didn't tell me at what time. And she took him into her office and that was her style and General Haig does the same thing. It's a one on one meeting and then you bring in the staff or the guy whose going to work the thing out for you.

So I assumed that since she knew him before and I didn't, that she wanted personal reaffirmation time or courtesy call, and I received some long distance calls that had to do with some business transactions involving airplanes, noncombat, and I was working my way through those and she asked me to please come into the office and talk to Mr. Johannsen.

that had been directed towards you and because you had been served a subpoena by the Senate Committee?

A No. That's an untrue statement. That's not why
I left and, as a matter of fact, at that time, as we all know, the 20th of February, there was no subpoena or request or any knowledge that I was going to come over here.

Q As of March 19th, March 20, approximately?

A I thought that the Tower Commission would have called me, and probably should have, since I was an official in the NSC. And I thought, had they done so, that certainly would have led to visits here. And I also believe, if any of those journalists ever got around to writing a story about GMT, that this certainly would have led to an informal or subpoena request to come over here, which I would have been happy to comply with.

Q Were you knowledgeable after March 19th or about .

March 19, two days after you were deposed from Mr. Albright, that Mr. Cline was being asked by Ms. Studley and GMT to present this material to the Central Intelligence Agency?

A No. The only thing that I was told and only by Dr. Cline was that Barbara had asked him to take over my role on the account involving

Central Intelligence Agency.

And I cautioned him to be careful on that one because it was his old agency. I'm not sure what the rules are for people who retired when Dr. Cline did. The rules change.

If you retired other than the last couple of years, you had a lot more latitude than you do now. But I mentioned that and I mentioned the uncertainty of payment and, in fact, come to think of it -- let me correct it -- he brought that up.

He said, "Because I have asked her, I have told her I need a retainer, and she's been very vague about it, that I have done nothing for her." He said, "For a number of reasons, all the stories that were in the press, and I don't intend to do anything at present anyway, just on general principles and certainly not until she comes to some satisfactory terms."

And those conversations took place 1-2 April because Dr. Cline is an expert on the Philippines, so I told him that what I was going to be doing, as I had been talking to him all along about this project over there and interfacing with him on that, you know, to get his advice

See, I'm in a very personally dangerous situation over there. I may well be killed or kidnapped and probably came close to the latter just in the last couple of weeks and I don't have a good feeling about doing it because I have no desire for any personal gain for myself at all.

UNCLASSIFIED

I discussed all these concerns with Dr. Cline and he gave me five conditions that I should have, including a personal body guard, an escort from the Army, and a satisfactory contract from the company, none of which have been met, I might add.

But that's why I want you to know why I was talking to him and why I was talking to him I think right to the morning I left or the day before I left.

So I would tell you right to the 2nd of April and at no time did he tell me in any way that he had sent or taken or had any discussion.

In fact, quite the contrary. He denied -- I didn't ask him, but he proffered to me that he had not gone to the Central Intelligence Agency and didn't intend to.

A No. But your question, you know, follows from the first, so I deny the first and I clearly deny the second.

However, you're doing your job as the counsel and

I'm going to help you do it because your question is a good one. It reminds me of another one. When I went out to see when would this — there was a meeting with I left GMT which, when you asked me earlier, I had forgotten about, that's when I went out there to talk to him to tell him that I was no longer with GMT and as briefly as I could and as kindly as I could, why I had

And I did that very tersely, with far less detail by a hundredfold than you have been able to get out of me.

At that time, I said, "Dr. Cline will be picking up my accounts."

He got up out of the chair, which he never had done, and he said, "I will not deal with Dr. Cline. I will not even talk to him." And I said, "Well, not even talk to him?" He said, "Oh, I'll say hello to him on the phone, but that's all.

So I went back to Dr. Cline by phone and told him that I went out to decouple myself because I felt that of all the people I was dealing with, the one I owed a debriefing with was because I had the sense -- in fact, I think he said at one point he wouldn't be dealing with Barbara Studley, but he was willing to deal with me because of my bona fidee, being in the Service and having worked in the government so long, held the clearances and had the record, some words to that

So I felt I owed him a debrief to let him know, which I never did with the that I was no longer in the picture or any of the other customers. I just left and I didn't make any more phone calls. I got a couple and I would tell the people I left.

But I felt I owed him one particularly because of the overpricing and my other concerns, and he was very vehement about not dealing with Dr. Cline, so I told Dr. Cline that and Dr. Cline said, "Well, I would never go to him anyway. I would go up on top and come in as I did before through the headquarters, you know, somebody at the

And Dr. Cline said, "Well, I haven't done anything and I don't intend to anyway. Never mind what you just told me, I'm not going to anyway," and that's when he gave me because of the general situation it's clear nothing is going to happen, so it's not a useful time to go out and, secondly, "I don't have any contract or any assurance that Barbara will pay me."

A I am going to say no. You know, he could have.

He is a very droll guy. He could have said, you know, "As

A No. If that was true, I think it would be bad advice because I was directed and instructed by Barbara Studley. Every time I went back out there, I gave her a very faithful, accurate, detailed report.

The only thing I spared her was some of

- Q To what extent, to your knowledge, was General Graham involved in Ms. Studley's business operation?
- A I would say not at all. I think he was a friend of hers professionally, who helped her get started in Washington without any remuneration. There certainly was no record of any remuneration in the files that I saw.
- Q Did it ever come to your attention when you were with GMT that General Singlaub was given a list of 20 to 25 items by Colonel North which Colonel North asked that Ms. Studley price for him -- military items?

That is Barbara's quote to me. I always thought that was the list. But when 'ou say that, ask the question again.

Q Let me come at it another way.

Did it come to your attention in the late fall of 1986, after Colonel North lost his position with the National Security Council, that General Singliub and Ms. Studiey had met with Colonel North at the Sherston and showed him a list of prices that they had obtained and got a reaction of concern -- in fact, Colonel North bein; distraught -- that these were very low prices Ms. Studiey could obtain?

- A Yes. That does refresh my memory. There was such a list.
 - Q What can you tell me about that?

1986. I would disbelieve there were any subsequent meetings.

Q You don't know of any meeting at the Sheraton with Singlaub, Studley, Colonel North in the late fall of 1986?

A No. But I have a recollection that Barbara

Studley -- remember, this was not for the contras; this was just for arms for resistance movements -- had a list of prices, and Barbara Studley saying what you just said, being that North was very distraught. I don't remember that that meeting took place with General Singlaub. Very distraught about the prices being so low and we are paying too much.

You know, that would have rung a bell when I was called in for Bud and would have rung a lot of bells if I had any association of that with arms for the contras.

Q One more shot. In another context, do you recall ever being told either by Ms. Studley or General Singlaub of a meeting at the Sheraton in the late fall of 1986, after Colonel North has lost his position, in which Colonel North says something to the effect that the people that he had

A No. And Ollie worked for me. I was very pained and very disbelieving. I am not sure what I believe today, but very disbelieving that he had anything to do with anything.

As a matter of fact, I still think he will be exonerated when everything is known. But I just didn't even believe then that he was involved in any of this or that it even existed. So I was quite concerned, and I offered through his lawyer and others to be somebody he could come to if he wanted to. He never came to me. He stayed out of sight, and I think that was on the advice of his lawyer, because I know that is what I would tell him and what you would tell him.

I am an amateur defense counsel, but I did it many times in the military. The first thing you tell the guy, the accused or respondent, "Don't talk about this even to your friends and family because it is going to distort your honest recollection, and I don't want you giving any versions at all. So if I spoke to him at all, it would have been in October.

Q When was the last time you spoke to Ms. Studley?

A On the 20th of February. Well, no. There was one subsequent phone conversation about the 21st or 22nd of February, but it had to do with GMT and when she was going to pay me. That would have been in March.

When the end of February passed and she hadn't paid me, I called this friend, Hovey or Povey, the accountant, to ask when they were going to get around to paying me, and she said, "Barbara wants to talk to you."

She came on the phone and wanted to talk business, and I said, "Barbara, the only thing I called on was to find out why my check hasn't come. No.

So you have not talked to Mr. Parito or anyone in his office?

Has General Singlaub --

And I made a point not to talk to anybody at GMT. I told them this morning I was going over and I was going to tell the truth, and I hope it would be supportive because at that time I felt -- I am not sure of that now because of what your line of questioning portends -- but at that time I felt she was as pure as the driven snow pertaining to Iran and any arms dealings with the contras or dealings with the Agency.

I don't have that same comfortable feeling now.

With regard to General Singlaub, did you ever discuss with General Singlaub what transpired in the two days we interviewed him?

No. I asked him how we felt it had come out, and he said, fine, and he was prepared to tell me more. In fact, he started to, and I said I didn't want to hear it. said, "I may go back." And I guess because of that trial and defense work I had a pretty strong feeling that I don't want to be involved.

In fact, I suggested to Mr. Albright when I was here that you ask the witnesses -- you can't command them,

I haven't talked to Dr. Cline. I wanted to very much.

Q We have now reached the last question with regard to Dr. Cline.

When was the last time you spoke with him?

A Before I went to Manila when you told me when we spoke, in my great unhappiness the way I was summoned here, that I wanted very much to talk to him about Manila, you know, what was going on over there and my concerns about what was happening both in the city, the government, and the operation of his company, because he has been a great bulwark, a good, sound, prudent, moral, legal adviser, like he has on every situation I have ever seen him.

So I would disbelieve that these reports that you have got can be laid back at his door. Certainly not at mine.

But because of wanting to respect your inquiry and not muddy the waters, you know, talk to Dr. Cline and he says or suggests something that might color it, I haven't

Q Did you ever tell him about your first interview with this committee -- your first deposition?

A No, other than I said it started out with an outrageous subpoena, but we quickly removed that, and I felt that Mr. Albright and his colleagues were people who were trying very sincerely to confine the investigation to a proper sphere, narrow when it should be narrow and broad when it should be broad, get to all the facts but not go through a fishing expedition or a muckraking, and I admired their professionalism and felt very comfortable with them in that I had told the truth, and the only thing that I gave to Dr. Cline was what I testified to previously, that you don't really have to bring a truckload of documents; only those documents that pertain to this thing.

But I told GMT, I said, "I would suspect you will have to bring everything, and you should. You don't destroy anything or hold anything back." That is all.

And I told Dr. Cline, and he said, "That is a good point." And he said, "I shall advise Barbara, and that is what I am advising her on, anyway."

And when he did go to see Casey, he couldn't mention contras or Nicaragua. And that's why I thought, this simple layman, that Casey was dutifully following the law.

Q Did you become aware in 1985 that General Singlaub hired a public relations firm for himself?

Α After the fact. That's Carter-Clewes?

Q Yes. How did you become aware of that?

A Well, when I was working at GMT, they rode into town, right after the Hasenfuss thing, and we were now getting all the calls because Carter-Clewes had given them GMT's phone number.

I could have killed Carter-Clewes people. I guess it was Carter himself. Furthermore, Carter-Clewes saw this as a magnificent opportunity to put General Singlaub on a soap box and talk, and I thought this was the worst possible thing that could happen for Singlaub, for the causes he supported and for GMT.

So I counseled no press conference or nothing.

In the meantime, somebody in the Administration -- I think you asked me about that -- had put out the story that General Singlaub was behind the plane that went down.

I knew that wasn't true because he was deep in Manila, and I said that, but I called him in Manila and asked him, and that was before GMT had any relationship of consulting with the Manila operation, "Extract for gold."

I asked him straight out, I said, "Jack, did you have anything to do with that plane? You don't have to answer me if you don't want to, but don't tell me no if the reverse is true."

So he said, "Bob, I didn't have anything to do with it. I didn't even know about it. I didn't have any idea that that operation was taking place."

And I said, "Fine," and that fitted in because is I was running that thing, it wouldn't have been running in the amateurish way, and the same thing would be true of General Singlaub. We both know how to run operations like that.

government, not in the White House, not in the Pentagon, although some evidence points it could be somebody in the Pentagon.

All these are good friends. I didn't really want to find out. What I wanted was to get the story retracted. The arrangement we worked out with the White House National Security Council Staff people was they knew who it was and they were being kind of Delphic in giving me hints that I didn't even want. And that's why the hints would be ambiguous and misleading if I formed a conclusion now.

They said that they had identified the person, he knows who is, he's admitted he's done it, he's admitted it's wrong and it's done.

He had very good motives, I was told, but it's all wrong and he's going to fix it providing General Singlaub doesn't have a press conference until it's retracted.

I made the arrangements with all the different press officers and the Pentagon, the State Department, the White House in that there would be no General Singlaub press conference, and I told General Singlaub not to do it.

In the meantime, Carter-Clewes told him to do it and now Singlaub, being told by Carter-Clewes to do it, being told by me not to do it, called some -- pardon the expression -- weenie in the press system over at the White House who hadn't been aware of this very sensitive thing, becaue I was trying to protect the reputation of Mr. X so that he didn't get hurt.

7210 20 20

If he had good motives and he made a mistake and acknowledged it as such, let him correct it. The weenie, who didn't know about this very sensitive thing, said, "No, it would probably be a good thing."

So off we went, even though I had told Carter-Clewes not to do it, that it would destroy some very sensitive things. I told them the disinformation story is going to be walked back, we can't have a press conference.

Carter-Clewes didn't want that because his fee was dependent on getting Singlaub up on a soap box and getting 250 journalists in the room, so he just rolled over me, ignored me and got Singlaub to call this guy, gave him the guy who would know the answer -- that guy in the White House and he said, yes, it probably would do some good, go ahead and tell the press.

So we were off to the races and we never got to

But he knew an awful lot and he's a very fine man. A British citizen, born in South Africa, so not a South African national, who had served with his father who was a textile engineer or manufacturer all over Latin America,

I was always having to troop lead him into the way we do business here under the ethical and legal standards that, you know, he was still accustomed to doing and to accepting as part of life down there and you couldn't do here. You had to turn a lot of deals down if it meant any kind of kickback, so he did.

Q What did you plan to do with this document?

A He gave it to me, you know, as could we get this stuff and then sell it. And it ended up right toward the end, when I was leaving.

Q You could get it from whom to sell it to whom?

A Get it from whomever would supply it. If you're not a military man, the items tell you the source. If it's 19 millimeter, it's the United States; if it's 4.5 it's material that belongs to the United States.

So most of it was U.S. and I said we didn't have U.S. sources. We did our business off shore. So I said it would be an awful lot of work to get this, and I think I turned it back to him.

Here it says,

But if, you know, we wanted to follow up, it's something they could take on and I left before we ever did anything further with it.

Who did you understand the purchaser to be?

The purchaser would be somebody in suspicion when I first looked at the list was that it might be somebody trying to acquire equipment for Iran. I said, We won't touch that with a barge pole. When I looked at the list more carefully, the amount of training, ammunition and the types of stuff on here suggested to me that that was not what it was.

But, still, I felt uncomfortable with it and the real reason I felt uncomfortable beyond what I just stated, the suspicion some of it might go to Iran, was this would be another one of these kickback things.

-- and all this is If the Government of military ammunition -- wants to buy what essentially is U.S. ammunition from the United States, all they have to do is walk in to the Chief of the MAG group and in a heartbeat because it's a good country -- democratic and we have a lot of interests -- it's big and we have a lot of strategic interests and a lot of programs -- in a heartbeat, the United States government would sell them at rock bottom prices, with no brokers, no intermediaries, the equipment they want or the ammunition they want at the lowest possible cost and because we've got regular runs back and forth might even waive the transportation charges by saying the airplane has got to go there anyway, we're putting it on their C-130s that come up anyway.

Whereas, when Graham Lowe through his happy friends would come in with these, it's because somebody in was looking for a kickback. And that's how it's done.

And I don't want to lay it on All of these countries. In fact, all of the countries throughout the world. You've got a who tried to get in an offer. He said, "You know, who are some of the from Ms. Studley or anyone else that a commitment had been made by Director Casey or Colonel North that contracts from the CIA would be let to GMC?

A No. The only way you can even tenuously do that was out of Barbara Studley's repeated recountings to me of her famous meeting, whenever -- December '85 or whenever -- that had been arranged by General Graham, "These are the lowest prices I have ever seen. We should be doing business with you. I'll send this list."

The list she submitted to him -- "down to my people and we shall be in touch with you," and then I think it was a relentless pursuit to this day to get that business.

MR. KERR: General, we are going to be deposing

General Singlaub on Wednesday and I would be grateful if you would not discuss these matters with him.

THE WITNESS: I guarantee you I won't. He wanted to talk to me about it and I said, "Jack, we shouldn't do this." I said, "It's not right and I'm not going to."

He wanted to know the name of the one guy I thought that was so favorably disposed -- that would be Bud Albright -- to running a narrow inquiry as far as, you know,

I said, "He's a very good man and I'm very pleased with my session with him." I said, "As I am with this one with you. But I don't think it's proper for me to give you that name or to characterize anybody over there. And I don't think we should talk about this at all," and I said, "When I finish, I'm not going to be telling you anything about it, and I'd appreciate it if you didn't ask me any questions on it. I'm going to be telling the truth."

344

And I think he respected that. He did not tell me anything about his session.

MR. KERR: I do want to express on behalf of the committee our appreciation for your going through a very long night with us. We will make this transcript available for you to review if you'd like.

THE WITNESS: I would.

MR. KERR: But, for obvious reasons, I'd rather not have it out of the building.

as cooperatively as I could and certainly as truthfully as my memory would allow me to do.

But, on those parts where it touches on personalities, the characterization of people, their business thoughts, their concepts of profit motives, I do so unwillingly because I think that should remain as private differences of opinion between me and those people and not to be shared with the American public, unless we're going to do it with every single company that's operating.

MR. KERR: Yes, I appreciate that, General, and as I say, the document is a confidential document of the committee and it will not be made available for others to look at.

MR. KERR: I understand and appreciate your concern and we will do our best --

THE WITNESS: And I believe the General was told that. But this is really outrageous, that you got a Congressional staffer whose too lazy or unwilling or doesn't want to chase it, who called some Washington Post reporter that there's a lead here, why don't you run it down, then when you write a story we'll have some information and call the people.

MR. ALBRIGHT: We hope our committee is running better than that. We try hard.

MR. KERR: General, I can't imagine what caused that to happen but you certainly have our regret for any inconveniences.

THE WITNESS: I think when you tell me, as you did, that this is the nature of process servers and shouldn't be disturbed, then you guys ought to get your process servers in here and tell them because I would come in in response to a phone call.

I told Mr. Albright that I would come back and I made one or two phone calls that he was obviously too busy to receive to say how, if you think of anything further, to make sure, you know, I really meant it.

MR. KERR: General, bear with me. We were having difficulty reaching you by telephone and I think it's probably in large part because your wife works during the day.

THE WITNESS: That's correct. Look how late you guys work at night. You could have got her early in the morning or late at night. You could have called General Singlaub because it's on the record that I was working for him.

MR. KERR: General Singlaub has also been somewhat difficult to reach from time to time.

To give you a little vignette as to where she comes at, on the 1st of January, New Year's Day, 1959, her uncle was the Ambassador from Cuba to Mexico City.

The Mexicans led into the chancery and the residence the Castroites. The communists who took over, ransacked the embassy and literally threw them out on the street and stole all their clothes and personal possessions.

Some of her family has been killed by Castro and her father was the Ambassador from Cuba to Holland, when France and Belgium, unilaterally declared war without instructions on Nazi Germany and she worked in the Resistance Movement in Belgium as a young schoolgirl, which attracted the attention of the Gestapo and they burned down the school and convent she was in.

So this is a woman who has seen this kind of terrorism, sort of police terrorism firsthand in her family in Cuba and in occupied Belgium.

So if she was moved by what happened out there,

BY MR. KERR:

- A Yes.
- Q And we are just going to continue where we left off.

I have received since we last talked a variety of documents which you may be able to help me out with, and so I am going to kind of show them to you more or less in chronological sequence.

Let me begin with a letter that must have been written sometime after July 28, 1986. It was written by General Singlaub, acting on behalf of GMT, and has attached to it a price list dated July 28, 1986.

MR. KERR: It is, except it now has the

The context of the letter puts General Singlaub, an officer, an employee of GMT, and while I knew he had a very good professional and friendly relationship with Barbara Studley based on common philosophical grounds, the relationship between General Singlaub and Barbara Studley was always described to me by both of them as I help her and she helps me.

But there wasn't any subordinate relationship within GMT. This letter suggests something different.

Q Now, there is another relationship that is suggested in the letter, which you may or may not be able to help me on. Perhaps you can figure out what was going on.

You will note in the second sentence it says:

So the Commando mortar is a mortar of that kind.

It probably has a bipod that goes with it, but the idea is it is a hand-held mortar. It is very small, very light, and would be U.S. manufactured.

when I talked to you, you questioned me on the various conversations with Colonel North, the one particularly that I was present for with General Singlaub on the 1st of September. He talked about a list. Actually, there was no Constitutional authorization for the acquisition by the American government until October of 1986?

Right, but the Congress had expressed its will in June and August, and what you would now see happening is people leaning forward, which in itself isn't improper.

No.

If you look at the context of the letter, what is intriguing is that General Singlaub is basically suggesting a lending arrangement to allow the CIA to get a faster start than it might otherwise get in buying weapons.

That would have created some legal problems, General?

Right.

But I testified to that when I presented the letter to you and I testified to our conversation on why I had never really looked at the letter was that General Singlaub, as I recall -- it is now further intimation to your first question, how it came into my possession -- he gave it to me with an explanation of this idea.

But I had already dismissed the idea as, in my judgment, not one that would be held legally sufficient to act on and told General Singlaub that he should write a letter when he first proposed this to me orally to Mr. Casey, the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and propose the idea and let their lawyers take a look at it.

And I think that is why I got the letter later, was that it was given to me General Singlaub to show that he had acted. He is a very meticulous man, as you have noticed from your contacts with him, I am sure, very attentive and careful with details. So he follows through and, since I told him — if it was me that caused him to write the letter — I told him to go write a letter to Casey, that I didn't think it was a good idea or was a legal idea or was legally correct, but it was certainly innovative and worth looking at to let the Central Intelligence people look at.

And then, as I told you, General Singlaub, when I asked him whatever happened to that idea of yours, he said

"They told me that it wouldn't be legally correct and therefore couldn't be done." And General Singlaub just dropped the idea.

This was the only conversation that I can recall at this moment that he ever had with me about providing arms for the contras.

Always both the context, the detail, the connotation and also denotation was why we need to support the contras. I never had any conversation with Colonel North that would suggest there was something going on under the table or around the will of Congress. It was on why we need to turn the legislation around and why we need to start supplying aid to the contras.

If you will allow me at this point to interject something, my own belief, conviction, in light of current developments, I would deplore the death of this poor young man who was killed in Nicaragua.

On the other hand, I think it is equally deplorable that we have got 3000 Americans down there, painting their houses either symbolically or, in the case of Mr. Linder, actually, with the colors of a brutal repressive communist regime and aiding them and supporting them, and I would hope that when we get through investigating this situation, which does deserve investigation if wrongdoing has occurred, that people should be held accountable for it, made to account for any wrongdoing.

I would hope, though, the same six committees that desire to investigate this situation would investigate the people who are sending $100 million worth of supplies to the communist government that is exporting revolution to its neighbors and will threaten us.

It is not exaggeration to say that. They do threaten the national interests of the United States narrowly and broadly.

And would also investigate those 3000 people who are down there. I think it is the same thing. If you have people on the right providing sustenance to resistance fighters and the committee thinks that is wrong, then that should be investigated. But then you should also look at people who are of a liberal persuasion, who are so liberal that they want to support and expand a very nasty communist government in Nicaragua.

Bravo have a much different view of that government, and these are men who are liberals and ought to be listened to.

0 Let me just come back and focus on the chronology.

If I may, it wasn't a totally irrelevant obiterdicta here. You had asked me early on in our last meeting where I gave a deposition if I thought it was right for the people who had provided assistance to the contras to now take that money back if the United States Government, the Central Intelligence Agency or some other agency obtained those assets and used it for other resistance movements, and it is in the context of that question.

And I had not really considered that when you asked me prior to when you asked me it. My response then was I said it looked like a very fine point of law, but I think my comment in the context of the death of this poor man, this poor young man, whom I deplore because he was obviously a very sincere, idealistic guy, are appropriate because they tie back to that question.

I did not know, when you asked me, anything at all about Project Democracy, with one exception that I will explain in a moment, which I just recalled since we met. I didn't know that Project Democracy was the organization that was providing this assistance, and I still don't.

Project Democracy was not mentioned by either Colonel North or General Singlaub on the 1st of September, to the best of my knowledge.

When I responded to your questions, which you asked as appropriate leading questions, about Project

Democracy, what I did was make a transposition to what was discussed, which was the buyback of that equipment that had been provided, those assets, and the name that the media subsequently had given to it.

 $\label{eq:But I had never heard General Singlaub discuss} % \begin{center} \textbf{But I had never heard General Singlaub discuss} \\ \textbf{Project Democracy.} \\ \end{center}$

Indeed, when it came out all in the press, I told him I had never heard of that and asked him if he had, and he said, "No, I never heard of it before in my life."

In fact, I was his first source because he was in the Philippines and the news media had not caught up to him and I just told him on the telephone what was being printed and that he was, I thought, being connected with this and asked him if he was, and he said, "I never heard of it."

Now, I have testified to at least two different committees that I had never heard of it. I now remember, since I last spoke to you, in conversation with Colonel North while I was in uniform, and therefore on active duty, circa May or June of 1986, but not later than early June, in which he made a single statement to the effect, "And then" — the only words I can recall — "And then there is, of course, my Project Democracy," and his sentence then trailed off with a series of visible — almost visible ellipses, and he didn't finish the thought.

202-347-3700

I didn't ask him about it because it did not fit in with the discussion we were having.

0 What was the context?

A As I recall, all my discussions with him were on the insurgency in Central America. It was not a conversation about contras because I had steered totally clear of them during the time the legislation was in effect. What it was on very likely was on what the Sandinista government was doing to expand the revolution into Costa Rica, El Salvador, and Honduras.

In other words, it was a professional discussion that was entirely appropriate, entirely correct between the Chairman of the American Defense Board and one of the NSC

Jbur

UNCLASSIFIED

staffers who was charged with responsibility.

Q But again he didn't elaborate?

A No, he didn't, and as you know, our reporter here has smiled several times throughout all of this as we come up with these acronyms and names.

The government is full of these, and we give names to all sorts of ideas and projects.

So I thought that if Colonel North was referring to a project, you know, a concept, not an organization, that would promote democracy in Central America.

I could readily recall my continuous efforts over the years to advise military juntas in Central and South America to respect all constitutional authorities, to go back to the barracks, to accelerate elections if the country did not have free elections and, once they had them, to respect the results even if they didn't like them. I would have called that Project Democracy.

So Colonel North's use of the term didn't raise any flags or bells. I didn't get the context or connotation that there was a vast or small organization out there that was disciplined, that was providing money to do anything. I just thought that it was a name perhaps that didn't even have any reality other than, you might say, an NSC staffer could call -- I have got a project for peace in the Middle East, and I would call it Middle East Peace, everything you could do that was designed to bring a just peace in the Middle East.

Q Where would this conversation have taken place?

A I don't know. I can't tell you. It could have been a social setting, you know, as most social settings in Washington are designed to get business conducted. So it could have been there.

He was a guest at my house for a couple of dinners or functions involving the Latin American officials, as were other NSC staffers and other people from the State Department and the Pentagon. That was part of my job, to ensure that you brought all these people and always tried to invite somebody from the White House, somebody from the State Department, somebody from the Pentagon, so there wouldn't be any private bilaterals.

Q Do you recall anybody else participating in this conversation?

A No. There may have been somebody else present, but I don't recall who it was and, as I say, the reference

202-347-3700

Nationwide Coverage

Jbur

 UNCLASSIFIED

to Project Democracy did not fit what preceded. His sentence trailed off in almost visible ellipses, the four dots, and then he picked up on another idea and he didn't come back to it.

The words I remember are "And then, of course, there is my Project Democracy," and there was voice emphasis on the word "my," but it didn't fit in with any idea that there is a group of people out there that are providing arms for the contras.

I might add, if he had said that, you know, expanded on it at that point and had not dated it, that would not have caused me any great concern because we were now at a point where it was no longer illegal to do it.

There was no dating of the remark or the organization, and I certainly did not know anything at all about an organization.

I had never known anything about Mr. Channell or the name before, which is not a dissimilar name, a somewhat like name to Project Democracy, the organization that he fronted for. I had never heard of him before and never heard of Channell at all.

During your tenure on active duty with the United States Army, did it come to your attention that Werner Glatt was a supplier of the Defense Department and, specifically, the United States Army?

No.

He also said that I had signed off on some of his procurements. To the best of my knowledge, that is not true.

I, as the strategist and the planner, don't even recall getting into any actions of this kind. The man who can testify to that is General Odom and his predecessor and perhaps General Soyster, the Operations people, who would have coordinated it, and it is conceivable that there would have been some minor acts that would have come to me or we would may coordinated from a policy standpoint.

But I don't recall it, and I certainly never met Mr. Glatt before, and, quite frankly, I am dismayed at the closeness of the relationship that he has, as reported to me by Barbara Studley. So it may not be true. She has told me a lot of things that turn out not to be true, and whether she believed them or not I won't say.

But just from a factual standpoint, she related to me a great many things which just turned out to be untrue, that she knew or heard or had experience, which just wasn't the case.

That is why I didn't pay a great deal of attention to her when she would be talking about things that didn't have anything to do with the business of GMT and why my memory, when you ask me about some of these things, is not always precise or as accurate as I would like it to be in what you are going into.

But I never did any business with Mr. Glatt, never knew he existed. I recall, after I met him, that he was the man I had seen on television with an Army colonel whom I knew of and may have met, who fell into disfavor because their operation got blown, and Glatt had been

Do you remember them doing that? 4 Yes, right. 5 Let me pursue that just a step further. 6 7 Do you have any knowledge of the relationship, past or present, between General Daniel O. I 10 never heard General Graham mention Mr. Glatt, and I don't 11 recall Glatt ever mentioning Graham. 12 Ms. Studley never told you it was General Graham 13 0 who introduced her to Werner Glatt? 14 Not that I recall, but she may have. I am not 15 16 going to say that it could not have happened. But I don't know how she did meet him. 17 To your knowledge, did Mr. Glatt ever use the 18 alias "Klotz," K-1-o-t-z, Werner Klotz? 19 No, but that would be an apt alias for him 20 because it would describe him perfectly. 21 Did you ever discuss with General Singlaub his 22 many meetings with the man that he identified to you as Werner Klotz as opposed to Werner Glatt?

A No. I never knew General Singlaub had ever met him, but in retrospect, because of what Barbara told me just shortly before I left GMT, that she had arranged meetings and conducted the travel that brought in all these parties together and made the shipment of arms of 1985 possible. I didn't know that before I went to work for her.

Her story was she had donated $100,000, and I saw the check that she had given to this cause, and that was the end of it.

It turned out she had never written the check. What she had done was paid for the dinners, paid for the meetings, conducted travel, and I did talk to -- because again so many of the things were exaggerated or untrue -- I asked General Singlaub in February, I believe, did Barbara actually contribute $100,000, and he said, "Oh, yes, it was at least that and her expenses that she incurred for that shipment."

But he never mentioned to me that he had ever met with Glatt or had any discussions. However, I would assume that if he were one of the principals at the meeting -- and

Q And with regard to the meeting you had with

Singlaub --

A I would say it was the 1st of September precisely because my first day on the job I was asked by Barbara if I minded accompanying General Singlaub to see Colonel North.

Again, in retrospect, I think that the reason they wanted me to go was that I was the one who was making the appointment possible. That was not explained to me, but General Singlaub later told me he had been unable to see Colonel North for a very long period of time, and I think it was by having me go that it was the willingness to see me that Colonel North acceded to the meeting and all.

Q The only people present at the meeting were yourself, General Singlaub --

And I was intent on concluding the meeting because, as I told you before, I thought it was a waste of Colonel North's time. General Singlaub wasn't raising points that seemed to me to be useful to the work that I then knew Colonel North to be responsible for.

0 There was discussion of a list at that time, is that correct?

That was one of the items he asked about, the list.

Did you actually see a list at that time?

No. He just asked. I believe it was a five by eight or three by five card with points on it, and I noticed that because I think it is unusual for a principal to write things out like that, and I guess I thought that was probably a good thing to do.

I have never really done that unless it was a very long and complicated agenda. You know what you want to Liscuss and you live it, and you go in to the principal and you go over the points, and if you need a reminder you have a paper like a list and you bring that out and say, now, and that was a charge that Barbara had thrown out, "Don't forget to ask about the list."

General Singlaub asked about the list, just that way, "What about the list?" And the answer was, "I don't have anything to do with that any more, and that is all up with Casey and the CIA," and a series of complaints about the CIA.

- Q Bear with me. Insofar as you have a recollection, I want to get a fix on it. It appears, from what we have, that this list would have been submitted to Casey at the CIA prior to the meeting.
 - A Well, prior to it.
- Q Is it your understanding that what Singlaub was asking North is essentially, "What is the status of the list in terms of whether the CIA is going to buy from us?" Is that what he was basically asking?
- A No. It wasn't raised in that context at all, and I assume that what they were talking about was the Central Intelligence Agency's interest in obtaining at the lowest possible price -- let me withdraw that -- it wasn't even a question of price or economy, and there wasn't any role for GMT that I saw at that time or perceived at that time. But it was not raised that way at all, and it was immediately dismissed by North, "You know, I don't know anything about it; I can't do anything about it" -- that kind of tone.

My bias is that you need a strong Central Intelligence Agency, and it should be comprised of two houses -- intelligence collecting and analytical capability. It should be the best of the world, and the operational capability, which should proceed always with the permission of Congress, with the over-watch committees, and with the elected -- and through the elected officials, constitutionally appointed civilian authorities. It should not become actions that are undertaken by lieutenant colonels, colonels, or generals or admiral anywhere in the world on their own. They might propose that. They very rarely do.

hours. I think they made some mistakes in what they were doing down there.

If you go back and look at the history of it, there clearly were a lot of mistakes made with cherry bomb mines in the harbor. That was a terrible mistake, both tactically, morally, and from an international law standpoint. They were ineffective from a pragmatic standpoint and should never have been done.

There were other mistakes that were made. The Psychological Operations book, which incidentally has been caricatured. You really need to look at that. It is not that bad a book. What was a mistake, it was a mistake because it talked to the presumed readers as though they were college seminar students instead of people who had not finished the primary grades, which was in many cases the situation, and very young boys and not the sophisticated level that the book is pitched on.

But the book, I think, has been unfairly lampooned. On the other hand, it was a mistake. Any psychological operator in the Army who would have brought up a book like that and offered it as a manuscript, we would assignment and from any further have removed him from his

A No. I think they were general complaints. There were probably some specifics to flesh out the generics and, you know, they are doing this, for example; they are doing this or not doing that. But I don't recall what the specifics were.

No. In fact, the only ones I recall are from your questions. Oh, there was one. It was the first one asked. A million dollar bounty on a HIND helicopter. That was the first one.

Q But he said the bounty was still in effect and he still would like to see a HIND?

- A Right.
- Q And the intention was -- was there a programmatic discussion with North at that point about how you all might go about acquiring a HIND?
 - A No, not at all.
- Q You did in fact ultimately become involved in at least thinking through ways a HIND could be acquired.

Is that right?

A Yes, very carefully and we can go into that when you wish.

Q I think it may make sense to do that now, so let's take a break from September and I'd like you to give me your best recollection of how you became involved in that matter and what you did.

A Well, I think I have a fairly clear recollection of that. First of all, when I left the meeting with Colonel North I didn't leave with any intention of getting involved on the recovery of a HIND helicopter from Nicaragua.

At a subsequent date in September, Dr. Ray Cline

But, as a trader, a business man, he had entre to all these countries, and that's why Dr. Cline thought he was a remarkable resource.

So, with Dr. Cline prevailing on me to come over and assist and asking Barbara if I could do this as a favor for Dr. Cline, during, you know, our normal duty hours, she said, "Yes, absolutely. Go over there and it may be interesting. You may learn a lot of things. He's a business man and he's going to all these capitals."

I went over and talked to him.

Q To Pierson?

A Right. I found him to be utterly worthless as a source, and that was my personal evaluation -- a name dropper who would produce cards for everybody -- the son of the President of Mexico, this foreign minister, that person.

A whom I have given you before. I asked them to join the conversation because of Dr. Cline, you know, the former DCI, very respected representation that this man was a tremendously important source and nobody was paying attention to him.

What I got from him was a distribe on why the United States wasn't doing anything that it should be doing in Central America and should go down and overthrow all this communist regime in Nicaragua and do a lot of very positive, substantive things, all of which I disagreed with. And I told him that.

I said, That's the worst thing the United States can do. I had seen my role in the last three years working to prevent any unilateral U.S. intervention in Central America or anywhere else in Latin America.

In my judgment, it would be bad short, mid and long-term and increasingly bad as you kept going out in the more distant time periods.

And it was, you know, to waste my time, because it was a total waste of time to hear what I heard from Presidents in Latin America, from Foreign Ministers, from Defense Ministers, from heads of Armed Forces in private, units we should bring in, and then that same person, when he speaks to the press or the media or publicly would denounce the U.S. policy to provide support for the Salvadoran armed forces, to resist that country being taken over by communist insurgency, or to do anything with respect to the contras.

So you're getting, you know, the hypocrisy, the double standard, what they say for public consumption and not what they tell you privately.

And I think, if you get Elliott Abrams over here, that at a very high level, he and the White House people hear this all the time. They go around and they're told what you need to do is come down here and invade, but publicly they denounce every alpha to omega of the present U.S. policy, which is one short fingernail of that kind of a concept that's being urged on us privately by the Latin American leaders, year respectation.

In Nicaragua, they're going to destroy us, they'll tell you.

0 Let me take you back to Pierson --

Just to finish this point. So Guy Pierson was giving me this speech that I have heard from so many Latin American leaders and it was annoying. It was a waste of time.

So, I, with some asperity, told him he was wasting my time to tell me this, that we weren't going to do anything like that; nobody in the United States government should listen to that kind of proposal.

What you need to do, I told him, is go down and get the business community, the church community and the government officials to say to their people what you're saying here, how dangerous this insurgency is, how bad communism is, and what needs to be done is to take a strong stand by Latin American officials in the Latin American UNCLASSIFIED sector.

They have to come up against it. And then I said it's possible that the United States could fall in behind and provide support, first of all, on the economic level and certain political support and, possibly, if there were ever any concerted action under the Rio Treaty that were led by the Latin Americans, then the United States, if the Rio Treaty is invoked, since they are signatory of it, could participate.

But they should have a minor role. And if we did it, I said, the way I was proposing to them, you wouldn't need a military intervention; you could do this thing with the resources that were down there. So why don't you do that?

And I said, if you go around and you travel, there's an advertisement from "Soldier of Fortune" magazine for $1 million for a HIND helicopter. Why don't you tell your friends to go produce a HIND helicopter?

Because I knew that that would be very valuable.

202-347-3700

800-336-6646

It would be  from an intelligence standpoint and would save lives in the future, unhoped for and, hopefully, defer future conflicts.

But, if they're not deferred, we should know all there is to know about the HIND because that's the bird that's going to eat us up.

So I threw that out to him and he said, "I can get that," and I was very skeptical about that. But he then followed up with a lawyer in California, whose name I have forgotten, who seemed to be even less professional and less likable than Mr. Pierson, and on Dr. Cline's importunings I got back into this on several more occasions.

And in the course of doing it them -- to have the contacts that could produce a HIND, I said, "I don't want to be involved in this, but here is the information."

And I passed it on. It came to my attention that there was no plan. Now, you had this thing out. It wasn't 7-Elevens, it was all over Central America. And there was at least a possibility that somebody was going to get in a helicopter and fly out with it. And there were no provisions anywhere along the line to receive this helicopter, to give it any directions or to sequester it once it got in.

Sur record --

So, aware now, as an American citizen who had the technical and professional qualifications to develop a plan, I put together with the assistance of Mike Timpani a plan that if anybody were to fly out an aircraft, which way would you go to avoid, you know, the dangers or get shot down on the way out; number two, get shot down on the way in, because the Salvadorans or the Hondurans would, if they didn't know it was coming and there was nothing set up -radio frequencies, an alert provision or any contingency planning -- they would shoot down or destroy the helicopter on the ground.

Further, what do you do with the ordinance a board? You bring in a HIND helicopter with all the sophisticated ordinance it carries, where can you land it? How could you make sure the people who brought it out were properly treated?

If a defector did come out and if it were, as was suggested at one time -- this would be very sensitive information. I got it as unclassified, but it's very sensitive information. If it's true. And I was told it was true.

and the pilot, which I don't think he could really do, but he would force the pilot to take it out, then you had to make provisions that he was properly received and if he brought his family out that they were properly received, that you didn't have people shot on the ground or mistreated on the ground.

So I developed a plan which took all of these things into consideration and I turned it over to the Pentagon, to the Joint Staff, the JCS -- when I say the Pentagon, the Secretary of Defense's Office of Latin American Affairs and specifically to Dr. Ikle -- I-k-l-e-and other programs

A I turned it in to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to somebody there, to a Colonel in Army Intelligence who works on Central America, with the admonition, "Please get this into the system, because I don't want to be involved in this."

These contacts were in effect pushed on me. They seemed like they could produce fruit, but it should not be done by anybody in the private sector. If it's going to be done at all, it should be done with the U.S. government.

and hand over copies or make sure that they had received copies of the entire report.

In other words, I made a memorandum of all these contacts with Mr. Pierson and this despicable lawyer who was going to be his partner, who immediately wanted three or four million out of patriotism. And that bothered me a great deal because I had lost an eye, the function of my lungs, a kidney and I have all kinds of orthopedic injuries that I'm really totally disabled, serving my country, and for these people who profess to be patriots and were going to do, as Mr. Pierson said, with nothing in it for me and now, all of a sudden, everybody wants a million dollars, including the lawyer in California.

I said, "I don't want to have anything to do with you if that's your concept of your wanting to serve your country, Nicaragua."

The lawyer was from Cuba, "And if this is your concept of patriotism, I don't even want to deal with people like that; even if you produced the HIND. I wouldn't want to be associated with you."

I pretty much washed my hands of it. But, in the discovery of the fact that we had this information out, whether we wanted it to be done or not, and that there was a real possibility that might come out with the bird, or that some other pilot might bring it out, and there was no plan to receive it or no plan to tell the pilots where to fly or how to fly so that they would be below the radar coverage -- and there are places where you can do that and places where you can't, and also places where you can land for refueling, and a provision to jettison the ordinance at some point, you know, because I can't imagine coming in to El Salvador to land at any particular place where you -- or Honduras -- where you're coming in with live ordinance support, you wouldn't run the risk of being shot down.

So, one of the first things you should do is get rid of the ordinance. Then I looked into the possibility if the United States government ever wanted to support this thing of a ship that could come -- there is a private vessel that does work for the government, that has a landing deck on it, that could land the ship.

And all of this was part of the plan, which I have no copy of. I turned all this in to the various government agencies and said, "I'm out of it." I didn't want to get into it in the first place.

I heard about it because of General Singlaub's question to Ollie North. I used it really as, you know, don't give me any more sermons on how the United States should intervene; why don't you people do something.

I really used it as an example that I didn't think he was going to come up on. But Dr. Cline is an expert in this and thought that they had a real capability to bring it out.

So I'm now reporting all of this. And of course one of the people that I gave a copy of the plans to -- and all the reporting memorandum on it was Colonel North -- and I told the Pentagon and the agency that I had done this, that Colonel North had a copy of it because that was his proper responsibility.

- Q How did you give it to Colonel North?
- A Personally.
- 14 Q Handed?
 - A Yes.
 - Q Did you meet with him and discuss it?
 - A No. Well, I don't want to say I didn't, but my recollection is I met him briefly and gave him it and said, "You don't need to look at this now because it's a contingency plan."

In any case, I had no idea Colonel North was personally involved in any kind of operation. That is not my idea of the appropriate role for anybody on the NSC staff at any time in any kind of operation.

And because of that I said, "You don't need to look at this now. Put this into the system so that there is a plan. There's a lot of useful information in it. For example, if we ever had occasion, with Congressional resolutions and White House decisions, the State Department, the Pentagon, where we had to take in concert with other allies some positive action forced on us because the Sandinistas invade Honduras or Costa Rica."

I pointed out to him that the reciprocals of all these legs, these courses plotted, and the information would be useful in that context.

But that's not why I did it. I was not planning any kind of military operation. I was simply offering a way to properly receive the crew, the people defecting, so they wouldn't be mistreated, killed or the bird destroyed or given back within a couple of hours.

- Q You met then with Colonel North and gave it to him where?

I don't really think it is, any of this, by the way, but Dr. Cline and I did agree on one thing: that often in this business, you know, intelligence, you don't deal with very lovely people and sometimes some very unlikely people can do some very unlikely things.

The fact that this man was a trader, that he had in fact been to school there, there was no doubt about that. He had been a classmate of two or three other commandantes, knew the Air Force Chief personally and had access to the families and, in Latin America, things can be done that way that you can't do any other way at all.

People will respond through family connections that will transcend everything. The fact that he did have these contacts, which had been verified, and the connections, made it at least a possibility that he could do it.

There may be various iterations of it, but the concept, you know, from 5 October on, I was telling Mr. Pierson not to do anything or to put everything on hold, and Dr. Cline agreed and I agreed to that because the aircraft went down.

Now there were policy ramifications that to have any person, even a private citizen, even appearing to be encouraging this, could be very counterproductive.

Not because the Congress would be critical but because it would hurt the interests of the United States. And my concern was always to protect the interests of the United States.

As I say, I got into this and I would not ever have proposed offering this reward. But there are

Q Essentially, what we're trying to track is the nature of what Dr. Cline was doing

A I think Dr. Cline was totally professional and proper on this. I may be wrong.

Q I'm not suggesting --

A I want to go on record as saying under oath that I think Dr. Cline, whether he was right or not, I'm not prepared to say. And in this evaluation of Alonzo, because he's really an experienced and he told me, informed me in another context, a very sophisticated man.

Indeed he is. He's an intelligence professional of the highest order. He's written books, practiced it and he's achieved some really great feats in intelligence and operations for the United States over 40 years.

So, for Dr. Cline to think this was worthy and interesting, and I think it was his suggestion to me that there's no plan -- immediate plan to get this out -- that caused me to sit down and start putting something together.

And then I turned it in and when I turned it in,

In fact, when I turned it in -- and I want this on the record -- I didn't put it in with a recommendation that we pursue it. I said that if anybody in the United States government thinks it's worth pursuing, here are the contacts and here is a way to do it. I don't want to be involved in it.

And it shouldn't be done unless there is government involvement. See, this time I didn't know that there were private sources and organizations or activities going on, and I really deplored the idea that "Soldier of Fortune" magazine would put out a reward like this because you could stimulate somebody to doing it without the government being involved to receive the bird.

A Yes. Now we're processing water back and forth from the mill. I told them that I didn't think they were very good people, that Dr. Cline did, but my own evaluation would be that they weren't the right kind of people to be dealing with with him because in Miami and because the more people that knew about this and the more machinations, the less likely it was to succeed.

What Mr. Alonzo had said to me was that he had a personal connection with the man who was going to bring out the helicopter and he would go down there as a trader and tell him, you know, how to get it out and where to go with it and assured him -- see, this is a family connection now, somebody who is closely tied with the family, and Alonzo said he was related to this man on his wife's side and could assure him that the million dollars would be paid.

The problem was, according to Alonzo, after he looked into all of this, was that, yes, everybody knew about this, but nobody believed it, and that's what I learned, too.

Everybody in Nicaragua knew about the posters and award but nobody believed it was for real. That it was just, you know, a Psy-OPS ploy on the part of the Americans to stir up discussion and trouble in the Sandinista Air Force, but nobody would really be paid a million dollars.

So, if you were going to get the plane, you had to convince whoever was going to bring it out -- the

Q And as you understand it, there was never any suggestion this was a GMT project?

A No, of course not. What I did on this, I did on my own time. However, the typing was done at GMT of the plan with Barbara's permission. And I can tell you for the record that she did not look on this as a way to win favor with the CIA.

I didn't know that it did.

So you don't know how it got there?

No. That's the first I've known it went to Colonel North. All I knew is that it was Barbara's idea, which I did not believe, that she in her own development of the idea had asked me to look at and, as far as I knew, the document didn't have any circulation outside of me, and I didn't do anything with it because I didn't think it was a good idea.

It certainly wasn't a workable idea, not by a company, and I don't think it would be in the interest, as I testified before, of the United States to propose such a thing.

A No. She never told me she gave it to him nor that it was in his possession through any means. She was very proud of the document and of the idea and she told me she had discussed it with General Haig, and that General Haig, according to her, said it was brilliant.

I doubt if General Haig said that to her. And if he did, did it in a kind way. Now, in Barbara's defense on this point, what she's proposing here is not that anything be done surreptitiously, but it be done as a conscious part of U.S. policy, and the way I would read what she's saying here with each passing year, Congress has been uncooperative, that has to do with the funding.

I think you will have to agree, whether you want to on the record or not, that Congress' sad legacy, particularly with respect to Latin America, is that the rhetoric has always outstripped their behavior.

In fact, the rhetoric of what we are going to do starting with the Alliance for Progress with each President has been outrageous. We have never done one fraction of what we said we were going to do, and this is the real source of so much of the antipathy, hatred and anti-U.S. feelings that exist down in Latin America.

We promised them everything and we've done almost nothing for them. What Barbara I think is saying here is that the United States government, not in a clandestine way at all, would adopt this as a policy and overcome the Congressional unwillingness to fund foreign military assistance by making a business out of it.

Q Let me address you to item number 4, paragraph 3,

That's a bad part of the paper and that's why I never associated myself. I never showed this to anybody. I never advanced this idea to anybody and I threw cold water on it and did nothing with it in GMT. It never became an active program of GMT and I'm probably responsible for that.

I'm sure to Barbara's dismay.

You had no further or additional knowledge about this proposal or attempts to implement it or anything else?

No. I would say it's never meant to be implemented. It's nonimplementable, to use a Haigism.

Well, with regard to what General Secord and Mr. Hakim were doing, which may have resulted in a situation where millions of dollars were kept in such a way that they could be used to support various insurgencies, do you know of any relationship between Mrs. Studley's proposal here and what General Secord and Albert Hakim were in fact doing?

within the White House, then it could provide the intellectual basis or the theory for what was being done. That's why I don't believe it's Barbara's paper.

I don't think she has -- and I mean her no disrespect, but I don't think she has the background to formulate a complex international relations proposal like this.

As I told you before, this would take a State Department to implement and would take an interagency arena -- the State Department couldn't do it alone.

You know, there are at least four or five agencies that would have to be involved in this besides the obvious ones: the Pentagon, the White House and the Central Intelligence Agency.

You would need the State; you would need Treasury; you would need Commerce.

And the 8 reason I say "David Duncan called Barbara 17 September q 10 twice?", I didn't take the calls. I have never spoken to or met with David Duncan. This was a message the secretary had 11 given me and was going to give to Barbara, and Barbara 12 13 tended to kind of, with knee-jerk regularity, to react positively to anything that hit her desk. So I had seen 14 this, and I thought it was a terrible idea that she had 15 16 anything to do with Duncan. And I said that in my memo. A bad idea. Bad for Barbara and bad for GMT, underlining 17 the "and." Neither honest nor prudent. Duncan is a bomb-18 19 thrower. GMT has no connection with him. That's what I was told. Never did. Then I gave her an appraisal of David Duncan, very conservative.

- Where did you get this information on Duncan?
- Let's see. I haven't looked at this in months. Oh, from Barbara. There seems to be something missing. There has to be, because I don't write like that, so something is missing. "Not all well going."

No. I don't know anything at all about the PIA VISTA nor the cargo nor Patrice nor was ever told anything at all about that. I can't handle the second thing at all. What I can relate to is the -- what I testified to you before is that Barbara said she had a call from David Duncan before I came to GMT, and that he had met with her, that she had then written up a memo, which we sent to Ollie North, and she talked for weeks about David Duncan. And I could never understand why she was so preoccupied with David Duncan, because her story to me was that David Duncan wanted to be a supplier or a broker or, you know, a source for Barbara, and I said, "You don't want to deal with a guy like this. He's dishonest; he's imprudent, you know, he's telling things that aren't true to the press. And we don't want to be associated with him in any way."

And Barbara agreed with me. Barbara never said

"But I have dealt with him in the past" or "I know something about a ship."

The way she presented the story to me, it was just David Duncan had come in out of the cold, told her all about the ship. It didn't have anything to do with her or GMT, and he was proposing that they establish a business relationship, and I was telling her, "You don't want to be associated with David Duncan." And she agreed with me.

At no time was this ship mentioned by name.

Now, it may be, because I told you I never heard of the ship, that the press stories at the time mentioned this ship, and I saw the name, but the name of that ship, I would swear was never uttered in GMT.

A This strikes me as a series of untruths. Now, just from my knowledge of the way the United States Government and the system operates, perhaps if it turns out that all these things that have been in the media are true,

I might have a different impression of how the government operates. But the government that I know and the NSC that I know wouldn't operate this way and wouldn't deal with a guy like Duncan.

And Duncan, as I suggested to you, and it is my speculation, is a man who was stuck with an order, and he didn't have either the money or the goods, and he had to go and explain to his partner or his boss that he had lost the shipment and the money, and you see you a man lashing out wildly trying to involve other people. And I speculated or this to Barbara, because I knew she had this obsession with him. I was new. And you want to be polite to your boss, wasting time, instead of working on business deals.

Of course, there would be a different explanation if there was some sort of business connection between Barbara and these people, because then all of that would have been very relevant. At the time, it just seemed to me to be totally irrelevant. And I don't know that she did have a connection with him. I certainly learned of none when I was there.

I don't know Nunez -- N-u-n-e-z M-o-n-t-e-z -- a colonel. But Duncan stated that Colonel Nunez Montez' partner is the former G-2. I think that's correct. I think he is. I think that may be true.

- . Q Do you know Vincent Castero?

Duncan had with Mr. Castero?

No. Wait. I think, yes.

When Duncan was getting all this publicity and giving it, North told me he was going to sue Duncan, because Duncan said he had been to see Colonel North -- and please, I'm very inexact on the guote here -- had been to see Colonel North, and Colonel North had blessed or approved or disapproved or something. But he quoted a meeting with Colonel North that never took place. And I said to North, "Was he ever even in the building?" North said, "Yes, he had been to see several people." And he said, "Thank God I wasn't here the day he was supposed to see me, but somebody had sent him to see me." Then my recollection is, it was Vincent Castero, a very good man. When did you have this conversation with Colonel North? Well, it must have been in September. What you see is a braggart and a liar to me, transparently, and then Barbara apparently has written Duncan, "Duncan believed to be a very dangerous man." That's certainly what I would tell her. Is this supposed to have been written after I If she says this. spoke to her? No, before.

Duncan willingly gave, in a boastful manner.

So I think what she is doing is providing a useful service. When you read the latter part of it, common sense conclusions, she's reporting a conversation and sending it over to the NSC. I think that's the responsible thing to do. But I didn't know then, I didn't see this document then. I did not know before covert black money could have on TOW ramifications. It sounds like Barbara did. But I don't. She never revealed that to me.

Q Do you know if this material was, in fact, in whole or in part, provided to Colonel North?

A I was told that the document that was taken over by General Singlaub, when I went on the first of September, was a copy of the Duncan memorandum, which I had not seen, in a sealed envelope.

Q All of these documents, you will note, are dated September 2. Does that give you any additional recollection that you would have taken this material on September 2, as opposed to September 1?

THE WITNESS: When I testified before I told you there was one item, a noncombatant helicopter, that I hoped would eventually go to the resistance down there. These were medical evacuation ships, and this was one that I was very much in favor of seeing them get, nonlethal equipment, MedEvac, and -- but you could use it for anything. It would enable them to move people around and it was a very favorable INLLASSIFIED.

I don't remember what the bottom line was but it went down considerably.

BY MR. KERR:

- Q This letter would have been addressed by you to right?
- A That's right.
- Q Would this have been the first written communication you had
- A No. Because the first one we guessed was somewhere around 12 October. GMT told me that they had on file the letter that I took out there which was dated the 12th. That's why I guessed when I testified to you before that my visit would have been around 12, or shortly after that, October. They should have given you that letter if you subpoenaed it because it is in their file and the day I came over here they told me in the morning that it was there.

They were then sold as a fleet with an enormous quantity of spare parts to a man in California who had them in a hermetically sealed warehouse in cocoons.

The aircraft were inspected by GMT, I think Barbara, Michael Marks and Mike Timpani went out there and looked at them before I came on board and it was just a remarkable buy. They were going to be very price — the price would go down, as I stated. It did go down.

As a unit, with the spares, you would want to buy them that way. The spare parts, there might be, what was it seven aircraft?

Q Yes.

A There might be five transmissions and there might be so many of these and so many of that. It was the Army original list for a buy of seven helicopters that went to then was turned back over to the next buyer through with the aircraft.

So you would want all seven to go at once and it would be an administrative nightmare to try to sort out those

You had asked me a question earlier, you know, why wouldn't the agency go directly to Glatt? Well, maybe you could do better brokering him down, leveraging him down by using a broker. And as long as the agency operated that way I believe they'd be on the side of the angels. Their interest is what's the lowest price we can get there for the American taxpayers. If you use three brokers, it doesn't matter if it's the lowest price they can go except, I have

A Well, what happened was -- you know, he's a very sophisticated arms dealer, so he got the list. He priced it. And then when the explosion started -- and all that was very normal. He was saying then apparently to Barbara, I learned later, this is the Central Intelligence Agency's account. This is the one I have been wanting to get. And Barbara was, I think, unfortunately, agreeing with him. And probably thinking she was doing it elliptically by using double talk.

If it happened, and I think it did from all the pieces of information that came to me, that would be in contravention with any kind of agreement we had or commonsense would tell you, dealing with any agency. You shouldn't reveal who your client is. When you are going to some source or broker for a source; especially if the source is in the Soviet Union's sphere of influence or control. Poland is both.

So, that was bad enough. But when the rejection

And I don't know. When you've got a guy who owns a county, nine farms, I suggested to Barbara that that might be why we had the high prices. That we would do better going in with an ordinary supplier. But it you've got a guy who is paying off at the top, Werner Glatt could be faced with very heavy prices because his own approach is wrong. You know he's going in at the top and paying everybody down the line.

Whereas in the Communist system, it's very capitalistic in practice, but because they don't admit it, the system is very inefficient, if you went in at the bottom and asked the factory manager who has all these quotas and has to produce goods and sell or he's in trouble with the central committee with his country, you'd probably get a better price than if you started at the top and had to pay everybody off all the way down.

I said it could be that Werner Glatt who rips you off for himself, he didn't get those nine farms for nothing, would be going at it in such a pompous way as a name dropper wanting to get associated and getting the psychic return of all these officials would have a lot more officials to pay off and therefore his price would be higher than uthers'.

Let me say something to you on the record under oath that I have given to you on the telephone.

I talked to Dr. Cline before he left for his overseas trip to South Africa, I believe two days ago. And I told you that I had cautioned him, I said without in any way trying to interfere with Barbara's practice of her business, but just you be very careful about dealing with your alma mater, so that you are not led down a primrose path.

Dr. Cline said: Thank you. But I have had very little to do. He said, I've done nothing. The only thing I've done is relayed, using a different channel than you were using, at a higher level, as information. communicated her desires -- relayed -- communicated her desires to the agency. And I have undertaken no other negotiations or approaches to them.

Q Did Dr. Cline ever tell you that he approached Acting Director Gates on this matter?

A No. He told me when I -- as I testified to you late at night, the last time we were here -- that when I reported to Dr. Cline what had said, that he would not deal with Dr. Cline, he would not even talk to him other than to say hello on the phone and he had to amend his remarks to allow for that, Dr. Cline said: Well, I wouldn't go to him anyway. I'd go in higher up. I'd go to Gates.

But it was subjunctive: "I would." He didn't say he had or he was going to. It was conditional. If I was going to, I would go to Gates.

So he never told me who he went to or whether he relayed any paper. The term I communicated, quoting

Dr. Cline, "her desires" -- as information. Not as a lobbying effort.

- Q Dr. Cline has or has not revealed what his remuneration would be from GMT if this sale were made?
 - A No.
 - Q He has not revealed that?

MR. KERR: Let me show you a memorandum dated December 17, 1986, or referring to a memorandum -- strike that.

A memorandum that refers to a meeting of December which I would like you to 17, 1986 review and tell me if you have you have ever seen it.

THE WITNESS: Wait, go back. I believe he told me, but this is a tenuous recollection, that Barbara had offered to split the profits 50:50 with him and that Barbara told him that he would be the front for her because she sensed that with the publicity she was receiving through the Washington Post and my leaving, that they would not want to deal with her. So, therefore, she went to Dr. Cline and asked Dr. Cline to set himself up as a front. That was Dr. Cline's words, quoting Barbara, to him.

I said: Ray, you don't want to get involved in anything like that. You would have to notify the agency who you were really representing. You couldn't, you know, pretend to be Dr. Ray Cline doing this with no connection to GMT which in reality GMT and Werner Glatt were the ultimate. I don't know if the agency would make you say that, they always told me they didn't care what the sources were, but I always told them so they could come in with their tank commander's override so, to speak, and say we don't want to deal with that man because he's too sloppy or he's burned us before or he's too close to the KGB or whatever, doesn't have to give me the reason.

I toid that to Ray and he readily agreed to that.

At that point my recollection is that he told me that Barbara said that the profits would be split 50:50. I thought that was a far cry from where we had started out.

I remember, the reason I'm so sure of this for the record, is that I reflected, you know, here I've spent all this time arguing with this woman about bringing prices down and she really got very angry with me. Now she's giving away 50 percent of her profit which, if we had done that as I wanted to do, I wanted to come in with a 3 percent or 2 percent profit on a $40 million deal that would be, I thought, sufficient. And I was just blown out of her office in anger when I proposed any such notions.

Now I brought, through negotiating, her profit down as you'll see on that spread sheet to 5 or 10 percent, 2-1/2 on some; and now she's going to give half of that away to Dr. Cline. I reflected to myself where we would have been if, on the 31st of December, we had gone in with asking 50 percent less of a much lower set of prices?

In other words, if you could have gotten to where she was somewhere early in March or the end of February, she might have had a contract from them or the promise of one or the real hope of getting one.

BY MR. KERR:

- Okay. I appreciate that. This is Exhibit 26.
- I have, because of that, the irony, all the pain I had been through with her and now she's giving away 50 percent of her profit, that's what gives me the clear recollection that Dr. Cline had said it was a 50:50 arrangement.

I was surprised to hear that because to the best of my knowledge he has never done that before. His work has been scholarly, consulting in the surest sense of the word. And not been in the -- in this business.

(Exhibit 26 identified.)

So if I were speaking I'd call him back and say with reference to Werner's two to eight items there's some interest -- real interest, real desire. proposing that, because this is the one that Werner Glatt was having -- throwing a tantrum over, that we should pin him down to get a price so we could say, well, everybody understood that if you bought all eight, each unit price would be cheaper if you could give us a price, you know, two for so much; five for so much, and eight for so much.

Then the Burbank seven items are the seven helicopters and they were in Burbank, California.

Q Okay.

A Now here I'm saying "great desire," underlined.

Real thirst; money is the sole problem.

So, where I unkindly said, and unintentionally, that Barbara was stretching the language to say client had expressed a real interest, clearly he did or I wouldn't have written this.

A It varied. Most of the times were at my initiative, carefully trying to sense the waters so I wawn't bothering a busy man who was plagued with investigations. Although I was yet to go through that, I had an anticipatory sensitivity for it, which was not misplaced.

Sometimes he would call me and ask me to come down.

 Most of the time it was at my initiative that I went down there.

A That was Casey's illness and the paralysis of the system is because of all the newspaper stories. I testified under oath, both to Mr. Albright and to you, earlier, that the government was not doing, even, things it should be doing while all these bombshells were going off.
Q Okay. The "no action" is no action as to what?
A On the List.
Q On the list to be produced to you to price; is that right?
A No. It had already been produced to us and we

A No. It had already been produced to us and we priced it and we had come back in. There was no action.

Remember, this is before we were told your prices are too high.

 $\ensuremath{\mathtt{Q}}$. I thought you got your list after that, but I'll go back.

 λ . You are right. Let me straighten that out. You are correct.

What this is -- I had gone to him in October and then gone back or he had come to me to tell me nothing was happening. So, this is kind of a "John the Baptist precursor." It sets the list when you get it, to price, will certainly include. And then he had these items because I was

ιι asking for a notional list. I said it would help us -because I was interested sincerely in getting the lowest price -- I said if you could tell me that you wanted AK rifles, the family of AKs, I could go out and start -- I could pick a notional number, like 1000. Because you would know you wouldn't buy 100 of those, or 10,000 or 5000, I'll make up a number and start getting some prices so we have a basis and can stimulate the sources into being competitive so we get a lower price.

He said I can't tell you until the board of directors meets. It's something like an ordnance board, the military ordnance -- although he said they didn't call it that, that meets, that determines what the requirements are from the operators or requesters, whoever they are in the agency. And then works it all together to see if it makes sense that people should have these.

For example, you could have an operator or intell guy out there saying let's get a bunch of these and maybe you don't need them or they are obsolescent.

On the other hand, you might have the same person asking for very modern equipment, and you wouldn't want to give it to him person because it would either put a signature

What you don't want to do is bring in a mix of weapons, different families, different countries, different generations. Because then that complicates your training and your supply and your maintenance problem. So it's better to work with Mauser rifles.

- Q Let's come back to the notion of "no action."

 Would it be correct that what he was telling you there had been -
 - λ No movement.
 - Q -- no movement to create the shopping list?
 - A That's what it was.
 - Q Because of Casey's incapacity?
 - A Right.
 - Q And because of the publicity --
 - A Inner paralysis of the system.
- Q And that was because of the publicity over the Iran-Contra matter?

A He said that money was a problem; that always in the past it had not been a problem. You know, once the item had been approved there was adequate money to do it. And they had not expected that money was going to be a problem but money was.

In other words, I take it, they were affected by Gramm-Rudman and by the budgetary constraints. And I think that's good. He didn't think it was bad either, from a value judgment standpoint. It's just it came as a surprise to them that money was going to be a problem this year.

Q 'And it would be a problem for the CIA, is what you are telling me?

A Right. In other words, they would have to be -- and I was very glad to get that information because it meant we would have to be very competitive on the prices. It would mean you'd have to make very judicious buys and you would want to make sure you got the most for the dollar; that you didn't buy junk.

Barbara's thesis, and we should get it on the record, was that the other suppliers sold old, rusty junk. That is not what -- and I believe that because she had a great deal of knowledge. She knew all these people, meeting talking with them, traveling around to the different countries, looking at warehouses that I had never seen.

So, when she told me this I believed her and I believe that she said we can come in -- we'll do it at, and she would give certain quotes. And nobody -- she'd bang her fingernail on the table. Nobody can supply those weapons for dust settles?

A Right.

Q What does that mean?

A The scarce funds, from Gramm-Rudman and funding stream which was affecting all government agencies and I believe then and now that the senior officials in the White House, in the interagency arena that would be responsible for giving the green light, and certainly the Congress, the overwatch and oversight committees, were just not wanting to unleash any more initiatives when they had an absolute confusion of facts and data and who shot John and who did what to whom over the Iran, and then as we learned the Contrabusiness.

So I think it was reasonable that the high officials would do that. I certainly would, if I were in her position.

I would say well, wait, don't start anything else until we find out what we've got here. That's not always the best thing from a foreign policy or national security policy, but certainly what I would do if I were a senior official, again, and I assume that it is what they were doing. And I had been told that, too: I think maybe a mutual agreement that that was it, on speculation. Or maybe he told me.

But I was hearing that from others and I knew how the government works.

Now --

The first thing, if you don't know what's going on, is don't do any more of it or don't do any analog programs in other areas until you sort out the mess you've got in the one that you know went wrong or think went wrong.

Q That passage goes on to say, "however, we are still promised the $4 million to $17 million package which stands apart from other inertia." What did you mean by that?

Well, you can see I've mixed the metaphor beautifully there. I don't know how inertia stands apart or how something stands apart from inertia, but if you'll forgive me that rhetorical blunder -- what we are saying there is that we are still promised a list to price

Remember I'm writing in shorthand. You are having trouble reading it because it is so telegraphic.

I just don't want anybody to misunderstand what is going on.

This isn't even a memo for Barbara. This is just a memo for the file, more of a memo for me than anything else.

Then I'm saying, what I'm telling myself and the entity, corporate entity of GMT, is that we are going to get the package to price and that that will happen, apart from all the paralysis. Once -- even if there is no action on the list to approve the list, we'll get a list to price. That's what that is saying in shorthand.

Q What did tell you on that score? That yo looked high? Or how much fat was there? What was he talkin about?

A No, no, I think he just wondered. We were told i glowing detail by Graham that this was the absolute rock bottom price. I questioned this.

You know, any time somebody starts out by telling you this is the bottom price and the one thing that isn't negotiable is this price, that's the first price they give you, it has jet to be negotiable. So I explained all this to couldn't manage the aircraft, they were so sophisticated. It just kind of sat on the runway. If it had been that country they would have been in very good condition.

Then it was very significant to me because we were told: If they are going to a country in Latin America, they've got a good prospect in Latin America. I told you before there could only be three, Cuba, Nicaragua or Péru, not in our interest to see them go to any one of the three.

So I questioned whether country that was unloading MIGs on the so-called bottom price couldn't go lower if you offered cash. Because I knew if they sold them anywhere in Latin America it would be some kind of barter, financing, credit arrangement that would be very tenuous.

If you would pay cash, which this client would, you know, through a letter of credit, it would be instant — if you could come in and say: Never mind the price. We are willing to give you what you are asking, whatever you have in mind, how you are going to be paid, sugar cane or cigars or rum or textiles — we will give you so much in hard currency, I think you would have had a deal right away.

character witness for him; I don't believe he would do anything wrong.

As a last comment I would say Harbara has a profit motive that's high and higher than, perhaps, you or I would like to see in a person who is brokering these deals. The fact remains she has been in business for a longer period of time, you tell me, than I thought she had and she has made no money. So her efforts to make up for past business failures, or the inability to complete a transaction, is not unreasonable and I think that other sources are certainly higher. We found -- I found that out in dealing with them. four sources. But, clearly I can't speak to where I came out was whoever had the lowest bid should get the contract. Nobody should get it because they knew somebody or were friends with somebody in the White House or the agency. And I don't believe Mr. Casey would operate any differently, either.

You know, what you say to somebody in an interview: I shall have my people look into this -- means exactly that. If you have low prices, which I believe the quoted conversation was an accurate rendition of it, that that's what Mr. Casey believed. He would send it out. If his people came back and said they are twice as much as our present suppliers are, he would tell them forget about it. I don't believe Mr. Casey operated on a personal tavors basis with anybody, in the dealings I had with him starting 1981, he impressed me as a very solid man who restored morale as well as integrity in operational effectiveness to the agency, in intelligence-gathering effectiveness that it unhappily lost without making any judgments about those who were responsible for the diminution of it.

MR. KERR: Let me do one thing on the record.

It's always case with these things, we now have two exhibits

(Exhibit 12 was remarked as 12-A.)

THE WITNESS: I guess my last comment is what does disturb me and I mentioned this to you there we were off the record is the amount of material that you have revealed to me that GMT was involved in that I never knew anything about, and that bothers me because it would seem to me that if it were all straightforward, innocent, I would have been told about it or brought into it in some way.

Mr. William Casey Director, Central Intelligence Agency Langley, Virginia

Dear Bill,

The enclosed list of hardware is available for immediate delivery at the prices indicated. The list was developed in conjunction with a member of the NSC who is knowledgeable of the urgent needs of the United Nicaraguan Opposition with which the US has a continuing interest. The items can be at dockside, ready for shipment within two weeks from the date of a Letter of Credit or the deposit of actual funds.

Due to the fact the funds from Congress will not be available until after September, our bank in Switzerland, will accept a Letter of Credit from your bank and issue a loan for six to twelve months, or as needed. Our bank will fund immediately for the purchase of the listed items, thus providing the equipment that is so desperately needed now while allowing for payment at a later date.

Our banker is prepared to fly to Washington and take care of the Letter of Credit directly with your designated bank. This eliminates all bank tested telexes or paper trails. The loan can be in the name of a corporation of your choice. It is not necessary for our bank to know your identity, only your banker.

Our bank has been exceptionally discreet in processing our transactions in the past. At the close of the transactions, the bank file will only show corporations, numbered items and amounts. No reference will be made of the specific items involved in the transaction, nor of the individuals or actual organizations involved.

Please let me know as soon as possible your desires for our future actions on this matter.

Yours truly,

Joh) K. Singlaub

PERSONAL AND CONFIDENTIAL

Mr. William Casey
Director, Central Intelligence Agency
Langley, Virginia

Dear Bill,

The enclosed list of hardware is available for immediate delivery at the prices indicated. The list was developed in conjunction with a member of the NSC who is knowledgeable of the urgent needs of the United Nicaraguan Opposition with which the US has a continuing interest. The items can be at dockside, ready for shipment within two weeks from the date of a Letter of Credit or the deposit of actual funds.

Due to the fact the funds from Congress will not be available until after September, our bank in Switzerland, will accept a Letter of Credit from your bank and issue a login for six to twelve months, or as needed. Our bank will fund immediately for the purchase of the listed items, thus providing the equipment that is so desperately needed now while allowing for payment at a later date.

Our banker is prepared to fly to Washington and take care of the Letter of Credit directly with your designated bank. This eliminates all bank tested telexes or paper trails. The loan can be in the name of a corporation of your choice. It is not necessary for our bank to know your identity, only your banker.

Our bank has been exceptionally discreet in processing our transactions in the past. At the close of the transactions, the bank file will only show corporations, numbered items and amounts. No reference will be made of the specific items involved in the transaction, nor of the individuals or actual organizations involved.

Please let me know as soon as possible your desires for our future actions on this matter.

Yours truly,

To create a conduit for maintaining a continuous flow of Soviet weapons and technology, to be utilized by the United States in its support of Freedom Fighters in Nicaragua, Afghanistan, Angola, Cambodia, Ethiopia, etc.

2. PROBLEM

With each passing year, Congress has become increasingly unpredictable and uncooperative regarding the President's desire to support the cause of the Freedom Fighters, despite growing Soviet oppression. The funds have not been forthcoming to supply sufficient arms necessary for the Freedom Fighters to win. Therefor, in leiu of the necessary funding to support this goal, the following 3-Way Trade is proposed:

3. PROPOSAL

COUNTRY "A": is capable of producing an ongoing supply of Soviet-compatible arms. is at the same time trying desparately to upgrade their own military forces and equipment. They would like to purchase from Israel a wide range of military equipment.

is not capable of supporting long-term credit or barter agreements. As such, the United States is the key in the successful 3-Way Trade.

COUNTRY "C": UNITED STATES. The United States is able to provide with desired High Technology equipment and information. Based on this commodity, "The Trade would operate as follows:

The United States then has at its disposal a large and continuous supply of Soviet technology and weapons to channel to Freedom Fighters worldwide, mandating neither the consent or awareness of the Department of State or Congress.

Upon your encouragement and belief that the United States could perform its role, we will proceed with and defining their respective roles and the equipment they are willing to trade. 30 October 1986

Reference the GMT offer, dated 29 October 1986, of seven (7) AB UH-1B helicopters for $2.9 million and an accompanying handwritten memo.

I would like to confirm and extend what the $155,000 would cover:

- 100 hour inspection of all aircraft
- aircraft assembly (at the moment parts and blades are broken down for shipment)
- aircraft track of main rotor and tail rotor for smooth synchronization after assembly.
- check of all seals, hoses and connectors; replace as required
- inventory of spares
- transportation of spares to Florida
- avionics check

While all repairs uncovered by the inspection would be extra, we expect them to be minimal. However, the usually expensive work of placing back on line seven birds that have been cacooned for years is covered by the $155 K. Incidentally, we would pass this figure on to you at cost. Recognize, too, that if any defect is uncovered, the spares are on hand; hence cost of any required repair would be extremely low.

Because this fleet of seven is in such exceptional condition they will not be in the market for very long once the seven year U.S. Customs hold is lifted. It is precisely because all seven are in such good condition, that the authorized services and repair center gave us such a low quote.

- were out of country; the annotated figures in the left margin are the lower of the two who responded. At this point the two long time suppliers (15 years; 20 years) were not given copies of the list or even specific quantities. Instead they were asked to price single items in each line. As a consequence, their final bids will be lower for items where there are large quantities; e.g., line items 1-5, as well as possibly for some other lines.
- There can be no real question that the prices supplied are honest quotes with which the supplier is prepared to live. The alternative would mean that a high government official is lying; involved in wrongful activity. If this were true he would be fired on the spot and almost certainly subjected to criminal proceedings. What we have instead is an honest professional who quite properly is seeking to protect his agency and the U.S. taxpayer from being overcharged.
- If we lose the bid and later wish to do so, we can complain:
 - There was no reaction to our October submission which by coincidence carried four of the items which ultimately were given to us to price in December. three of those were higher in our December quote; one was significantly lower. Point is that if there was heartburn it should have been expressed in October said his people were scrubbing our input.
 - We were not told until yesterday that there must be competitive bidding for any arms purchased by this particular government agency; had written a recent memo to Casey assuring him that there was. More reasonably we should have been told this at the outset in accordance with normal government practice.
 - Agency was unreasonably slow in coming back to us with requested clarifications because they were going out for other quotes. Arguably (either way) they should have told us sooner that there was a price problem.
 - Agency's 8 Jan. feedbac submission of 30 Dec., feedback to our neat and complete 0 Dec., 5 Jan. and 8 Jan. was a scribbled page of annotation (Incl.) 500

4. None of the foregoing would have probably changed significantly our initial — or even our revised pricing of 5 and 8 January. We could always go in with a complaint to the Agency's Inspector General (IG) but nothing now would really support such a complaint. We certainly can check out the price ultimately paid for all 21 line items if we are not awarded the contract and at this point make a decision on any complaint. Were we do be excluded improperly we would have recourse within both government and legal channels.

6. He believes that our agent or agents are simply charging us too much; that "the ultimate source is probably the same for your materiel as it is for the other four suppliers". In this regard, I told him our contact Response: "I don't believe that could have happened".

that if we were to procure the much less expensive Chinese ordnance from Hartley, the ordership time (OST) would be 120 days. My guess is that because of all the earlier bureaucratic delays a further 120 day lag would cause the Agency to go to one of their old suppliers, even if our prices were competitive or a bit lower for Chinese items.

Congratulations on your award!

Attached is our latest effort. Please do not take it as our last. We are working for lower prices — as promised and believe we can get them. Be patient, please.

I have circled those items where we are already \underline{under} your quotes to me of 8 January.

Our sources were astounded at your quotes: "ridiculous to nuts". In some cases they assert that your quotes are below factory prices for brand new production. We have a real guestion as to whether your old suppliers are truly offering new equipment. For example, in case of see our range of quotes.

We are above your prices but notice the types. Can your supplier really provide the Our suppliers, with seeming sincerity, point to this weapon -- which they handle all the time -- as an example where the "competition can't be right".

UNREASSAFIEDT 3 You went almost too fast and too briefly for me. You graduated from UCLA in 1978. Then what job did you take? 1979; I took a postgraduate fellowship, a public affairs fellow at the Hoover Institute. How long did that last? That was a year. Then I moved on to the American Enterprise Institute to continue postgraduate work, another fellowship at AEI in Washington, D.C., in 1980 to 1981. In 1981, I went over to the Arms Control Disarmament Agency; two years there. What kind of work did you do as a fellow at the Hoover Institute? Studies in international relations, international securities affairs. How about at AEI? The same. How about at the Arms Control --I was associated with the strategic -- I was Special Assistant to the Director, but specialized in strateqic weapons. I think maybe you answered this and I didn't get it down in my notes. You started in 1981 with the Arms Control --I was there two years, and two years at Commerce. That was prior to my going to the White House. MANA QUEED-17

Right.

Q When you say two years at AEI, that is from --1 can you be a little more specific? 2 I arrived in Washington in 1980 and I was there 3 some period through 1981. I don't recall exactly offhand 4 when it was. There might have been some overlap with ACDA, 5 because at ACDA, I was a consultant initially. 6 When did you stop working for the Arms Control 7 Institute? 8 Arms Control -- when did I stop working for AEI? 9 What is your question? 10 Q · I think AEI, you said, was 1980 through 1981; 11 is that correct? 12 Into 1981. There was some overlap with ACDA 13 there. 14 All right. Q 15 When did you stop working for ACDA? 16 Sometime in 1982, and I would have to go back 17 and check. 18 Q Do you recall the season? 19 MR. KNAUER: If you don't recall, just say so. 20 THE WITNESS: I don't recall. 21 BY MR. NIELDS: 22 After you left ACDA, you went to Commerce? 23 Yes. 24 That was from sometime in 1982 until when? 25

LIMANTA CONFILE

I think 1983 or it might have been even up to 1984. I left the Administration, did some writing, and that was when I did writing for Heritage, and then I took the job at the White House. You are saying you worked at Commerce from sometime in 1982 to probably sometime in 1983? Yes. Then you left Commerce and started doing some independent writing? Sure. It was after you had been doing some independent writing for a time that you eventually worked for the White House? Right. I think it was about six months later.

When you say the White House, that is the Intelligence Oversight Board?

MR. LEON: July 1984?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

BY MR. NIELDS:

In these various jobs at the Hoover Institute, AEI, ACDA and Commerce, did you function as a lawyer or were these more in the nature of foreign policy kinds of positions?

More in the nature of in that category. Although

1 -when I was in Commerce, I did help write a decision for an 2 administrative law judge there on an international trade 3 issue, an anti-boycott issue. They needed somebody independent to do the work and so they came to an attorney I was 5 working for, John Paul, and I did legal research and so on 6 for him. How about bar memberships? 8 9 waived immediately into D.C. 10 were admitted in Pennsylvania in 1984? 12 And also --13 14 your admission in Pennsylvania? 15 Α Right. 16 as a condition to --18 19 At the Intelligence Oversight Board? 20 Right. 22 Board as counsel ever since? 23 Ever since, right. 24 25

- I took the Pennsylvania Bar in July of 1984 and
- In other words, you took the Pennsylvania Bar and
- -- and you were waived into D.C. as a result of
- And did you take that bar and become admitted
 - Condition of employment at the Board, sure.
- You have been with the Intelligence Oversight
- Can you -- I guess, first of all, I would like to ask what the function of the President's Intelligence

TRELASSIPLET

--Oversight Board is?

A Created in the mid-1970s in the wake of allegations about wrongdoing in the intelligence community, it was a recommendation from the Rockefeller Commission Report to create a board, an oversight board at the White House, and it was created to look into matters of legality of intelligence activities in the intelligence community.

Q Is it fair to say the Intelligence Oversight

Board was supposed to in some sense or another police the intelligence community from within the Executive Branch?

A Well, police is a strong word to use there. It sits on top of the Inspector General and the General Counsel system, and the way the system does work is that problems that occur in the community of illegality, impropriety, are reported up the system and we are the apex of that system, although clearly we have investigatory powers as well.

Q I am going to put a book of exhibits in front of you, and I will ask you to turn to the first exhibit in the book, which is marked BGS-1.

MR. KNAUER: Can we go off the record.

MR. NIELDS: Sure.

[Discussion off the record.]

MR. NIELDS: Let's go back on the record.

Counsel for Mr. Sciaroni has given me a document marked "Statement of Counsel," and I ask that the reporter

TANCE A SECULIE DU

[The document marked BGS Exhibit No. 22 follows:]

* * * * * * COMMITTEE INSERT * * * * * * *

MR. NIELDS: Just briefly, the document which has just been marked BGS-22 is a "Statement of Counsel" for Mr. Sciaroni. He indicates that he has not had a very long time to be able to consult with and prepare his client and if we run into any problems where you feel the length of time is prejudicing you in some way, why, let's simply discuss it and see if we can't resolve it to our mutual satisfaction.

You have also asked for a copy of the transcript.

It has been our practice as a committee, as I understand it, to make transcripts available in the sense counsel can come in and read them, but it has not been our practice to actually release the transcript, but you have now made a formal request for it, and I will take it up in the appropriate way and get back to you as soon as I can.

MR. KNAUER: Thank you.

BY MR. NIELDS:

Q Mr. Sciaroni, I had just asked you to turn to BGS Exhibit 1, and I will ask you what that is.

A That is the Executive Order that creates the President's Intelligence Oversight Board.

duties and functions and so on?

A Right.

Q Can you describe what the Board consists of?

A It consists of three board members and a counsel.

Tells the board what its responsibilities are,

Q Any secretarial --

Yes, it does.

A And a secretary.

Q Are the three board members full time; part time?

A They serve at the pleasure of the President, and they are not paid and they come in to town for meetings as required.

Q So these are three people appointed by the President who have other full-time jobs?

A They are distinguished citizens from private life that volunteer their time to come in and provide an oversight function for the intelligence community.

Q How frequently do they meet?

A That depends upon events. We have six regularly scheduled board meetings a year, one every other month, and then we will lay on additional means as required.

For example, since November, when the Iran arms initiative blew up, we have met numerous times and I would have to go back and check to see how many times, but probably every couple weeks we have had a board meeting.

But in the normal course of things, the board would meet six times a year, I take it?

Well, only there is never a normal year. There is always problems that come up and special board meetings will be laid on for those extraordinary events that come along. But we do have six regularly scheduled board meetings in addition to which we will have additional meetings.

Now, do you in the course of your functioning as Counsel for the Intelligence Oversight Board from time to time write opinions on legal issues?

I write opinions at the direction of the board.

How do these opinions get initiated?

Any number of ways. Somebody will make a suggestion about what a likely topic will be. I might have something reported from one of the intelligence agencies, a matter about which I think more attention should be placed on it, and that would be in the ordinary reports that come in from members of the intelligence community.

Newspaper articles provide another source. mean, there is just no standard or typical. There is a variety of methods used to initiate an inquiry, however extensive.

Just very approximately, how many legal opinions do you write for the board per year?

Well, again, I don't know that I could quantify

-them.

We write opinions that go directly to the President
We do write opinions that go to the National Security Adviser as the Adviser to the President for National Security Affairs.

Occasionally, very rarely, I will write something for, let's say, a counterpart on the National Security Council Staff. We have two such, and those are the only two I can think of I have ever done that has been forwarded to a member of the National Security Council Staff. And then there are numerous things that I will write for the board meetings for our own internal use.

There is no way to quantify.

Q Well, addressing only the ones that actually leave the board that the board issues letters to the President or to the National Security Adviser or to someone on the National Security Council Staff, approximately how many a year are we talking? Five, ten, twenty, a hundred? What is the order of magnitude?

A It will actually physically leave our office -- maybe ten, I guess.

- Q Per year?
- A Per year.
- Q Are the majority of those self-generated, selfinitiated, or are the majority written at the request of the person or entity to whom they are sent?

INCLASSIFIED...

1 2 3

UNCEASHFIFT

1 2

 A In that sense, they are self-generated. I mean, I can't think of a time -- I think my predecessor could recall a time when the President asked for us to do, asked for the board to do something, but I don't recall the National Security Adviser or President asking us to produce a report.

- Q So in your experience, there has never been --
- A Or to Rafferty, is the only other person we have sent an opinion to.
- $\ensuremath{\mathtt{Q}}$ \cdot So there has never been a person you have written a request for someone outside the board?
 - A For whom that is intended.
- Q And that means that in each case in which you have written an opinion for the board and delivered it to the President or National Security Advisor or someone on the staff, it has been at your initiation?
 - A Right, the board's initiation.
 - Q Do you know someone named Oliver North?
 - A Yes, I do.
 - Q Can you tell us how you got to know Mr. North?
- A I had been on the job three months in 1984, approximately three months, when in October, an allegation surfaced that the CIA had produced a manual on psychological operations which advocated assassination which, of course, _if true, would be a violation of Executive Order. And in the context of my investigation, I got to know North because he was the action officer for Central America. And did you -- let me ask you this: Where did Mr. North work? He worked at the National Security Council, staff. What building is that in? The Old Executive Office Building. Is that where your offices are? Precisely. ' How far away was his office from your office? Down the corridor. Did you get to know Mr. North thereafter? Yes. I had conversations with him from time to time, and I would see him in the corridor naturally. How frequently, for example, would you go to his office and chat with him? To have a substantive discussion with him, I would guess I might have seen him once a month. Was this on business or non-business matters? Business. And did those meetings occur always at his office or sometimes elsewhere? I can't think of a time it didn't occur in his

And were these substantive discussions at your initiation or his? Always at my initiation. For what purposes? 0 To get information about subjects that he dealt with. For what reason? The board has always taken a particular interest in covert action because of a propensity for covert action programs to be problems, and in trying to head off problems, historically the board has looked at those, and in this Administration, the covert action program regarding Central America was the most contentious and controversial. Therefore, I felt it was important to touch base with him from time to time just to find out what was happening either on the Hill or in Central America. I take it that Oliver North was the NSC staffer who was principally responsible for the Central American part? Α Right. By Central America, I take it you are referring to all of Central America, but especially to Nicaragua and the contras? Primarily, yes. Can you just describe -- I know you have done this HAINL ACOUCIED. Q __in interviews that have not been on the record, but can you just describe Mr. North's working habits and any ease or difficulty you had in getting information or having conversations with him?

A I think that I have told you in informal sessions that he probably worked longer hours than anybody at the office, and the only time I could typically get into see him, because his days were so full, was in the evening, perhaps 8:00 or 9:00 o'clock at night, when his schedule started to wind down.

- Q were there times you endeavored to see him and weren't able to do so?
 - A Sure; plenty of times.
- Q For every substantive conversation you actually had with him in his office, would there be a number of times you would walk down there and --
- A I would drop in and see if he was available and his secretary would tell me he was tied up and to come back later. Almost invariably when I would come back, he was still tied up.
- Q How about his office physically? Do you recall whether there were documents in his office or papers that were either kept out on tables, or can you describe physically his office?
 - A He always had a lot of paperwork in his office.

HWG VECHIEB"

UNCEASEAFIEET

Q Did there come a time when some questions were raised publicly about the possibility that North was involved in fundraising or operational activities on behalf of the contras?

A Yes.

I became aware in August of 1985 of a number of newspaper accounts that accounted congressional concern about his activities.

- Q I take it this was during a time when the so-called Boland amendment was in effect?
 - A That is right.
- Q I take it that was the subject of these newspaper articles and about congressional concern?
- A That was in part what the newspaper articles were about.
- Q That Oliver North's activities may have been in violation of the Boland amendment?
 - A Right.
- Q I would like you to turn to Exhibit No. 2 and ask you if you can identify that?
- A It appears to be a letter to McFarlane from Michael Barnes, in August, also accounting press reports about what Colonel North was doing.
- Q Did you obtain a copy of that letter at or about the time of these press reports?

HMCP VECTEILD

UNCEASSIFIEDT

A I think that is likely. I have a copy in my file and I assume that is when I secured that. I think that the press reports that I saw may have quoted from this letter. I may have initiated an inquiry as to getting a copy of the letter.

- Q In any event, you did have a copy of this letter in your files?
 - A Yes, I did.
- Q You also collected a number of newspaper articles on this subject?

A 'Yes. I collect a great number of newspaper articles and I don't specifically remember asking NSC for that, but that would be the logical place I would have procured that.

- Q When you say that, you are referring to Exhibit 2?
 - A Right.
- Q Now, as a result of Exhibit 2 and the newspaper publicity, did you decide, first, to conduct an inquiry into Mr. North's conduct?

A I decided to look into the allegations that an intelligence law had been violated. I am not -- I think the way I approached it was to first analyze the legislation and then to do a factual inquiry.

Q I take it before you sat down and actually wrote an opinion on this subject, you did a factual inquiry?

That is not my recollection. My recollection is I did the legal analytical work first and then did the factual inquiry. At least at the tail end of my analytical work, that is when I did the factual work.

We will come to this in a moment, but the opinion you wrote on this subject makes reference to your factual inquiry as having been completed and makes reference to the conclusions that you reached as a result of your factual inquiry.

My question is: At least prior to the time that you actually wrote the opinion, had you not also done a factual inquiry?

Oh, you mean by the time the board reviewed and approved of the memo, had I done -- I had done both by that time, sure.

- By the time you actually wrote the final draft of the opinion?
 - I had done both, that is right.
- I would like to ask you first, if I may, about the factual inquiry that you did. What exactly did you do?
- I, and I don't recall the sequence, I did two I went to Colonel North and to the NSC General things. Counsel.
 - NSC General Counsel is Commander Thompson? Q
 - Α Yes.

UNCEASSIFIED T

- Q Paul Thompson?
- A Yes.

Q Can you describe for us first how your meeting with Mr. Thompson was arranged and, secondly, what happened at it?

A Because Commander Thompson is in the West Wing of the White House, it is not a matter of dropping in to see him. I drop in to see NSC colleagues in the OEOB, but not in the West Wing.

I phoned and made an appointment to see him.

Again, I don't recall if this was prior to or after the meeting with North, but in any case, I went in and made reference to the fact that there had been allegations raised about Colonel North's activities and I said that I was doing an inquiry on that, and I believe by that time, the newspapers had also recounted the Congress had gotten involved, more than just a letter from Barnes, and I asked to see anything he might have that would give me an idea as to what Colonel North's activities were with regard to this matter.

- Q And what did he do?
- A He produced a stack of memoranda for me to examine.
 - Q Did you, in fact, examine them?
 - I did so.
 - Now, can you recall in general what they showed?

UNCEASSIFICET

- A Well --
- Q Let me withdraw that question.
 How thick a stack of documents was this?
- A My recollection is about an inch thick.
- Q Did you make any remarks to Mr. Thompson about the quantity of documents he made available to you?

A I may have. I was aware that Colonel North kept extensive files in his office. In any case, the subject came up and the distinction was made between Colonel North's personal papers and NSC documents, that is, documents that had left his office and were part of his NSC documents system, I suppose.

- Q Who made that distinction?
- A Commander Thompson.
- Q Do I understand you correctly to say that Commander Thompson told you that he was showing you the official NSC system documents, but not the documents that would have been in North's office?

 - A That is right.

MR. KNAUER: Excuse me, I thought you said personally. Weren't you distinguishing between personal documents --

THE WITNESS: I think that is what you stated.

MR. KNAUER: You said his office. I don't know if that is as specific as you wanted to be.

MR. NIELDS: I asked the question just the way

I wanted to because he has been over this with us before.

MR. KNAUER: I thought there might be some confusion.

THE WITNESS: Maybe you ought to restate the question.

BY MR. NIELDS:

Q I take it what Mr. Thompson told you was that he was showing you documents that come from the NSC official files, but was not showing you the documents that had been in Colonel North's office that had not go ne into the files?

A That is correct. The distinction maybe between his personal working papers and documents, whatever, and NSC documents.

Q I take it he was not telling you that the so-called personal documents were unrelated to the contras, simply that they were not official documents?

A Right, and that this is what they had shown the Hill when their inquiry came in.

- Q That is, the Hill had been shown the same stack of official documents that you had?
 - A That is correct.
- Q Were you told that you were shown all the documents that the Hill was shown?
 - A That is my recollection.

NO SHAFFET

 Q Now, did you -- okay, returning to my earlier question, can you describe just generically what information was contained in these documents?

A Well, there were a variety of documents about legislative strategy with regard to getting renewed funding for the contras, what North had been involved in politically. I think we have some notes I created at the time that showed what kinds of things were in there.

Q Let's turn to them. They have been marked as Exhibit 3. Rather than me testifying, will you identify Exhibit 3?

A Yes. It is two pages of handwritten notes, it is my handwriting. These are -- the third page does not constitute notes I made in Thompson's office, only the first two pages. And I sat there with the documents and flipped through them and jotted down some notes which I then put in the file.

Q Now, I guess I want to state this on the record.

I don't think we have any copy of these notes that is perfectly legible in all respects. We would be very appreciative if your counsel could get us a copy of the original notes which Xeroxes all of them so that you can read them.

A Okay. If you will make a note of that, I will endeavor to do so.

We would like it as soon as possible. I think you .. might have shown them to us in your office.

A I did.

MR. NIELDS: None of our copies is as readable as the original and I think part of the problem is the Xeroxing.

MR. KNAUER: Sure.

BY MR. NIELDS:

Q Now, looking at these notes, I guess I would like to ask you first, in the upper left-hand corner, it says, "NSC involvement, one, moral support while funds, and then there is an arrow coming down; 2, influence, re: atroxities; three, encourage political program, march on San Jose declaration."

Are those notes of the documents or are those notes of a conversation that you had with Mr. Thompson?

A I don't specifically remember, but the implication is that that would be from a conversation and not from the documents themselves.

Q When you say implication, you are saying your best recollection and inference from reading these notes?

A The best recollection and knowing how I do things. I think that you can see halfway down the page, when I am jotting down notes about specific memos, there are specific dates to identify it in case I would ever want to go back and locate that memo again.

A I don't know that he made that assertion, but I think that these things, these particular items would certainly reflect what was being said by the Administration at the time.

- Q . And this was being told to you by Thompson?
- A I assume that that is what these notes indicate.
- Q And then down below it says -- is that "no military support?"
 - A Yes.
- Q And to the best of your recollection and understanding, that was also said by Mr. Thompson in substance?
 - A That is the implication of my writing.

- \sim Q And it addresses the factual question of what Mr. North had done.
 - A Correct.
- Q And I would like to take this opinion backwards, if I may. The last portion of it, which is headed Arabic numberal 2, what activities were undertaken by NSC? You say in the first paragraph, after reviewing NSC documents—I am sorry, I have neglected to ask something I would like to, before addressing this opinion, I want to ask you after you had reviewed the documents in Mr. Thompson's office, did you see any documents that raised problems so far as you were concerned?

- A You mean subsequent?
- Q No, while you were in Mr. Thompson's office reviewing this inch thick stack of documents, you took notes— we have been over your notes. Did you see any documents that raised any problems?
 - A No.
- Q And did you either thereafter or before do something else in order to investigate the allegations that had been made by Mr. North?
- A Yes, I dropped by Colonel North's office one evening and asked him about the newspaper accounts.
- Q And to the best of your recollection, what did you ask him?

UNREASSIFIE

30

- A I asked himit was a very short conversation that we had, at least that aspect of it was very short.
The newspaper article had raised general allegations about hi activities. I asked him if there was any truth to them, and he issued a blanket denial.
O And about how long did this conversation last?

- It might have been five minutes, might have been even less than that. There was no specificity to the charges, and there would have been very little for me to pursue once he said he was not involved in those activities; fund-raising and giving military advice and so on.
- Okay. Did you do anything else in furtherance of your investigating the charges that were being made in the press and by Congress?
 - No, those were the two things that I did.
- Okay, now returning to BGS-9, which is your opinion, it says under Arabic Numeral 2, what activities were undertaken by NSC, and then you write after reviewing NSC documents and interviewing North, "The board can report the following:"

I take it that refers to the document review in Paul Thompson's office you just testified about, and your conversation with North that you just testified about.

letters A, B, and C in this opinion.

Α

- Q Now C says the NSC does not function as a member of the intelligence community.
 - A Right.

Right.

Q And in effect, what you say is that it doesn't engage in operational intelligence activities and therefore is not an agency involved in intelligence activities.

IINCIA COLEUED

UNULASSIFIEDT

- A Typically, it does not engage in operational intelligence activities and I can only suppose that that is the reason it has never been chosen by just executive order or statute to be a member of the intelligence community.
- Q That is in effect what you said in Section 1-C of this opinion.
 - A Right.
- Q That the statute does not apply to the NSC cause the NSC does not typically function as an operational intelligence entity.
 - A Right.
- Q Now, here is the question I want to ask you. I take it your conclusion in that respect had been confirmed by the results of your investigation in this particular instance.
- MR. KNAUER: I am a little confused. Are you talking about the factual investigation?
 - MR. NIELDS: Factual investigation.
 - MR. KNAUER: Thank you.

THE WITNESS: I don't think, as I said before, I believe that that section was written before I did the factual investigation.

BY MR. NIELDS:

Q That is what I say. It was confirmed by it.

UNCEASSIFIET

In other words, you investigated the question of whether or work

North was involved in some operational covert activity in Nicaragua, and had concluded that he was not.

A Yes, and that means that, as I stated before, typically, NSC is not involved in those operations and Colonel North's activities fell within that judgment that it is not something typically NSC does, and it seemed at the end of that factual investigation Colonel North wasn't involved.

I would like to add a caveat, which is that I had a footnote, which also pertains to the second section, and that that conditions the second section. Footnote 5, 5 and 9, I guess would be the two. It would be two caveats I had attached.

Q I take it what you are referring to is the fact that Colonel North might be covered by the Boland amendment by reason of the fact that he was a military man.

A If he was being paid out of DOD funds, he would be covered, right.

Q But as to the NSC generally, you conclude that it was not covered.

A That is right.

Q One of the reasons you conclude it was not covered is that the NSC does not engage in operational intelligence activities.

MINU ACCITION

UNDER SEKERTET

- A I don't consider that the hard law. That is not the primary function. That is a rationale.

Q I will get to what you call the hard law. Since you had three different bases for your opinion, I want to get at this one first.

I take it it is correct to say that one of the underpinnings for your conclusion was that the NSC does not engage in operational intelligence activities.

A Does not particularly get involved in operational activities.

Q Now, if the NSC, if you had concluded that NCS was engaged in an operational intelligence activity; namely, covertly supporting the arming of the contras, for example, would that have changed your conclusion.

A Let me say that the President may choose to use the NSC from time to time in operational capabilities. That is not typically a function of the NSC. But, the President may, for a variety of reasons, choose to do so.

Q My question is, if the President were to choose to use the NSC to run a covert support for the armed resistance by the contras, would that have changed your conclusion about when the Boland amendment applies to the NSC.

A Well, it would -- the point of this memo was whether the Boland amendment, whether the NCS was affected by the Boland amendment, and I concluded that it was not within the purview of the Boland amendment.

- Q I understand, but my question is if you had concluded that the NSC was in fact being used to covertly support the war in Nicaragua, would that have changed your conclusion?
- A It depended upon the circumstance. If it was just pure NSC, I don't think so. Without support from members of the intelligence community, without support from people that were prohibited by the Boland amendment, then the President could choose to use the NSC, for example, for fund-raising.
 - Q How about for running a covert war in Nicaragua?
- A Well, it seems to me that without the support of the rest of the U.S. Government, there is no way you could run a covert war from the NSC.
- Q Well, okay, I understand that, but I guess I still would like to press the question. If you had concluded that the NSC was running a covert war in Nicaragua, would that have changed your conclusion about whether the Boland amendment applied to the NSC?
 - A No.
- MR. KNAUER: That is the third time around. I think what he said --
 - MR. NIELDS: He has now said it.
 - MR. KNAUER: I think what he said is what his concern was, and the hypothetical question you laid out to him was where the funding came from and his determination, as I understand it, was that the Boland restrictions did not apply to the NSC unless there was some linkage with the organizations that received the funding.

INCLA CCICIED

I think that is what he said. If you are satisfied with his answer, so am I.

MR. NIELDS: Now, I would like you to turn to Exhibit 11. If you would look at the second page of Exhibit 11, these are excerpts from a statute. Some pages have been removed because it is a very thick statute. I would direct you to the middle of the second page of the statute, which reads, "Section 8066-A." And my first question is whether that is the Boland amendment.

THE WITNESS: That is.

BY MR. NIELDS:

Q Now the language reads, and I am going to skip some words here, "No funds available to the Central Intelligence Agency, the Department of Defense, or any other agency or entity of the United States, involved in intelligence activities, may be obligated or expended for the purpose which would have the effect of supporting, directly or indirectly, military or paramilitary operations in Nicaragua, by any nation, group, organization, movement or individual."

My question is, if the NSC is actually involved in a covert war in Nicaragua, how do you reach the conclusion that it is not an agency or entity of the United States involved in intelligence activities?

- A I laid that out in the memo.
- Q I would like you to say it orally.
- A Okay, that section is attached to the legislation, Department of Defense legislation and intelligence community legislation, Intelligence Authorization Act.

 Both of those organizations lay out what funds are conditioned by that and I think if you look in those two places you will find out that NSC does not appear in either place.
- Q Are you saying that NSC is not covered by the statute which has been marked Exhibit 11?
 - A That is right.
- Q That is an appropriation statute; is that correct?
- A And that is a continuing resolution that was later attached to the Intelligence Authorization Act and to the Defense Department Act, whatever that was. It is in my memo, and that conditions what organizations are subject to the Boland amendment.

MR. KNAUER: I believe you are confused. I know
I am. Maybe you can start again with the question.

MR. NIELDS: Let's organize ourselves a little bit here. I don't want to keep anything from you. Exhibit Number 10 is Public Law 98-618.

Q Now, are you saying that that 8066-A was superseded or amended later?

A No, that was taken into the Intelligence Authorization Act, which passed in November that dictates what agencies are affected by that amendment, the Boland amendment.

Q Well, let's move back just for a moment. This Public Law 98-473, which is Exhibit 11, I guess I am not sure I have had an answer to my question on that statute. Does that law, that appropriation statute, cover the NSC?

A It is my understanding it does not.

Q Or if it did, that was in the context of, I would have to go back and check. It is my understanding that it was in the context of the continuing resolution.

Q Why does that matter?

A Well, it was superseded. It was a series of continuing resolutions, which funded it day to day, but I would have to go and check. NSC comes under a different funding bill.

BY MR. NIELDS:

Q Let me ask it this way, I guess. How can an authorization statute change the meaning of an appropriation statute?

A My understanding of the previous statute that you referred to, the subsequent Exhibit from October is a funding mechanism that covers a wide number of organizations, and if it was meant, if the Boland amendment was meant to apply to the entire U.S. Government, that is what it should have stated, that the Agriculture Department should not have been included, that the Commerce Department should not have been included, and so on and so forth.

The subsequent Intelligence Authorization Act, which incorporated the Boland amendment, defined the members of the intelligence community, that is, agencies or entities that are involved in intelligence activities.

MR. KNAUER: If you are able to render an opinion.

Q The question is, again, just to remind you, I think we earlier went over section 3.1 of this Executive Order which said the President could designate an agency other than CIA to do a special activity.

A All right.

Q I am sorry, that was 1.8 that said that. Then I am directing your attention to section 3.1, which says that section 662 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and 501 of the National Security Act of 1947 shall apply to all special activities as defined in this order.

I take it that would include special activities done by agencies other than CIA.

A What was the section? 141? You are referring to the reporting requirement.

Q The one headed "Congressional Oversight".

Q And then has general language about the duties and responsibilities of the Director of Central Intelligence and heads of other departments and agencies, and then it says that these two statutes shall apply to all special activities as defined in this order.

My question is, I take it that applies to special activities that are done by agencies other than the CIA.

- Q And these statutes, 662 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 and 501 of the National Security Act of 1947, require that covert intelligence activities be supported by Presidential findings and notify the Congress.
 - A True. That is correct.
- Q So that if the President were to designate the NSC to do a covert support of the war in Nicaragua, it would be required that Congress be notified and supported by a finding?
- A If the President designated the NSC to do an intelligence activity, special activity, this statute would come into effect subject to any interpretations of the reporting requirement which have -- well, there are conditions of timeliness, et cetera, which would also come into effect as well. I am not prepared to discuss that today. I know there is an issue there.

I want to return to your opinion, which is Exhibit 9. I think you started to say earlier that the hard legal basis for your opinion was that the NSC was not listed as one of the 10 intelligence agencies. That is correct. I thought you were going to say a softer basis for your opinion was that the NSC did not engage, as a general matter, in operational intelligence matters. I assume that is the rationale for why it has never been listed in any of the authorization acts. That was one of the rationales for your opinion as to why it wasn't covered? With the caveat that it is typically not involved in operations.

But I am saying that that was one of the -- another basis for your opinion, that the NSC does not function as a member of the intelligence community?

Does not typically function as a member of the intelligence community.

I think you have said in interviews you regarded that as a softer basis for your opinion.

That is true.

Q You also said in your opinion, that section of your opinion, you said if the letter of the law does not include the NSC as a member of the intelligence community, neither does the spirit of the law.

I take it your point there is that if the NSC does not do intelligence activities, then it is consistent with the spirit of the law it wouldn't be covered?

A I think I was referring there to the spirit of the Boland Amendment.

Q That is what I was referring to as well. My question is the following, and I think you have answered this in interviews that we have had informally with you before, that if it turned out that the NSC was in fact conducting a covert intelligence activity in support of the contras, that although that may not violate the letter of the law, it would have given you some concerns about whether it was violating the spirit of the law.

A I wouldn't go that far. I think that there may have been Congressional people who thought it violated the spirit of the law.

Q Well, did you understand it to be the intent of Congress, in enacting the Boland Amendment, that the President could go find some other agency of government, EPA or any other agency of government, and use its funds to support the war in Nicaragua?

members of the intelligence community should be engaged in supporting the Nicaraguan Democratic Resistance.

MR. KNAUER: What he is talking about -- the language might help. It says the letter of the law, and I am quoting from the language you are discussing, the letter of the law does not include the NSC as a member of the intelligence community, neither does the spirit of the law.

And what he is talking about is whether or not the NSC comes within or without the restriction, either as a matter of law, a matter of spirit or a matter of Congressional intent. He is not talking about the spirit with respect to covert actions by agencies, such as the Department of Agriculture, for example.

MR. LEON: Let me ask. Was it your feeling at that time if Congress intended to cover the NSC it would have so stated?

THE WITNESS: That is exactly my point.

BY MR. NIELDS:

Q Well, but you have also made the point Congress didn't think of the NSC as an agency that was likely to engage in this kind of conduct.

A I think I went over several times last time, Mr. Nields, a comment made by a member of HIPSI, in which he said the law was ambiguous --

MR. LEON: What member?

The issue of the ambiguity of the NSC was in the newspaper, it was stated by colleagues of his, and if he had wanted to do it, he could have done it.

MR. LEON: If he could have gotten the votes?

THE WITNESS: If he could have gotten the votes, that is right.

- Q Was it contemporaneous?
- A It was August of 1985.
- Q So following the enactment of the statute?
- A That is right. I have a number of citations to that effect as well. The ambiguity, it was clear at the time.

 Why that wasn't fixed or attempted -- I don't even think an attempt to fix that was made.

 - A They would have.
- Q Can you tell me -- and that they were relevant to your inquiry?

- Q Can you tell me for what purpose these would have been relevant and for what purpose they would have jumped out at you?
- A The allegations had to do with the military advice to the Nicaraguan Resistance and fund-raising. I would have wanted to have examined them, those kinds of documents, a lot more closely if they had been presented to me.
 - Q And would they have affected any conclusions in the memorandum that has been marked as Exhibit Number 9?

A You mean the Boland Amendment?

Q Right.

A I would -- I mean, clearly it would have affected the fact-finding portion, and if I had made a determination, and I don't want to make a snap judgment about documents I haven't had a chance to properly review, but with regard to the footnotes about whether Colonel North was on a reimbursed detail or on a regular detail, that clearly would have been more important than making a determination about what his status was.

Q And what kind of effect would these documents have had on the memorandum? I am taking into account you haven't had an opportunity to review them thoroughly.

A I really don't want to comment dispositively on documents I haven't had a case to analyze.

Q Would they have related solely to Roman Numeral Two in section 2 of the memorandum?

Q As I read the conclusion of part 2 of the memorandum, you conclude none of Lieutenant Colonel North's activities in the past year constitute a violation of the Boland Amendment, even if the amendment applies to the NSC. Is that correct?

I didn't employ a creative use of the ellipsis.

A That is right.

Q I take it the memoranda which have been marked as Exhibit 4 through 8 might have affected the portion of the conclusion that I just read.

A In this way, it would have had a caveat it typically doesn't operate in that function, but the President from time to time may choose to use the NSC for activities that are not simply coordinating policy, and so on and so forth.

BY MR. FEIN:

- Q Do you recall there being any statutes enacted since creation of the National Security Council of 1947 that attempted to restrict the President's use -- what I am asking is if the Boland Amendment applied to the NSC, would that be the first time, to your knowledge, in the history of the NSC Congress attempted to restrict --
 - A I cannot think of a prior occasion.
- Q Are you aware of the general rule of statutory construction that a statute that proves to have a loophole is not to be amended by the Judiciary unilaterally, that if a statute proves to have flaws in it, it takes an amendment to the statute in order to cover activity?
 - A I am generally aware of that, yes.
- Q Look at the Executive Order in Exhibit 14, the last page, 3.5, I believe it is B-116 is the numeration of the page number. It says "This order is intended to provide guidance and direction to the intelligence community", referring to Executive Order 12333. Isn't it true, in the definitional section of this Executive Order, the NSC is not deemed within the intelligence community?

- A That is correct.
- Q So that, for instance, the special activities provisions would not apply to the NSC since the order only reaches entities within the intelligence community, as so defined?

MR. KNAUER: Where is the intelligence community defined?

MR. FEIN: In 3.4, subsection F on page B-115. It is the penultimate page of the Executive Order. Look at 3.4, the definitional section, and then you see subsection F, which defines intelligence community.

THE WITNESS: What was the question again?
BY MR. FEIN:

- Q Wouldn't it be true, the order, insofar as it controls special activities of the intelligence community, would have no effect at all insofar as the NSC is concerned because it is simply not a member of the intelligence community as defined in the order?
 - A That would certainly be an interpretation, yes.
- Q Is there any ambiguity to that? It is pretty specific when it defines intelligence community, isn't it?
 - A Right.
- Q It enumerates seven specific entities, none of which includes the NSC.

INCLVCOLLEU

A Right. Actually, more than seven entities since it has a service organization.

Q Are you aware of interpretations of the statutory requirements that compel the President to report to Congress on certain covert activities, that the requirements would not apply if the President is exercising inherent Constitutional power to implement national security?

A Right.

Q And, lastly, are you aware of a rule of statutory construction that statutes should be interpreted whether or not one statute repeals another so that an intelligence oversight act providing for an authorization, although it is not, may not repeal an appropriations bill, if it deals with and addresses the same subject under the rule of interpreting statutes, one would provide a loss on the other?

A I am aware of that.

MR. FEIN: That is all I have.

MR. LEON: Let me just ask a few questions.

Q At the time you wrote this opinion, who were the members of the President's Intelligence Oversight Board?

- Q Did you happen to hear Mr. McFarlane's testimony when he was on the stand?
 - A Yes, I heard some of it.
- Q Mr. McFarlane, I believe it is my recollection, testified that he did meet at one point with Mr. Fieldings personally?
 - A Yes.
- Q And presented him a stack of documents, which included, according to his testimony, the very documents here that were not, to the best of your recollection, not shown?
 - A Right.
- Q And that he testified that while he didn't pull them out separately and present them to Mr. Fieldings, he did have them in that pile and made reference to them just in general terms. Now, was there ever brought to your attention back at, in the time frame---
- A No. And I wasn't familiar with that testimony by McFarlane.
- Q What is the relationship, if any, with the White House Counsel's office and your office, your role?
- A Well, we have an independent status at the White House. We report directly to the President on matters of intelligence, and if Fielding wanted to offer up an opinion of his own on a matter that he thought was important

 - Yes.
- Has there ever been an occasion when either the White House Counsel himself, or one of his staff lawyers, called you up, your office, to try to get you to help them with a problem relating to and intelligence oversight?
 - I can never recall any instance.
- How about the other way around, are there instances since you have been there, where you in the process of either investigating a problem or in the process of writing an opinion based on your investigation, turned to them for help?
 - I can't recall an instance.
 - For insight and assistance?
 - No.
- In the writing of your opinion, I believe you . testified that it was based on your research and investigation; is that right?

the applicability of Boland, that they might want to get the opinion of the White House Counsel's Office, or the Office of Legal Counsel, Department of Justice?

- A I did not imagine a suggestion like that.
- Q Did anybody tell you that they were going to seek such an opinion from either the White House Counsel's Office of the Office of Legal Counsel at the Department of Justice?
 - A No.
 - Q Does that strike you as strange?
- A It does strike me a little bit strange that in the course of the investigation I have seen little else written on the applicability of the Boland Amendment to the NSC?
- Q The NSC isn't specifically mentioned in the Boland Amendment, as we have pointed out?
 - A I think we have established that.
- Q And I think you have commented to the effect and testified that had it been specifically mentioned there might have been some problem with getting enough votes perhaps?
 - A That is one inference you can draw.
- Q To pass the amendment -- let me ask you this, if it has been included, if it had gotten enough votes to pass, do you think there would have been some kind of a constitutional challenge or question raised as to whether Congress could have extended its powers in this arena in that manner?

- A Although my memo obviously did not address that issue, it would have been of questionable constitutionality.
- Q Do you think that would have been pursued and challenged?
- A I can't speak for the White House as a whole, or NSC; I would think so.
- Q Let me put it to you another way. Had it been included specifically, do you think, in essence, Congress by doing so would have been, in essence, creating the likelihood of some kind of constitutional challenge in the courts?
 - A Sure, I think so.
 - Q Perhaps, even in the United States Supreme Court?
 - A I think it would have to go up to that level.
- Q Do you have any reason to think that by not facing including it, Congress wanted to avoid that kind of constitutional challenge in the United States Supreme Court?
- A That is a possibility. I can't look into the minds of Congress, and I didn't seek out a referendum on the Hill before I wrote the memo, as to why they put it one way as opposed to another.

 - A No.
- Q Did Colonel North indicate to you in the summer of 1986 at any point that he had had meetings with Leonard Garment and Tom Glen, an attorney here in town?
 - A No, he never mentioned that to me.
- Q Now, the second sentence in that paragraph says, "Fred Fieldings should be asked to conduct a very private evaluation of the President's role in making such a request." Do you have any knowledge of Mr. Fieldings, White House Counsel at that time, either being asked to do such a thing or, if so, having done such a thing?

- Q In one last thing, when you went to Colonel 24 25 - That is correct, although I cleared it with the board.

Q I see. When was it discussed with the board, the draft that you prepared?

- A At the time of the meeting we held on September 12.
- Q So it was considered by them and approved by them?
 - A On the 12th of September, sure.
 - Q And, were any changes made to it?
 - A Yes, there were changes to it.
- Q 'Can you give the sense of what those changes were?

A I can't recall two years later, you know. Again our standard procedure is we all work off the copy, line-by-line, page-by-page. I can't recall now what changes. I know there were changes made. There always are. I can tell you for sure I am not such a fine craftsman that any draft I ever write is going to be approved and I know there were changes made. I don't know, I couldn't account to you now what changes. I simply don't keep copies of the drafts.

- Q Would they have been changes of nuance, or what?
- A I can't recall, it was two years ago.
- Q They would not have been changes of fact in as far as the fact-finding part of your investigation?

TING VSCILLED

UNCHASSIEI ROET

- A That is true. Again, they probably worked over the language that I presented and made it a little more eloquent; but no, the factual aspect of it certainly wouldn't have been changed since I did the fact-finding.
- Q And to whom was the opinion then provided after it had been approved by the board?
 - A Directly to Mr. McFarlane.
 - Q Because he was head of the NSC?
- A No, because he is the adviser to the President of the National Security Affairs. He does wear three hats. The National Security Adviser typically is head of the staff and also the adviser to the President for National Security Affairs.
- Q So if you can explain to me, it was given to him in his capacity as National Security Adviser and then adviser to the President?
 - A Yes.
 - Q Exactly why was it given to him?
- A In the Carter Administration, the Reagan Administration is more decentralized, and although our Executive Order says we reported directly to the President, sometimes we do, but more typically, we will go through the National Security Adviser because that is the scheme since it started in the Administration, that you go to him in his capacity as the Adviser for National Security Affairs to the President. So typically, that is what I started off by saying, typically, memos go to, memoranda that we generate typically go to the National Security Adviser.

- So it was intended for the President, this is the way routinely reports were provided to him through this National Security Adviser?
- Yes, if there is a report that, or memo that is significant, it will go directly to the President; if it is deemed significant enough. But more routine matters will go the National Security Adviser.
- 'And I take it from your earlier testimony that you offen, the board offen did not know whether an opinion they provided was seen by the President, or what his reaction was, you did not get that feedback?
 - We did not.
 - You did not in this case?
- I never heard any more about it. I probably didn't hear anything about it until this thing blew. In fact, some of the board members were surprised. They had forgotten we had done this until this matter came up.
- As you know, and heard earlier, Mr. McFarlane testified that he doesn't recall seeing it?
 - It is a mystery to me.
 - Was it handed to him personally or do you know?
 - We typically do not send things of this nature -- you don't send it through in er-office mail, our secretary will walk it over. Who she gives it to, whether it is somebody in the NSC Secretariat or one of the personal secretaries to McFarlane, I would have to ask her.

We give it to her and she walks it over to the west wing.

Q It would have been taken to Mr. McFarlane's office, but who actually received it?

A To McFarlane's office to, perhaps, the sitting room, or I don't know what the routing is at NSC, maybe the Deputy Director for National Security Affairs. I am not sure. I can find out. It is not a big deal, but we give it physically to her and she walks it over.

Why he never saw that, I don't have the foggiest notion. I thought that maybe he had forgotten he had seen it and forgotten it, but somebody else might think that it got routed to somebody else; I don't know.

Q One last question; on a different topic.

You indicated earlier, in response to a question if the that it had been cleared to you that Boland Amendment extended to cover or contain the activities of the National Security Council, it would have in your mind posed a constitutional issue.

A Yes, sir.

Q Would you just give a sentence briefly why that would be so, why would a statutory restriction of this kind, if it applied to the NSC, it was clear to you it did apply to the NSC, what sort of contitutional issue would have been presented.

MR. KNAUER: I believe he testified he was aware there would be a constitutional consideration, but he didn't do the research.

BY MR. O'NEIL:

- Q I am not asking you to give us the benefit of your research you didn't do, I am just trying to get a sense from what the issue would be, not how you got there or what your conclusion would be, what is the constitutional issue it posed?
- A Traditional foreign policy prerogatives and powers of the President.
- Q Such prerogatives are routinely constrained by statute?
- A They can be and in this case, had this occurred, we might have had a challenge by the Administration on the basis of constitutionality. That is all I said earlier. It would raise constitutional questions, certainly would raise constitutional questions.
- Q In other words, you were addressing the constraints on the President, as the propounder and executer of foreign policy, and not on the choice of an agency which resides or is reflected in the table of organization being within the Executive Office of the President?

- A I am sorry.
- Q Am I putting words in your mouth?
- A I think you are putting words in my mouth. I am not sure what the words are.
 - Q It is late, I know.

The issue for you would have been constraint on the President's exercise of his conduct of foreign policy as opposed to those individuals which by the statute might actually be constrained?

A It could cover both. Again, I didn't have that in the memorandum. I am not really prepared to go into a discussion of that at this point.

Q Fine.

Thank you.

MR. NIELDS: Everybody is finished?

Okay; so I think we have two outstanding matters.

180 months I think during the period that phased in. That situation was eliminated and the stock certificates giving

1983 and I recall, or early 1984. 183

GREEN: I would say that we have interpreted or 728 729 construed your Exhibit No. 2 to be a document calling for 730 the production of corporate documents and not private 731 documents, or let us say that upon advising the witness of 732 that distinction, that this calls for production of 733 corporate documents; that is a subpoena addressed to a corporation, that all records -- all corporate records 734 735 responsive to the subpoena and over which Mr. Second had, or let's say in whose control they were here, had been 736 737 produced. 738 It is his desire to continue his inquiry into 739 whether or not corporate-type documents may be in the

746	documents he has advised me that are being withheld on the

754	. Q And are there any other records relating to the
755	company's financial condition that are in the company's
756	possession and subject to your control?
757	. A Yes; the standard accounting kinds of records.
758	. Q One of the documents which has been collectively
759	marked Deposition Exhibit No. 3 is a communication from
760	Willard I. Zucker, addressed "'gentlemen," and it makes

770 . THE WITHESS: I don't have any direct knowledge of 771 what Mr. Zucker had in mind by this phrase. If you would 772 like me to speculate--

773 . BY MR. NIELDS:

774 . 2 Rather than speculating, why don't I change the 775 question and ask you whether there are any predecessor

776 companies to STIGI?

777 . A In the strict definition of predecessor companies,

778 I would say no, but it bears in part the name of Stanford

779 Technology Corporation, which is a company held by Mr.

780 Hakim, which had done business and has been doing business

781 over a number of years, so that would be one that one could

782 loosely call a predecessor company, although, in a formal 783 sense, it is not.

784 . It is not a subsidiary of STIGI, nor the other way

785 around.

786 . 9 I take it you don't know of any companies that you

787 would regard as, strictly speaking, predecessor companies to 788 STIGI?

794	. What was the purpose of that loan?
795	. A This is part of the line of credit from CSF. This
796	was in the file, the CSF file, and I don't remember exactly
797	what it refers to. It was just one of the notes in the
798	file.
799	. 9 You don't know what the loan was for?

808	collectively as Stanford Technology Deposition Exhibit No. 3
809	is a letter with an attachment. The latter is dated July 1,
810	1986, and signed by Shirley Mapiar. It also rafers to a
811	loan.
812	What was the purpose of that loan?
813	. A This was, as indicated on the document, part of a
814	continuing arrangement for a line of credit with CSF, for have to look at the accounts to get a precise answer to that question.

Well, if you recall, what was the purpose of 822 drawing down money on this line of credit on or about July 1, 1986? 823

824 To finance STTGI overhead.

Did it relate to any particular expenditure of 825

And was that money physically transferred into an 828

830 I am sure it was.

831 Is that the bank account that you have testified

832 about?

833 The only one we have, yes.

834 I am putting in front of you another document which has been marked -- it is one of the documents collectively marked Stanford Technology Deposition Exhibit No. 3.

839 This relates to a prospective business deal that

RICHARD V. SECORD

having been first duly sworn, was called as a witness herein, and was examined and testified as follows:

MR. GREEN: Let the record reflect this is Mr. Green, Secord's counsel.

MR. NIELDS: Wait a minute, before you continue, let's do the other thing on the record first.

MR. GREEN: Go ahead.

MR. NIELDS: It is appropriate to simply put some facts on the record, Mr. Secord, at the outset, and both Hink committees it's important and so does your lawyer.

EXAMINATION ON BEHALF OF THE HOUSE SELECT COMMITTEE BY MR. NIELDS:

- I take it you are familiar with the testimony that Fawn Hall gave publicly early this week?
 - Yes, I watched it.
 - Did you watch all of it on television?
 - Not all of it, but most of it.
- Did you watch the portion of it that related to your lawyer, Mr. Green?
- And so you are aware of the testimony that she gave concerning conversations that she had with Mr. Green at a time when she had documents on her person outside of the Old

- A I am aware of what she said, yes.
- Q And you are aware of what she said concerning conversations involving Mr. Green in his automobile shortly thereafter?
 - A Yes.
- Q Are you also aware of reports that have appeared in the press concerning your attorney's testimony before the grand jury?
 - A Yes.
- Q I think that was simply that certain privileges had been asserted?
 - A That's correct.
- Q Now, have you had a chance to discuss with your lawyer whether this affects in any way, shape or form your confidence in him as your -- your confidence in his ability to dispassionately advise you as this lawyer?
- A I've had a lot of discussions with Mr. Green on these subjects. You might even say ad nauseam, including today, before coming here. I have the fullest confidence in Mr. Green, his integrity, and his ability, and want to keep him as my lawyer.

EXAMINATION ON BEHALF OF THE SENATE SELECT COMMITTEE BY MR. LIMAN:

aware, of course, that on this issue of representation, you can seek the advice of other counsel?

Yes, and at one point I did.

And having sought the advice of other counsel, you have concluded that Mr. Green can provide you effective, unconflicted representation; am I correct?

You are correct.

MR. LIMAN: Mr. Green, have you made Mr. Secord aware of conversations that I've had with your lawyer?

MR. GREEN: He is aware of every matter that would pertain to the decision which he has announced here this afternoon.

MR. LIMAN: And if he is not aware of the conversations that I've had with your lawyer, would you make him aware before we start testifying -- before he starts testifying? KNOW

MR. GREEN: I don'thow many conversations you had with my lawyer.

MR. LIMAN: One in substance and then one today or yesterday.

MR. GREEN: Well, let's just put it on the record. He knows that there was a time at which you contacted me and expressed an interest in having me come forth or be subponaed to provide testimony about I gather in the main my knowledge of, as you put it to me initially, a guy named UNCLASSIFIED

MR. LIMAN: No, I think I told you Homestead. didn't know he was Haskell.

MR. GREEN: Homestead-Haskell, I get it confused.

And he is familiar with that conversation. He is also familiar with the fact that you had a subsequent conversation with my lawyer who tried to disabuse you of your preliminary conclusion that I was Mr. Haskell. And he understands that as a result of that conversation you did not move forward to have me testify.

Is he aware that your lawyer told me that you had invoked the privileges described by Mr. Nields before the United States Attorney's Office, that that was his position in advising you that you should do so, and that as a result of my conversations with him, I withdrew a request for you to testify before us?

MR. GREEN: If he wasn't precisely aware then, you are now aware of that, correct?

Yes, but it was discussed with me.

MR. GREEN: And he is also aware of the course of proceedings with respect to the independent counsel. He is fully advised in all of that.

> John? MR. LIMAN: Fine.

MR. NIELDS: Let's proceed with the deposition.

Mr. Green, do you want to put something on the record at the outset?

MR. GREEN: Yes. This is a letter signed by Mr. 2 Secord. The Consent Directive was signed last week but today 3 in my office a cover letter was prepared and the Consent Directive was notarized as required by the form. So I 5 delivered that to you, Mr. Nields. I actually made it out to 6 Senator Inouye becaese was a Semate request. Here's an 7 extra copy.

MR. NIELDS: We will mark a copy of the document, both the letter and the attached document that Mr. Green's just made reference to, as Secord Deposition Exhibit 1. RVS-1.

MR. GREEN: In addition, we would like, since we feel that much of the testimony on the Hill has been directed at an attempt to undercut or --

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I think as a matter of principle these kinds of directives are probably unconstitutional, that I feel the pressure on me personally and I am no longer going to stand on principle.

MR. LIMAN: Well, it was principle that led you not to sign it, I take it, originally?

THE WITNESS: It was the advice of counsel.

MR. LIMAN: But you are signing this without any reservation whatsoever; am I correct?

THE WITNESS: I have reservations, as I've indicated in the cover letter, but I've signed it.

MR. LIMAN: Well, if you are asked by a Swiss authority whether this has been signed voluntarily, without any compulsion, and without any reservation on your part, are you able to say that the answer to that is yes?

(The witness conferred with counsel.)

THE WITNESS: Okay, well, to be perfect honest about it, candid, it is a mixed bag. I have been held up to ridicule for not having signed it, so I decided to sign it. And to be INCLASCIFIED technical about it, it was done, obviously, of my own free will. No one's twisted my arm to do it. I simply describe to you in the cover letter the circumstances under which I signed it.

But if a Swiss authority asks me did I sign it willfully, I'll say yes, I signed it willfully.

MR. NIELDS: Willingly?

THE WITNESS: Better word "willingly," okay. Willingly.

MR. NIELDS: Mr. Secord --

Do you have anything else you want to put in the record now, Mr. Green?

MR. GREEN: Yeah, we do. We want to -- ordinarily in a deposition both sides are permitted to interrogate. I don't know if that's necessary here, but we have a number of points that we want to address in this deposition as adjoinders to what we feel are erroneous implications and information in the record, because we want to use this opportunity to try to set the record straight on as many matters as we can.

In connection with that we have prepared an arms sales, Arms Sales Profit Analysis of the various sales. Of course, Mr. Second has a lot to say about these transactions and the way some of the records were used with a number of the witnesses; records which of course, albeit alleged to be Mr.

Secord's, we were never shown. We have done the analysis. shows seven phases of arms shipments, the first being the Canadian shipment and the rest being done through General Secord's operations. The analysis does not break down by line item but we are able to do that if the analysis needs to be carried forward.

The first phase where the pricing was done essentially with a view to providing Mr. Calero with substantially better prices than he had ever received, but was done basically through the expertise of the Canadian dealer, Mr. Secord not being familiar with these operations.

I'll make an exhibit available to you gentlemen -another one down there -- shows a markup on costs, on gross of 30.3 percent, and on costs of 43.5 percent.

In the following phases the markups on costs are 33.6, 23.45, 12.78; a small shipment in March of '86 which resulted in a 42.3 percent, but it's a very small shipment. Phase VI, 25 percent of cost; Phase II, 47.2 of cost.

MR. NIELDS: That's Phase VII.

MR. GREEN: Phase VII, thank you.

The grand totals show a markup of 27.3 percent. then if you exclude the Canadian shipment and go to the last page and you take the transactions which were priced exclusively by General Secord, you have a markup of 24.5 INCINCESTIFN percent on the cost_a:

consistent with Mr. Secord's testimony about the various shipments.

MR. NIELDS: Why don't we stay with this document for a minute. Let's have it marked RVS-2.

(Exhibit No. RVS-2 was marked for identification.)

MR. NIELDS: Mr. Secord, I am putting in front of you a document marked RVS-2. Is that the document that your lawyer has just been describing?

THE WITNESS: Yes.

! MR. NIELDS: Where does the information come from, where do the numbers come from that are on this document?

THE WITNESS: Comes from a combination of sources.

It comes from discussions with the Canadian. It comes from my personal notes that refer back to these sales.

MR. NIELDS: Does it stem from any documentary sources that have not been provided to the committees up until this point of time?

THE WITNESS: No, just personal notes of mine. You know, an intimate knowledge of what each of the costs were and what the prices were.

MR. NIELDS: Would you do so?

THE WITNESS: Possibly, I don't know. I'd have to discuss it with counsel.

MR. NIELDS: Well, --

THE WITNESS: They are fragmentary. I'll tell you quite frankly, I'm tired of being torn apart by the use of my fragmentary notes, very tired of it.

MR. LIMAN: Could I make a statement, John, that -
MR. GREEN: Also had the benefit of the recollection of Mr. Clines on some of these matters as well.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I should have mentioned that.

That I had the benefit of the recollection of Mr. Clines on some of these matters as well.

MR. LIMAN: I request whatever information it is to be relied upon. John may be able to go into that today or we may cover this at a continuing session of this deposition.

My understanding was that this afternoon we were going to be focusing on Mr. North. But the figures that we have here which are based on a variety of resources, some of which are available to us and some of which we have not seen before, or are in some respects inconsistent with the information that we received from Mr. Hakim, and, therefore, -

MR. GREEN: I don't think so. I don't think it is inconsistent.

MR. LIMAN: Well, the --

MR. GREEN: For instance, give me an example.

MR. NIELDS: Let's not get into a quarrel over it. The point is that --

MR. LIMAN: The point of information that he has -THE WITNESS: May I make a recommendation?

Let your accountants analyze this data, see if where it's inconsistent, we'll sit down with you and explain it.

MR. GREEN: I don't think you're going to find it's far off from what you think it is.

MR. LIMAN: I would want to cover this in a continuing session of the examination.

MR. GREEN: The point of it as well as long as we're talking to each other is, you know, is it -- it really is in many respects making a mountain out of a molehill. I mean, the numbers are the numbers. The percentages are the percentages. Second testified to his best recollection of what the markup is If the markup varies, you know, by two percent more or ten percent less, what the hell difference does it make?

MR. LIMAN: Mr. Green, I'm not here to conduct an investigation into what his markup is. He's the one that gave his testimony. He gave testimony as to what he believed the markup was. We then checked that against the records that were provided by Hakim on Airlift 1 and Sealift 1. Hakim said that one of them was in the handwriting of this witness and I think the other was provided --

MR. GREEN: He doesn't know what he's talking about.

MR. LIMAN: -- or by him. And the figures are very

THE WITNESS: Why don't you let me see it and I could probably explain it.

MR. LIMAN: I think we should let you see it.

THE WITNESS: Absolutely.

MR. LIMAN: But what I am suggesting is that you have given us this document now. We let all the accountants look at it and at a continuing session of this deposition we can go over it. But in the meantime, for it to be most helpful, we request the information, the notes and other information that you have from which you prepared this.

MR. GREEN: We will consider it. But we're always the givers and we're, you know, we're never the receivers. And the point -- I mean, we've given --

MR. LIMAN: I don't think this is just consider it -MR. NIELDS: Let's not quarrel over it. We regard it as being covered by the subpoenas that we've already served, and that's the position that we take, and I think it, frankly, is in everyone's interest. If you relied on numbers that support this information to provide it, it will only help you.

UNCLASSIFIED

But in any event, it seems appropriate for you to do it and we also take the position that the law requires it.

MR. GREEN: Well, here's what we've already turned over pursuant to the law for our third exhibit, which is a collection of documents which you have, which refer to the loan received from STT -- correction, from CSF to SETGI, which Richard Second testified to his averments under oath were that he always believed that the monies that he was receiving from STTGI SETGI were loans. There apparently has been some conflicting testimony. But among the documents, for instance, is a note dated 1/7/85 from Zucker to Second in Zucker's handwriting.

"Richard: Loan STTGI requested from Compagnie de Services Fiduciares ST."

And assorted other documents which refer to these loan transactions, including signed loan agreements which you have. You have these documents. Of course, they're never around when we need them, but -- which I think demonstrate the good faith belief on the part of Richard Second, including signed notes. We don't have them all because we can't get them all. But what we've got we've given you before and we give them to you again because they were made from my copies that were retained. And they're assorted documents about the loan

Let's mark this sheaf of documents that Mr. Green has just described RVS-3 and I'll put them in front of you, Mr. It's * several documents marked collectively RVS-3. Are those the documents that your lawyer just referred to that relate to and support your notion and your testimony, and your belief, that the monies that went to STTGI from Switzerland were loans? 12 THE WITNESS: Right. MR. GREEN:

MR. NIELDS: Well, I take it you understand, Mr. Secord, that the testimony of Hakim was not that there had never been any loans from CSF. You testified that there had. But that the loans had been paid back, not by STTGI, but by the Enterprise.

THE WITNESS: Well, if Hakim paid back loans, it was without my knowledge. And I'm simply submitting these things to you for the record because it seems to me like nobody had referred to them before.

MR. NIELDS: Just so the record is clear, the reason nobody referred to them before is that Hakim confirmed to them. He testified that there was a line of credit and that there were loans from CSF to STTGI and that the Enterprise had paid CSF back, so that the net effect was that the Enterprise --

THE WITNESS: That's correct.

We're finished.

MR. LIMAN: Are there any papers reflecting the loans in which you describe as loans from either Hakim to you or STTGI to you?

MR. SABA: John, I brought a copy.

MR. NIELDS: Oh, you did. Okay, let's mark that Let's mark it RVS Exhibit No. 4.

(Exhibit No. RVS-4 was marked

for identification.)

MR. NIELDS: Let's go off the record.

(Discussion off the record.)

MR. NIELDS: Back on the record.

Mr. Secord, I'm putting in front of you a piece of paper which has been marked RVS No. 4. It is a page from the investment management account records of CSF, or so it has been described to us, relating to the correct Assets Investment Management account. And as we said when we were off the record, if you and your lawyer feel that you are unable to respond to my question about it at this time and could do so if you had further time to study and consult, we will give you that further time.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

MR. NIELDS: The question is: There is a deposit into the account of $522,000 and change on July 24th, 1985. We have been unable to track that money as having come out of the bank accounts which you and Mr. Hakim have described as Enterprise bank accounts.

And our question is: Where did that money come from?

THE WITNESS: I don't know.

MR. GREEN: Wait a minute, I know.

THE WITNESS: You do?

MR. GREEN: Yeah.

THE WITNESS: Excuse us.

(Witness conferred with his counsel.)

MR. NIELDS: Are we on the record now?

MR. GREEN: Yes, say it on the record.

MR. NIELDS: Yeah, I guess I have been advised by our accountants and my co-counsel, Mr. Liman, in your absence, that my statement that we couldn't account for it is not entirely accurate. We have tracked, apparently tracked, that money is coming out of the AUDIFI account.

MR. GREEN: What account? I never heard of that.

Well, let us see that if we can. I mean, otherwise, we're just shooting in the dark and that's not right.

The information that we have is that it went into a Defex account in Switzerland, that it then went from there to the AUDIFI account, and from there --

MR. GREEN: AUDIFI account?

MR. NIELDS: Yeah. -- and from there to the Goral

THE WITNESS: I never heard of AUDIFI account before.

MR. NIELDS: A-U-D-I-F-I.

I guess it is, isn't it?

MR. GREEN: Did it travel through those accounts as 522,820?

THE WITNESS: Or in two increments as it showed here.

MR. NIELDS: One, I believe.

Let me rephrase the question, restate it. Do you wish to respond with an explanation of what that money is at this time or do you wish time and consultation?

THE WITNESS: I'd like to have further time and I'd also like to have the opportunity to discuss it with one of your accountants.

FURTHER EXAMINATION ON BEHALF OF THE HOUSE SELECT COMMITTEE BY MR. NIELDS:

Mr. Secord, did there -- are you aware of any money from the Enterprise which went to the benefit of Mr. North?

Α No.

Was there ever any discussion that you are aware of of any money from the Enterprise going to Mr. North?

. In a sense, yes.

Would you describe it? Tell us first who the discussion was with.

Hakim discussed with me on a couple of occasions the Tehran mission in May of '86 that near that he was concerned about Oliver North's family because he had heard Oliver North say that he couldn't send his kids to school, this was a dangerous mission. He was concerned that he wouldn't be covered or his family wouldn't be covered, more properly speaking.

Albert knew that starting in February -- as my handwritten notes that you have show -- that I had set up a requirement for a $200,000 insurance fund. This was to cover the air crews essentially that were about to begin operations in Central America.

Initially, I think Albert and I had a discussion about setting aside as much as $500,000. It's not really IININI ACCIPIEN setting it aside, it's just simply fencing it and making sure that we didn't go below that level in expenditures, so that we'd always be able to pay at least a certain amount. I didn't feel that we could set aside 500 -- or fence $500,000 at that time. Although as I recall telling him, you know, who knows, we might have to pay $500,000 if we had a real tragedy, who knows.

And Albert mentioned the need for insurance coverage for Ollie North. I told him that we couldn't set up an insurance coverage for Ollie North but that he could obviously be covered in case of tragedy by our arroads -- pr at least I assumed already fenced amount.

You'll notice in my handwritten notes I carry it forward month to month to month.

The only other time that I recall any discussions about possible financial assistance to Oliver North or his family took place last year -- and I can't tell you when because I simply don't remember. I didn't regard it as an important event.

At sometime last year -- I think it was in the spring of the year, but I can't tell you whether it was before the May mission or after -- Hakim said to me that I should say to North that there is an opportunity upcoming because Zucker was coming to the States for other business, to talk to Mr. Zucker, he was a good financial man. He could perhaps give them some

I man. He could perhaps

24 25 North said no, but maybe his wife would talk to Mr. Zucker. I forgot about it. Time went by. Hakim was not here in town, he was elsewhere. He called me one day and said that Zucker was going to be in Philadelphia, recalled our earlier discussions; would I ask North if his wife Betsy still wanted to consult with him -- him, Zucker. I said all right. So I don't think I saw North. I think I called him on the telephone and asked him. He said, well, okay, where, when? Hakim had given me the information -- somewhere in Phiadelphia, I don't remember where. And I promptly forgot about the matter. Sometime later, some days later, some weeks later, I don't recall, North told me it was a big waste of time and a train ticket. He said his wife assistance, look at their situation and make recommendations, and so on. I said that's a bad idea, though he insisted that I

I didn't hear anything more about it again thereafter.

- Q Is that it?
- A Yes, sir.
- Q You testified, as I understand it, that Hakim suggested that Zucker give some kind of financial counseling to the Norths.

I testified that?

was more confused than she had been before the event.

Q Just now. UNGLASSIFIED

Did I understand your testimony correctly?

A I don't think I said that. If I did, I misspoke. Bu what I said was that Hakim indicated to me that Zucker was very very bright in these areas, that he might be of help to them in looking at their particular situation -- it was awful, they couldn't even put their children through college. And, oh, by the way, I can add to my earlier testimony. I remember distinctly saying to Albert -- I've said to Albert more than once, you can't deal with these people like Iranians, you know, these are American officials. You can get us in trouble by trying to give gifts to North, for instance. He said, oh, he knew that, he knew he couldn't give any gifts, he knew that.

So that's all there is to say about it.

- Q What was -- what I don't understand is what was the gift that Hakim --
 - A There was never any gift --
 - Q -- was describing?

A There was never any gift specifically mentioned to me -- that I cut him off before he could even talk about a gift because I was thinking what good would it do for someone who had a bad financial situation to talk to a counsellor. I mean, he didn't have any money to invest. You have to have money to -- I think I said at the time, you can't make chicken soup out of chicken feathers, or some such description. And he said, no, no, Zucker is good at this sort of thing. You should talk to Ollie about it. He did not, as far as I know, talk to

28

Ollie about it himself. He asked me to mention it to Ollie.

And North said, well, you know, okay.

The feedback I got from North was as I just stated.

Q Was it your understanding that when this issue was first raised with you about Mr. Hakim that he wanted Mr. Zucker to give financial counseling to the Norths or that he wanted to give them a gift?

A It was unclear to me, and I wanted to put some clarity to it, which was to say that, you know, you can't give qifts to these U.S. officials.

So you said that to him at that time?

A I've said it to him more than once. And my recollection is I said to him at that time is, well, but you know, it was a long time ago, my memory is a bit fuzzy on that. I didn't consider it to be an important event.

- Q So when you told him -- you testified a minute ago that you told him it was a bad idea. You were, I take it, referring to the possibility that he was talking about a gift.
 - A Indeed.
- Q So that you understood his proposal at that time to contemplate a gift?
 - A No, I didn't say that. I didn't say that at all.
 - Q You understood that that might be in his mind?
 - A Possibly.
 - why? UNCLASSIFIED

 A This is the Iranian culture. And although Albert's an American citizen, he's basically brought up in the Iranian culture and he probably didn't see anything wrong with that kind of an approach and I wanted to make sure that he understood.

Q Now, what was his response when you told him it was a bad idea?

A Oh, he knew -- he knew that -- he said he knew you couldn't give gifts to these people, but he thought it would be a good idea for Zucker to talk to them, and I said all right.

Q What did you say to him when he said he thought it would be a good idea for Zucker to talk to them?

A Honestly, I don't recall exactly what I said, but I did ask North if he was interested in he or his wife talking to Zucker, and he finally arranged for his wife to go see Zucker.

Q Did Hakim tell you in words or substance that maybe Zucker could find a proper way to get some money to the Norths?

A I don't think he did say that. I think he said that he wanted Zucker to go over their finances with North, or in this case Betsy, as it turned out to be, and see what he could say or do. I didn't pay a lot of attention to it. I've told you all I know about it.

Q When you -- when he called you and told you that Zucker was going to Philadelphia, did he tell you that he had given Zucker the Norths' telephone number?

A No, I don't think he ever did. Or if he did I'm not aware of it.

Q Did he tell you that Zucker was somehow going to make contact with the Norths?

A You mean the home phone number?

Q Yes.

A I'm not even sure he had the home phone number at that time.

Q But my only question is what he told you. Did he tell you that Zucker was going to get in touch with the Norths?

A No.

Q But you talked to the Norths?

A I talked to Ollie North, not to Betsy.

Q Okay, Ollie North.

A Yes.

Q What did you tell Ollie North?

A Only that -- recalled our earlier conversation about meeting with Zucker and that I'd been advised by Albert that he was going to be in Philadelphia on a certain day. I think it was even the next day -- it was very soon. Wasn't much time, and so, you know, did he want to take advantage of this. As he indicated earlier, he did. I think he probably said, I'll check, and call me back, something like that. But in any event, whether it was one call or two phone calls, it was all done, as I recall, by phone. And I gave him -- I relayed to him the information that Albert had given me, which was an office

In Philadelphia. And the only specifics I remember the directions -- the only specific I remember is that it was very near the train station so she could take a train up there.

- And did you give her, or him, a number to call?
- I gave him, I think an office address and an office telephone number. And it was, I believe, a business or a law firm, or an accounting firm, or something like that, where Zucker was doing other business.
- Was it Zucker or Hakim that she was going to meet with?
 - А Zucker.
 - And how was the meeting to be arranged?
 - I don't believe Hakim was anywhere near.
- سلامة How as the meeting to be arranged? Were you arranging the meeting, or were you giving her a way of getting in touch with Mr. Zucker?
- That's right, I was giving her a way of getting in touch with Zucker. And he had -- I simply conveyed the information that was given to me.

I think it was like he was going to be there all day, or here's the address and telephone number, and over to you.

All right, going back to your earlier conversation with North, what did you say to him about the purpose for getting together with Zucker?

I think I said to him as accurately as I could what Albert had said to me, which was that Zucker was going to be in the United States. Hakim felt that Zucker could give them some guidance, some advice, could help them with their financial situation. And I recall him particularly talking about the requirement to put some -- put a child in college.

And you mentioned putting a child in college to North during this first telephone conversation?

I believe so, but I'm not positive. I have a vague memory of that subject being intertwined in there somehow.

Well, that's about it. I asked him if he would -- I was relaying Albert's request. And at some point, maybe then or later, I don't recall, he said, no, he wouldn't be able to do that but his wife Betsy would be interested in doing it at some point.

THE WITNESS: I was not aware that that set-aside was entered into his system until recently.

BY MR. NIELDS:

- But you did discuss either fencing or setting aside an amount of $200,000 in connection with the trip to Tehran?
- No, in connection with risk insurance -- and this was just a notional thing, that I started worrying about in February of '86.
 - Well, maybe I misunderstood --
 - And you'll see it in my handwritten notes.
- Maybe I misunderstood you, but I thought you said that you were worried about the entire mission.
 - I was.
- And that was referring to the mission that went to 0 Tehran.
 - Yes, sir; yes, sir, I was worried about it.
- And did the set-aside have anything to do with your -or the discussions about the set aside have anything to do with your worry?
- Yes, I told Albert that we've got $200,000 set aside, UNCLASSIFIED and let's see what happens.

UNCLASSIFIFD 0 And you told him that in connection with the Tehran trip? I told him that in connection with -- not only with Oliver North but the others as well. I just need an answer to my question. Did you say that in reference to the trip to Tehran? In connection with the Tehran trip, yes. And does that mean that the $200,000 was set aside for 9 pilots, McFarlane, North and Teicher, among others? 10 Not specifically, it was just a general comment that this is an insurance fund that we should have set up here, as 12 I'd mentioned to him months before, and it seems to me this is the best we can do. 14 And did that include the members of the Tehran mission 15 and specifically did it include North? 16 Well, I had no specific thought like that. I mean, I 17 didn't sit there and say, okay, Secord, we've got $200,000, 18 we're going to stretch it over eight people or something. That' 19 not the point. The point is that my rejoinder to Albert, as I 20 remember, it was just as I said: We've got a $200,000 insurance 21 fund, that's about the best we can do. 22 That was a rejoinder to a remark that he made to you? - Never discussed that with him?
- As far as I know, there isn't any.

Could I make another point? Mr. Nields, could I make another point?

Yes, you may.

I did not know that he actually set up an account for this. In fact, I recall explaining to him the Pentagon term "fencing," which is simply to draw a line in your internal bookkeeping, or an envelope around a certain amount of money so that you don't go through it.

MR. LIMAN: So you don't spend it?

THE WITNESS: So you don't spend it. So you don't -so you don't forget and spend it.

MR. LIMAN: As I understand, your testimony was that whatever you spent, there should be $200,000 there to take care of death benefits originally to pilots?

MR. LIMAN: And, therefore, what you were saying in answer to the question about interest was that since it wasn't a segregated fund it wouldn't be earning interest?

THE WITNESS: It never occurred to me that there would be such a thing.

MR. LIMAN: You were just looking at it as a flat sum of $200,000 to be available for death benefits?

THE WITNESS: Immediately available, you know, like im cash, so they could be paid. And in fact, I ordered payments out of this $200,000 in October of -- after the Hasenfus shootdown. I ordered payments of $120,000 immediately -- 60 to each of the families. And I was informed that those payments were being made and I was amazed to find that they had not been made

EXAMINATION ON BEHALF OF THE SENATE SELECT COMMITTEE

BY MR. LIMAN:

- You referred, Mr. Secord, to the fact that North had expressed concern that he did not have the funds to educate a child, or his children; do you recall that?
 - Yes, sir.
- Do you ever recall him expressing that concern in front of Albert Hakim?
 - Yes.
 - When do you recall him expressing that?
- Well, I'm sorry, I can't tell you. But it was probably after the Frankfurt meeting in February of '86 because I don't recall Albert really spending much time with -- to tell you -- to tell the truth, I can't remember him ever meeting with North before then. He may have, but I don't recall.
- Well, Hakim testified, for what it's worth, that his first meeting with North was in February of 1986 at the Frankfurt meeting.
- Okay, good. Well, that's consistent with what I'm saying.
- Now, do you recall him expressing -- North expressing, the concern about his children at the Frankfurt meeting?

1	A No, I think it was in some informal meeting after
2	that.
3	Q Do you recall whether there was any meeting that
4	Hakim attended with North between Frankfurt and the time that
5	North left the United States for the Tehran mission?
6	A Yes, I believe that Hakim met with him once or twice
7	in the EOB during that period.
8	Q In that period, do you recall the occasions for
9	those meetings?
10	A No, I don't. My memory's vague on it, but I recall
11	that their computer had a problem accepting Hakim's name for
12	clearance.
13	Q Do you recall whether those meetings related to the

15	A No, I think they related to I think they related

- And Oliver North is basically a private man, you'd agree with that, wouldn't you?
 - I don't know what you mean by that.
- Well, is he a man who would walk around talking about the fact that he couldn't afford to educate his children?
 - Well, he would tell me that.
 - But you were a friend of his by that --
 - By that time I was, yes.
 - And you had a closer relationship than --
 - -- than Hakim.

What occasioned Colonel North to tell Hakim that he couldn't afford to send his --

- I don't know, I --
- -- child to school?
- And I don't know if he told Hakim or if he told me and Hakim overheard it. I just don't know.
- Well, had he told you that before he said so in the Q presence of Hakim?
 - I don't remember. Possibly, but I don't remember.

4	A	That was my belief.

7	A	Yeah, I believe so, although I think one of his
8	branches	of the family had some money.
9	Q	Did Hakim did Zucker withdraw that.
10		Hakim, as I understand your testimony, said that
11	Zucker wa	s a financial wizard. Am I correct?
12	A	Yes, more than once.
13	Q	Had Zucker ever made any money for you?
14	A	No.
15	Q	And is it fair to say that in this period that we as

18	A	Hardly.

21	A	You are correct.

Yes, he did.

A No, I'd met Zucker from time to time in Geneva. But I didn't consider that he'd help me.

 - A No, he never did, not to my recollection.
 - Q When you --
 - A If he did, I would have vetoed it instantly.
 - Q As being improper?
 - A Yes, sir.
- Q So that you understood a payment to North, whether it was a loan or a gift, would not have been appropriate?
 - A It would be very inappropriate.
- Q Now, as I understand your testimony, the $200,000 pilots death benefit fund was a fund that you thought could become available for death benefits for Teicher, McFarlane, and North if something happened to them on that trip?
- A I don't know what the state of my mind was at that time but I think I just gave Albert an easy answer and said, look, we've got $200,000 set out there and that's it.
 - Q Did Hakim --
- A Obviously, you couldn't set a -- you couldn't have a small $200,000 fund set aside to cover such a large delegation.

 That would be ludicrous. INCLASSIFIED

	Q Do you think that McFarlane, to take one person,

North is a person who really gave no impression of caring about money for himself. Am I correct?

- A I would agree with you.
- Q His wife meets with Zucker and North tells you that it was a wasted train ticket. Correct?
 - A That she was more confused than ever.
- Q First, if he saw it as a waste of Atrain ticket, that suggests to me that he expected something to come out of this trip.
- A Well, you can speculate that. I don't know if he thought something would or wouldn't. I stopped looking for the pot at the end of the rainbow a while back myself. I already told you what my feeling was at the time.
- Q But was this term which you have used several times, a wasted train ticket -- you used it in the newspaper and --
 - A Right.

I didn't think 17 much of it. 18 Did you ever discuss with Colonel North the fact that 19 a provision had been made in the event both you and Hakim died? 20 A No. And did you ever ask Hakim to see these wills? 22 No, I never did. He told me where they were. How many wills did he tell you there were? He told me that there was -- he told me, I believe there was one will which he had a copy of with Zucker and a NIELDS: Let's just make sure we're getting this 19 right. 20 Are you saying that you were not aware of any plans 21 or contemplated plan on the part of Mr. Hakim to pay money out 22 of the enterprise to Iranians?

MR. LIMAN: And he never told you who the Iranians were he had incurred the obligations to? That's what you said a moment ago.

As I understood your testimony, you said that when Hakim first brought this up you made the point to him that he could not make a gift to United States officials; is that correct?

- I've mentioned that to Albert more than once. Α
- But that wasn't my question. My question was --
- The answer is yes.
- -- when he brought the subject up you made the point to him?
 - A The answer is yes.
 - Q Okay.

And you said, I think, that you thought at the time that he might be considering making a gift; is that correct?

- The thought crossed my mind. I didn't know that. A
- 20 Okay.

But you made the point to him that you --

- Yes, sir.
- -- thought that that would be improper.

Now, he then asked you at a later point to talk to UNCLASSIFIED North and to tell him tha

Did you give North any reason to believe that Zucker 7 might be acting in a manner designed to give financial help that 8 would some way constitute a gift to him? 9 No, and if I had, I would have seen that as a 10 compromising position, and I wouldn't have condoned it. 11 All right. So it's your testimony that what you 12 represented to North was that Zucker would provide financial 13 advice essentially? 15 Yes, sir. 16 And nothing else? 17 As far as I know. 16 Did North ever ask you, or Hakim, to give any part of the proceeds of what you've referred to as the enterprise, to 19 20 him or to his family? 21 Hakim or his family? 22 No.

A Never, not to my knowledge.

Q Now, you told us that North did bring up the subject of his concern about his ability to pay for the education of his children; is that correct?

A He's mentioned that to me a number of times.

Q And did he also mention it to Hakim?

A I believe he did in my presence.

Q Okay.

And can you tell us, so that the record is clear on this point, in what context those types of remarks were made?

A Well, they were very, very informal, and just chatting about the situation and I can't -- I can't reconstruct for you the context in which it came up. It was very, very informal.

Q Did he ever give you in that kind of discussion any reason to believe that he was seeking financial assistance?

A No, no. He talked to me about -- we both talked about our family situations before.

Q Can you tell us, to your best knowledge, when you first learned from Mr. Hakim that he had executed a will that named you as a beneficiary?

A I can give you an impression but I can't give you a precise answer. My impression is that it was after the beginning of the Iranian initiative because there were large sums of money involved, but I'm not sure of that.

Q When you say after the beginning of the Iranian initiative, how do you take that?

A After February of '86. Immediately after is what I'm saying.

Q You think that you first learned that he had done thi sometime immediately after February of 1986?

A Well, I have that feeling but I'm not sure of that. It could have been later, but I'm not sure.

Q Mr. Secord, do you regard it as unusual to be named as the beneficiary of a will that may contain millions of dollars worth of assets?

	to me to be a reasonable managerial step on his part, and I didn't think a lot about it.

You have told us that you've never seen a text of these wills.

Do you have any idea how much money is involved in the wills?

I believed it was all the money in Hakim's control, whatever that amounted to.

If I told you that it was millions of dollars, would that sound right to you?

I didn't know it was quantified, but my belief was that that it was whatever money was in the enterprise.

Had you and Mr. Hakim ever discussed the desirability of his taking this step before he told you that it had happened?

That's a good question. I don't remember. I can't remember but I wouldn't be surprised if we discussed it in advance.

MR. LIMAN: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Are we still on the same question?

THE WITNESS: I don't recall him specifically talking about her attitude toward his attitude toward money, but I do recall him discussing her attitude toward his continued line of work and the deleterious effect it was having on the --

72

Q Just on this subject, when he indicated that there were some family complaints over his line of work, did they cover not only hours but also the fact that he was working on a government salary and could have been making more, and his friends, and relatives, and cousins, and so on, were out there in private industry making a lot more for their families?

A No, I think -- it was probably in that context but I can't remember it specifically.

- When you said that you ordered death benefits to be paid to the estates of the two Americans on a Hasenfus plane, to whom did you give those directions?

I gave detail -- it took perhaps 10 days or two weeks to get the detailed information. And as I recall it, the detailed information was that there were two daughters of Mr. Cooper and a wife of the copilot. And once I got their locations and all this, I gave that information in detail to Mr. Hakim and asked him to get Mr. Zucker on it immediately, to get whether, you know, however they wanted to do it -- send a check to a bank, to have, you know, somebody notify them, or whatever -- the most expeditious way to get these monies to

THE WITNESS: That's where I'm a little bit at variance with what the record shows, and I'm sorry for that.

But I'll tell you what my recollection is.

My recollection is that sometime in the summer of '86 that he told me to expect $3 million from an unknown -- unknown -- unnamed source. And that he asked me about it

Q Best recollection: When did he start saying did it hit?

A ' August or September.

Q Did -- what did he tell you you were to do with the money, if anything?

A Well, first he didn't tell me anything, it was just another input, which I notified Hakim of.

MR. LIMAN: increment of donation --

THE WITNESS: Yeah, just like the -- remember I told you about the input except it was 10 times bigger. And I mentioned -- in both cass, I mentioned -- I believe I told Hakim, both with the 3, million increment and then finally the 10 million increment, the money did not ever arrive, as we all now know. But he started pressing me, and after awhile he told me Elliott Abrams -- I think I told you this earlier -- was pressing him as to whether it was there. And then at some point along the way, because I kept assuring him we had everybody looking for this, and you can't lose $10 million, you know. Not if it comes to the right place. I mean, not a reputable bank like Credit Suisse. And so I finally, I said, look, you've got to give me some information with which to trace it. If you're not capable of tracing it from your side, I'll ask Zucker and Credit Suisse to, and, Albert, and we'll try to run it down. Who did it come from? And he said, well, Elliott had been this, this, this, and he also along the way, probably about the same time he told me it was Brunei, he said, look, this is just a parking place. You've got to -- you know, you can't spend this money. You've got to give this money in effect over to the State Department. But that was much later.

80

recalled more discussions with Ollie about this matter. It was a change. Q So that at the time that you testified that because money was fungible there would not have been a diversion if this money had arrived -- you had not recalled the instructions from North to turn it over to the State Department? `

That's correct. I'm sorry that my memory's imperfect. A But, incidentally, when I said that, I recognize there was an academic point as well because the so-called diversion was earlier in the time frame.

Yeah, because the money hadn't arrived from Brunei anyway.

Correct.

 it's two hours after he met with Savid Rimche and an hour

Does that refresh your memory in any way? Do you recall discussing with Mr. North his meeting with Mr. Kimche?

A That's right.

Q Now, therefore, my question is, what was the reason that the million dollars was put into the Lake Resources account on the 20th of November?

A Well, I believe it was put in later than that. I can't -- I can't explain it any other way because I do not recall any discussion with Oliver North, and subsequent to our last discussion on this point, I've thought about it a lot, and I don't recall discussing with Ollie just before I left the subject of a million dollars, I really don't. It's, of course in the realm of possibility that we did talk about it but I'm afraid you're going to have to get that out of him. I just -- I have no recollection of any discussion on that point with hir And my recollection is that the subject of my enterprise paying for what turned out to be the CIA proprietary airplanes didn't even arise for several days after I got there.

MR. LIMAN: And do I understand that the first time that you heard about the million dollars was when you discussed it with the Israelis?

EXAMINATION ON BEHALF OF THE SENATE SELECT COMMITTEE

BY MR. LIMAN:

And what was said on that subject?

My recollection is that it was discussed at, you know, a new plan would have to be put into effect, which was to lift directly out of Israel. Schwimmer's plan to use chartered airplanes out of Europe had fallen through. I hadn't been able to help Schwimmer, although I'd made a few phone calls. And so it was determined that it would take approximately five 707 loads because Schwimmer at that time thought he could get a certain number of missiles on board. It later turned out to be a less number -- I think 18 was the max. And so it would cost about a million bucks to make that lift.

I want -- so we can understand something, John.

So your recollection is that the million dollars was to be used for the transportation of the Hawks to Iran. how that number was arrived at?

Definitely, yes.

One of them, I think, had an American registration number. 15 Just before you give me too much detail on this, was the original -- what was supposed to do originally? Where were they supposed to take the missiles? 17 18 Take them to Tel Aviv, pick up, on-load as many missiles as they could -- this turned out to be 18 in the end -20 and proceed to Tehran. 21 Was there a time when they were supposed to pick up the missiles in Israel and bring them to 23 A I don't remember that. Q And that was for $127,000 a flight?

Q How do you explain the discrepancy between the million and five times 127?

I don't remember it. It's possible, but we were Α looking at some very quick --

You understand the problem for us. The problem is, it doesn't match either in time or amount the million dollars and, therefore, leads to the inference that the million dollars was for some other purpose.

I understand your problem. And I don't remember the $60,000 thing. That was probably a contingency that was being exercised at the time since the jumbo had to be turned backover to El Al.

And even when you go to the later amount --

And I remember trying to work a deal with Α I do remember that. But I thought that this is all at the same time as the jumbo was still available. You know, it's all very mushy in my mind. It was a very frantic time, those days, and we didn't sleep.

MR. MR. LIMAN: I think that what Mr. Green is asking is whether or not we have a document that contradicts Mr. Secord's testimony on this that we're withholding.

MR. GREEN: No. --

MR. NIELDS: To answer his question, the answer is our documents reflect that basic Hawks were shipped and that the Iranians were anger because they were basic Hawks and they wanted I-Hawks.

THE WITNESS: I believe that's incorrect.

MR. NIELDS: And you have said, and there is other evidence, that the Iranians had thought that the Hawks they were getting, whatever kind of Hawks they were, would shoot down high-flying airplanes --

THE WITNESS: Right.

MR. NIELDS: -- and were disappointed because they wouldn't.

That explanation, I will say for the record, is under serious question at this point in time. It does not square with your own testimony. I'm not attacking your credibility. I'm just, in terms of explaining what happened, it's supported by what you say the Israelis told you and contradicted by what Ghorbanifar did later, which is ask for more Hawks. And it's also contradicted by North's prof message of December the 4th in which he says the Iranianis are asking for more Hawks, and he plans to ship them 50. And it's contradicted by a North memo which says that the Iranians were angry because they got the basic Hawks when they had expected Improved Hawks.

THE WITNESS: What date was that?

MR. NIELDS: Declarater 9th. And --

THE WITNESS: It's wrong.

MR. NIELDS: And there is serious question, based on the information we have, whether it was the Iranians --

THE WITNESS: I can only tell you what I believe --

MR. NIELDS: I do want to put this on the record, whether it was the Iranians --

UNULTWIN

THE WITNESS: That's interesting.

MR. NIELDS: -- who called off the Hawk shipments or whether it was done at our side. And that is not only -not only is there serious evidentiary question whether that fact happened. In other words, whether it was the Iranians who called it off rather than us. But it is a very important question to our investigation.

THE WITNESS: No question about that. But I told you exactly --

MR. NIELDS: No question about which?

THE WITNESS: That it's important.

MR. NIELDS: Yes.

THE WITNESS: But I believe that the recital you just ran through with respect to basic Hawks is fundamentally incorrect. And I believe I'll be proved to be right in the end. It's easy to prove.

MR. NIELDS: Do you know when --

How is it easy to prove?

THE WITNESS: Ask the Israelis.

MR. NIELDS: Do you know when the first I-Hawk was manufactured?

THE WITNESS: Oh my God, now you're asking me for something that goes way back.

MR. NIELDS: Let me put it to you this way, if the Hawks that --

THE WITNESS: Probably '74, maybe?

MR. NIELDS: So if the Hawks that were shipped --

THE WITNESS: They would be. In '75, clearly they would be I-Hawks.

MR. NIELDS: But there are several --

THE WITNESS: You're talking about date of manufacture?

MR. NIELDS: Yes.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, okay.

MR. NIELDS: But I take it there are several -there isn't just one improvement on the Hawk, but several versions have been improved on.

THE WITNESS: No, but -- after, immediately the first I-Hawks got in the field they came out with what they called PIP-I, P-I-P I, Product Improvement Program I. And then they came out with PIP-II.

MR. NIELDS: Is that Product Improvement Program a package?

THE WITNESS: I don't know, package maybe. But these are just small sustainability, maintainability improvements.

MR. LIMAN: Finished? UNCLASSIFIED

MR. NIELDS: I have one more question.

I think he's in the middle of an answer but I --

THE WITNESS: No, I've finished.

MR. NIELDS: Okay.

My last question is whether you will consent or obtain -- either consent to the provision or yourself obtain or produce to the committee records in the possession of CSF or Zucker that relate to any account that may be maintained there in your name?

MR. LIMAN: I think he gave us a waiver of that which would call for that one. Take a look at the waiver.

MR. GREEN: Whatever the waiver does, the waiver does. But I'll tell you what we're doing is independently without going into it, I'm trying to get those records.

MR. NIELDS: And you have no objection to their production?

MR. GREEN: Well, it depends on how we handle it.

I don't think we have any objection and we have made a request -- I'm not going into further detail -- just say that I am trying to get any documentary corroboration of an account in Richard V. Secord's name.

MR. LIMAN: Mr. Green --

MR. GREEN: Yes. UNGLASSIFIED

MR. LIMAN: -- would you consent to modifying the directive so that where it says bank or trust company, you would include fiduciary and where it refers to Credit Suisse by name it would include CSF? That would make this perfectly clear.

MR. GREEN: We've just got to go back to square one.

I am trying to get -- I probably have a better chance in getting the records, you know, that you want, than even you do. And I am making a diligent effort to get the records.

MR. LIMAN: I would request that you consider a modification of this language. I think that's in General Secord's --

MR. GREEN: Why don't you send me a letter -MR. LIMAN: I will redraft this to change that language and show you what the language would be.

MR. GREEN: All right.

MR. LIMAN: Thank you.

MR. NIELDS: Mr. Secord, I thank you for coming in.
I apologize that it took considerably longer than I originally anticipated.

THE WITNESS: I would like to address then --

MR. GREEN: In summary fashion or --

THE WITNESS: No, I'd like to address it off the record.

MR. NIELDS: Okay. Off the record.

(Whereupon, at 8:35 p.m., the deposition was adjourned.)

The Honorable Daniel K. Inouye
Chairman, United States Senate Select Committee on Secret Military Assistance to Iran and the Nicaraguan Opposition
901 Hart Senate Office Building
Washington, DC 20510

Dear Senator Inouye:

During my testimony before the Committee, I advised that I would consider executing the consent directive form pertaining to foreign bank accounts in connection with which I may have signature authority. My inclination to do so stems from the public pressure which has been exerted on me to sign the directive. It is apparent that this pressure will not cease unless and until I deliver the document. After further consultation with counsel, I have concluded that I have no alternative but to sign the consent directive; and an executed copy is enclosed herewith.

Sincerely yours,

Richard V. secord

THE WITNESS: Yeah, I think as a matter of principle these kinds of directives are probably unconstitutional, that I feel the pressure on me personally and I am no longer going to stand on principle.

MR. LIMAN: Well, it was principle that led you not to sign it, I take it, originally?

THE WITNESS: It was the advice of counsel.

MR. LIMAN: But you are signing this without any reservation whatsoever; am I correct?

THE WITNESS: I have reservations, as I've indicated in the cover letter, but I've signed it.

MR. LIMAN: Well, if you are asked by a Swiss authority whether this has been signed voluntarily, without any compulsion, and without any reservation on your part, are you able to say that the answer to that is yes?

(The witness witness conferred with counsel.)

THE WITNESS: Okay, well, to be perfect honest about it, candid, it is a mixed bag. I have been held up to ridicule for not having signed it, so I decided to sign it. And to be

But if a Swiss authority asks me did I sign it willfully, I'll say yes, I signed it willfully.

MR. NIELDS: Willingly?

THE WITNESS: Better word "willingly," okay. Willingly.

MR. NIELDS: Mr. Secord --

Do you have anything else you want to put in the record now, Mr. Green?

MR. GREEN: Yeah, we do. We want to -- ordinarily in a deposition both sides are permitted to interrogate. I don't know if that's necessary here, but we have a number of points that we want to address in this deposition as adjoinders to what we feel are erroneous implications and information in the record, because we want to use this opportunity to try to set the record straight on as many matters as we can.

In connection with that we have prepared an arms sales Arms Sales Profit Analysis of the various sales. Of course, Mr. Second has a lot to say about these transactions and the way some of the records were used with a number of the witnesses; records which, of course, albeit alleged to be Mr.
